Contributors

Ramona Coman is lecturer in Political Science at the Université libre de Bruxelles (ULB). She received her PhD in political science from the Université libre de Bruxelles (2008). In 2008/2009 she was post-doctoral fellow at the Research Institute on Judicial Systems (IRSIG-CNR), in Bologna/Italy. Before her nomination as Director of the Institute for European Studies (ULB) in 2014, she served as Deputy Director of the Centre d’étude de la vie politique (CEVIPOF) and as Vice President of the Department of Political Science of the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences (ULB). Drawing on her PhD, she has published Réformer la justice dans un pays post communiste. Le cas de la Roumanie (Editions de l’Université de Bruxelles, 2009). She recently co-edited Europeanization and European Integration: From Incremental to Structural Change (with T. Kostera and L. Tomini, Palgrave, 2014). She has also published in several peer-reviewed journals, including Journal of Contemporary European Studies, Journal of European Integration, Europe-Asia Studies, Perspective on European Politics and Societies, Revue française de science politique and Politique européenne.

Laure Delcour is the Scientific coordinator of the EU-FP7 research project ‘Exploring Security-Democracy in the Caucasus’ (CASCADE, FMSH). She is also a Visiting Professor at the College of Europe. Her research interests focus on the EU’s influence on domestic change in post-Soviet countries (European Neighbourhood Policy/Eastern Partnership), as well as on region-building projects in the post-Soviet era. Her publications include ‘Spoiler or facilitator of democratization? Russia’s role in Georgia and Ukraine’ (with K. Wolczuk), Democratization, 22 (3), 459–478 (2015); ‘The EU’s unexpected “ideal neighbour”? The perplexing case of Armenia’s Europeanisation’ (with K. Wolczuk), Journal of European Integration, 37 (4), 491–507 (2015); ‘Meandering Europeanisation – EU policy instruments and patterns of convergence in Georgia’, East European Politics, 3, 344–357 (2013); Shaping the Post-Soviet Space? EU Policies and Approaches to Region-Building (Ashgate, 2011).

Thierry Delpeuch is Dr Research Fellow, CNRS, Institute of Political Studies of Grenoble (Research unit PACTE). His publications include
Contributors

Sociologie du droit et de la justice (with Laurence Dumoulin and Claire de Galembert, Armand Colin, 2014); Droit et régulations des activités économiques. Perspectives sociologiques et institutionnalistes (with Christian Bessy and Jérôme Péllisse (eds), LGDJ, 2011); ‘Comprendre la circulation internationale des solutions d’action publique: panorama des policy transfer studies’, Critique Internationale, Avril/Juin, 43, 2009. His areas of research encompass sociology of law, policy analysis, policy transfers, policing and Europeanization.

David P. Dolowitz works at the University of Liverpool in the Department of Politics. His research interests include comparative public and social policy, all aspects of policy transfer and learning, and most recently, the role of cross-border learning (or otherwise) in the development and spread of sustainable urban drainage systems.

Isil Erdinç is PhD candidate in political science, at the University of Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne. She is a member of CESSP, European Center for Sociology and Political Science and CETOBAC, Center for Turkish, Ottoman, Balkan and Central Asian Studies at the School for Advanced Studies in Social Sciences (EHESS) in Paris. Her research interests involve state sociology, social movements, trade unions, and labour in Turkey and Europe. She is preparing a thesis on the relations between politics, trade unions and the state in Turkey during the AKP rule. She is teaching political science, political sociology, comparative politics and constitutional law in several universities in France. Her publications include ‘Alliances in trade unionism in the 2000s in Turkey: Students, legacy of the 1960s and the case of Student Youth Union Genç-Sen’, European Journal of Turkish Studies, 17 (2013).

Magdaléna Hadjiisky is Senior Lecturer in Political Science, in charge of the pedagogic innovation in the executive team of Strasbourg’s Institut d’Etudes Politiques, has a doctorate in Political sociology from the Institut d’Etudes Politiques of Paris (Sciences Po). She teaches European Studies, Comparative Government and Collective Action. Her research deals with post-communist democratic transformations in Central European countries. She has published numerous articles and book chapters in French, English and Czech on Central European politics and on the reform of the post-communist states, and has co-edited a special issue of the review Politix on ‘businessmen in politics’. More recently, her research has focused on the role of international organizations in processes of policy transfer in the European space. After studying the reform of the Czech civil service from inside the country (a study published in English, last accessed 12 January 2017 at http://prisme.u-strasbg.fr/

Céline Mavrot is a research assistant at the Center of Competence for Public Management, University of Bern, Switzerland. She is a PhD candidate in political science, and her dissertation is on the history of French administrative sciences. Her research focuses on the history of political science, as well as on health and addiction policies. She is currently involved in a research project led by the Universities of Bern and Lucerne on comparative smoking prevention policies. Her work has been published in peer-reviewed journals such as Public Administration, Journal of Comparative Policy Analysis and Public Management Review.

Carolina Milhorance is a Research Fellow at the French Agricultural Centre for International Development (CIRAD). She received her PhD in political science from the University of Brasilia (UnB) and the University of Paris Saclay in 2016. Her research focuses on Brazil–Africa and triangular co-operation in the rural sector, on the adoption of international norms and on the role of international organizations in processes of policy transfer. Her PhD findings have been published in international peer-reviewed journals such as Global Governance, Food Policy, Development Policy Review, Latin American Perspectives and Third World Thematics. She is also a member of the BRICS Initiative for Critical Agrarian Studies (BICAS), led by the Institute of Social Studies (ISS).

Leslie A. Pal is Chancellor’s Professor of Public Policy and Administration at the School of Policy and Administration at Carleton University, and Director of the Centre on Governance and Public Management, and is the author, co-author or editor of 28 books, the most recent being Frontiers of Governance: The OECD and Global Public Management Reform (Palgrave Macmillan, 2012), Beyond Policy Analysis: Public Issue Management in Turbulent Times, 5th ed. (Nelson Education, 2014), Policy: From Ideas to Implementation (with Glen Toner and Michael J. Prince, McGill-Quee’s University Press, 2010), and Political Science in Central-East Europe (with Rainer Eisfeld, Barbara Budrich, 2011). He has published over 60 articles and book chapters in a wide variety of areas, including Canadian politics, public policy and administration, information technology, European integration, international human rights, and international public administrative reform. He serves on the editorial boards of The Journal of Comparative Policy Analysis and Policy & Society.

Osmany Porto de Oliveira is Professor of International Relations at the Federal University of São Paulo (UNIFESP). He holds two PhDs in Political Science, from the University of Sorbonne Nouvelle, France, and the University of São Paulo, Brazil. He received his BA in International Relations from the University of Bologna, Italy, and an MA in Sociétés Contemporaines: Europe-Amériques from the University of Sorbonne Nouvelle/IHEAL, France. He won the European Council for Social Research on Latin America’s Best Young Researcher award in 2013. His previous books are International Policy Diffusion and Participatory Budgeting: Ambassadors of Participation, International Institutions and Transnational Networks (Palgrave McMillan, 2016) and Le transfert d’un modèle de démocratie participative: Paradiplomatie entre Porto Alegre et Saint-Denis (Éditions IHEAL, 2010).

Margarita Vassileva is Dr Associate research fellow, Institute of Political Studies of Grenoble Sciences Po Grenoble PACTE. Her publications include ‘Des transferts aux apprentissages: réflexions à partir des nouveaux modes de gestion du développement économique local en Bulgarie’ (with Thierry Delpeuch), Critique internationale, 48, 2010/3, pp. 25–52; ‘Repenser les relations entre transferts et apprentissages en Europe centrale. Les théories de l’européanisation à l’épreuve du changement des politiques de développement local en Bulgarie’ (with Thierry Delpeuch), Revue d’Etudes Comparatives Est-Ouest, 44 (4), 2013, pp. 5–53; ‘Contribution à une sociologie politique des entrepreneurs internationaux de transferts de réformes judiciaires’ (with Thierry Delpeuch), L’année sociologique, 59 (2) 2009. Her areas of research cover policy analysis, media studies, Europeanization and Bulgaria.

Cécile Vigour is a research associate professor at the French National Center for Scientific Research, in Sciences Po Bordeaux, Centre Emile Durkheim (France). She is currently developing research in comparative politics, public policy, socio-legal studies and legislative studies in three main fields: the comparative analysis of judicial lawmaking and reforming processes in Europe; administrative reforms and changes; parliament and representation. Her main publications in English appeared in Comparative Political Studies, Journal of Legislative Studies, International Public policy transfer

Journal of Sociology, Sociologie du travail, Current Sociology (co-editor of a special issue). At present, she is writing a book on judicial reforms in Europe.

Claire Visier, since 2001, is associate professor in political science, at the University of Rennes 1, Department of Law and Political Science. She is a member of the CRAPE, Research Centre on Political Action in Europe (CNRS). Her first field of research was about the relations between France and the Maghreb countries (cooperation policy, non-governmental actors and public action). Then, thanks to a French grant, she spent seven months in Cairo, for a post doctorate, developing her expertise on Euro–Mediterranean relations, through civil society actors and transnational networks. Between 1999 and 2001, she took up an appointment as lecturer on political science in the Department of Administration and Political Sciences, Marmara University, Istanbul/Turkey. She developed several work fields related to the Europeanization of non-governmental actors through their apprehension, involvement and use of Turkey’s EU bid. Coming back to France, she started to work on EU enlargement policy. In 2013, she was appointed at Istanbul Bilgi University for a two-year research project, granted by the European Marie Curie Fellowship program, about EU-funded projects in Turkey.

Christopher Walker is Senior Lecturer and Head of the School of Social Sciences, University of New South Wales, Australia. He has extensive research, teaching and leadership experience in the fields of policy analysis, regulation and compliance. He has held senior management and executive positions in numerous public sector agencies including health, transport and Premier & Cabinet. Most recent research projects have examined the transfer and adaptation of policy and regulatory practices in the Australian trucking sector to various countries such as South Africa and Sweden. He is also active in executive education and researches the teaching and development of policy practitioner skills. His work has been published in peer-reviewed journals such as Policy Studies, Australian Journal of Public Administration and Journal of Higher Education Policy and Management.

Federica Zardo is a post-doctoral research fellow at the Institute for European Integration at the University of Vienna. She has a PhD in Political Science and International Relations from the University of Turin and her research interests involve Euro–Mediterranean relations, EU diplomacy and EU external action. Current research projects are examining the EU Mobility Partnerships as tools for migration management and local dynamics between EU donors and new Tunisian actors. Her recent publications include: ‘What is new in the “borderlands”?’ The influence of EU external policy-making on security in Tunisia and Morocco after the uprisings’ (with Francesco Cavatorta), EUI 2016/02 RSCAS Working Paper; ‘Changing Perceptions of the European Union in the MENA region before and after the Arab uprisings: the case of Tunisia’ (with Rosita Di Peri), in M. Ceretta and B. Curli (eds), Discourses and Counter-discourses on Europe: From the Enlightenment to the EU (Routledge, forthcoming 2017).