Preface

We are immensely grateful to everyone who participated for making this book possible. Thanks to Espen and his colleagues in the Health and Social Policy Research Group at the Oslo and Akershus University College of Applied Sciences, Norway for providing an opportunity for the authors to come together. We are also very grateful for the support provided by the University. Thanks to Amy for working so diligently with our authors to standardize the book’s chapters and for preparing the manuscript for submission to Edward Elgar Publishing. Each of the contributors deserves special thanks for their informative chapters: James Lee for his contribution on housing and social investment in Hong Kong and Singapore, Sony Pellissery for his chapter on the Indian government’s investments in child care and rural employment, Leila Patel for her chapter on social investment and the Child Support Grant in South Africa, Anthony Hall for his account of the investment function of the Brazilian conditional cash transfer programme, Joe Leung and Yuebin Xu for their chapter on pensions and social investment in China, Knut Halvorsen, Amy Østertun Geirdal and Anne Grete Tøge for their critical assessment of child care as social investment in Norway, Steinar Stjernø for his chapter on the potential of social investment policies to promote the integration of immigrants in Europe and Sarah Cook for her analysis of the contribution of the international agencies to promoting social investment worldwide. Of course, the editors also contributed chapters, so thanks to Amy for her chapter on early childhood investments in Australia, Espen and Thomas Lorentzen for the chapter on employment policy in Norway, and Jim for his overview chapter and the chapter on community investment in the United States.

Finally, our thanks go to Emily Mew and Alex Pettifer at Edward Elgar Publishing who enthusiastically supported the idea for the book and to Tori Raven who handled the initial contract discussions. Emily has since provided wonderful support and it has been a joy to work with her, and many thanks to Karissa Venne for her excellent editorial oversight. Madhubanti Bhattacharyya managed the book’s production with great efficiency and Cathrin Vaughn was a proficient and helpful copy-editor. Thanks also to Sue Sharp and her colleagues for marketing the book. We are also grateful to Patricia Kennett and Misa Izuhara for including this book in their series on New Horizons in Social Policy.