Contributors

Sarah Cook is the Director of the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) Innocenti Research Centre and was formerly Director of the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) from 2009 to 2015. She was a Fellow at the Institute of Development Studies (IDS), UK (1996–2009) and has also worked for the Ford Foundation in China. She has undertaken extensive research on social and economic transformations in China, on social protection, labour markets and gender. Her publications include Social Protection as Development Policy – Asian Perspectives, Routledge, 2010 (edited with Naila Kabeer); ‘Harsh Choices: Chinese Women’s Paid Work and Unpaid Care Responsibilities under Economic Reform’, Development and Change, 2012 (with Xiao-yuan Dong); and recent papers on social policy in China’s response to crisis.

Espen Dahl is Professor of Health and Social Policy at Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences, Norway. He earned his PhD in sociology at the University of Oslo in 1994. His current research interests are social policy, health inequity, labour markets and work inclusion. At Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences he has served as research director of the interdisciplinary research programme on Care, Health and Welfare, the research group on Health and Social Policy, and of the Centre for Work Inclusion. He serves as an advisor on health inequity on the advisory board of the Directorate of Health. He has authored numerous reports and journal articles. The articles have appeared in journals including Social Science and Medicine, European Sociological Review, Journal of Epidemiology and Community Health, International Journal of Social Welfare and Journal of European Social Policy.

Amy Østertun Geirdal is Professor in Social Work and head of the PhD programme in Social Work and Social Policy at Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences, Norway. She holds a bachelor’s degree in social work from Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences and a master’s degree in health science from the University of Oslo. She has a doctoral degree from the PhD programme. in medicine, University of Oslo. She has worked as a medical social worker and genetic counsellor and has taught in the bachelor programme in social work and the master’s programme in mental health. Her main research interests are mental health and quality of life among persons with rare and/or hereditary diseases and among students, social inequality and health, and the importance of relations in mental health care. Her recent publications in English include ‘Satisfaction with Life in Adults with Marfan Syndrome (MFS): Associations with Health-related Consequences of MFS, Pain, Fatigue and Demographic Factors’, Quality of Life Research, 2016; and ‘Systematic Review of Chronic Pain in Persons with Marfan Syndrome’, Systematic Clinical Genetics, 2015 (both articles with Gry Velvin, Trine Bathen and Sven Rand-Hendriksen).

Anthony Hall is Professor of Social Policy at the London School of Economics, UK. During 2003–2005 he worked for the World Bank in Washington, DC, USA as Senior Social Development Specialist for Latin America. His recent books are: Forests and Climate Change: The Social Dimensions of REDD in Latin America, Edward Elgar Publishing, 2012; Global Impact, Local Action: New Environmental Policy in Latin America, Institute for the Study of the Americas, 2005; Social Policy for Development, Sage Publications, 2004 (with James Midgley); Amazonia at the Crossroads: the Challenge of Sustainable Development, Institute of Latin America Studies, 2000; and Sustaining Amazonia: Grassroots Action for Productive Conservation, Manchester University Press, 1997. He has published a number of papers on the impacts of conditional cash transfers in Brazil, focusing on political dimensions. His latest research concerns Brazil’s programme of South–South development cooperation in the areas of cash transfers and nutritional security since the early 2000s, focusing on relationships with Africa as a strategy of soft foreign policy.

Knut Halvorsen is Professor Emeritus of Social Policy at Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences, Norway. He completed his doctoral dissertation in sociology. He was the first director of the Social Welfare Research Centre at the Institute of Social Work, as well as course director of a master’s programme in International Social Welfare and Health Policy. His main research interests are unemployment, early retirement, marginalization and comparative social policy. He has published several textbooks in social policy and social research methods. Among books published in English is Work, Oil and Welfare, The Norwegian Welfare State, Universitetsforlaget, 2008 (with Steinar Stjernø). Among articles and chapters published in English are: ‘Work
Contributors

James Lee is former Professor and Head of the Department of Applied Social Sciences at the Hong Kong Polytechnic University. He specializes in comparative housing studies and social policy in East Asia. His research focuses largely on housing policy, social policy and social development, with a special interest in institutional arrangements facilitating the attainment of both social and economic objectives. He publishes in international journals such as Housing Studies, Pacific Review, Policy and Politics, Environment and Planning and Economic Geography. He has also published and co-edited a number of books, including Social Policy and Change in East Asia, Lexington Books, 2014 (with James Midgley and Yapeng Zhu); The Crisis of Welfare in East Asia, Lexington Books, 2007 (with K.W. Chan); Housing and Social Change: East West Perspectives, Routledge, 2003 (with Ray Forrest); and Housing, Home Ownership and Social Change in Hong Kong, Ashgate, 1999.

Joe C.B. Leung is Honorary Professor, Department of Social Work and Social Administration, University of Hong Kong, and Visiting Professor, Institute of Social Development and Public Policy, Beijing Normal University, China. His research and publications focus on social welfare reforms both in Hong Kong and in mainland China. Specific research areas include pension reforms, social assistance, care of older people, social development, social work education, community building, human service management, programme evaluation and family services. His most recent book is China’s Social Welfare: The Third Turning Point, Polity Press, 2015 (with Yuebin Xu).

Thomas Lorentzen is a Professor at the Department of Sociology at the University of Bergen, Norway. He works with longitudinal analyses of register data focusing on labour market outcomes and welfare receipt. He also teaches quantitative methods for the social sciences. He is currently involved in several comparative register data-based analyses of the Nordic welfare states.
Social investment and social welfare

James Midgley is Harry and Riva Specht Professor Emeritus and Professor of the Graduate School at the School of Social Welfare, University of California, Berkeley, USA. He has published widely on issues of social development, international social welfare and social policy. Among his most recent books are Poverty, Incomes and Social Protection: International Policy Perspectives, Routledge, 2013 (with Richard Hoefer); Social Protection, Economic Growth and Social Change: Goals, Issues and Trajectories in China, India, Brazil and South Africa, Edward Elgar Publishing, 2013 (co-editor with David Piachaud); Social Policy and Social Change in East Asia, Lexington Books, 2014 (with James Lee and Yapeng Zhu); Social Development: Theory and Practice, Sage, 2014; and Social Welfare for a Global Era: International Perspectives on Policy and Practice, Sage, 2017. He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare and has held honorary professorial appointments at Nihon Fukishi University in Japan, the University of Johannesburg in South Africa, Hong Kong Polytechnic University, and Sun Yat-sen University in China.

Leila Patel is the South African Research Chair in Welfare and Social Development and Director of the Centre for Social Development in Africa at the University of Johannesburg, South Africa. She was previously the Director General for Social Welfare in the Mandela government and played a leading role in the development of South Africa’s welfare policy. Some of her notable publications include her book Restructuring of Social Welfare: Options for South Africa, Ravan Press, 1993; the White Paper for Social Welfare, Department of Welfare, Republic of South Africa, 1997; Social Welfare and Social Development in South Africa, Oxford University Press, 2005; Social Protection in Southern Africa New Opportunities for Social Development (co-editor), Routledge, 2013; and a second edition of Social Welfare and Social Development, Oxford University Press Southern Africa, 2015. She has published widely in the field of social welfare and social development in the African context. Currently she leads a range of social development research projects relating to social protection, gender and care; children and youth development innovations; and developmental social work and the transformation of social welfare services in South Africa. She received the Distinguished Woman in Science (Humanities and the Social Sciences) Award from the Ministry of Science and Technology, Republic of South Africa, in 2013.

Sony Pellissery is Associate Professor and Director of the master’s programme in Public Policy at the National Law School of India University, Bangalore, India. His primary area of interest is to learn how the politics of markets interacts with the politics of welfare state. He aims to understand the nature of the state in the Global South, where the disciplines of social policy and of development studies use their respective lenses to comprehend the predicament of human welfare. He has previously published in the Journal of Social Policy, Social Policy and Administration, Journal of Human Development and International Social Security Review. His recent book is Shame of It: Global Perspectives on Anti-Poverty Policies, Polity Press, 2013 (co-editor, with Erika Gubrium and Ivar Lødemel). He was awarded the India Social Science Research Award by the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) Canada in 2009, and the Ram Reddy Social Scientist Award by the Prof. G. Ram Reddy Memorial Trust in 2015.

Anne Grete Tøge is a PhD candidate in Social Work and Social Policy at Oslo and Akershus University of Applied Sciences, Norway. She holds a bachelor’s degree in social work and a master’s degree in welfare studies from the University of Agder, Norway. She has conducted a number of studies on the health effects of the 2008 economic recession and individual unemployment experience in Europe. She is also engaged in several cluster-randomized trials in Norway, investigating the effects of complex interventions aimed at improving follow up of active labour market programme participants, reducing school drop-outs and reducing intergenerational transmission of poverty. Among articles published in English are ‘Health Effects of Unemployment in Europe (2008–2011): A Longitudinal Analysis of Income and Financial Strain as Mediating Contributors xi

Amy Conley Wright is an Associate Professor of Social Work and Director of the Institute of Open Adoption Studies at the University of Sydney, Australia. She formerly held positions as Senior Lecturer in Social Work and Member of the Early Start Research Institute at the University of Wollongong, Australia and Assistant Professor of Child & Adolescent Development at San Francisco State University, USA. Her publications include peer-reviewed journal articles on the topics of social investment in children, child maltreatment prevention, parent peer support and policy advocacy. This work has been featured in journals including Policy Studies Journal, International Journal of Social Welfare, Journal of Social Services Research and Children and Youth Services Review. She is co-author of Six Steps to Successful Child Advocacy: Changing the World for Children, Sage Publications, 2013 (with Ken Jaffe); and co-editor of Developmental Social Work: Investment Strategies and Professional Practice, Oxford University Press, 2010 (with James Midgley).