

Contributors

Valérie Bérenger is a Professor at the University of Toulon, France. Her research interests include social policies, measurement of poverty and inequalities, assessment of indicators related to human development and gender issues. She has been involved in several scientific projects addressing the methodological issues and policy-oriented applications of multidimensional poverty and pro-poor growth measures.

Satya R. Chakravarty is a Professor of Economics at the Indian Statistical Institute, Kolkata, India. He has published articles in many internationally known journals and edited volumes on welfare issues, cooperative game theory, industrial organization and mathematical finance, and his books have been published by Cambridge University Press, Springer, Anthem Press and Avebury. He is an Associate Editor of Social Choice and Welfare and a member of the Editorial Board of Journal of Economic Inequality. He worked as a consultant to the Asian Development Bank, an external adviser of the World Bank, and also as an adviser of the National Council of Social Policy Evaluation, Mexico. He was awarded the Mahalanobis memorial prize by the Indian Econometric Society in 1994 and is a fellow of the Human Development and Capability Association.

Nachiketa Chattopadhyay is an Associate Professor at the Sampling and Official Statistics Unit of the Indian Statistical Institute, Kolkata, India. He has published articles in many internationally known journals and edited volumes.

Tomoki Fujii is an Associate Professor of Economics at Singapore Management University, Singapore. His main areas of research are development economics and environmental economics, and his papers have appeared in leading journals in these fields. He has also consulted for leading international development agencies, including the World Bank, World Food Programme and Asian Development Bank, and holds a number of editorial appointments with international journals such as Singapore Economic Review.

Carlos Gradín (PhD in Economics, Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona, 1999) is a Professor of Applied Economics at the University of Vigo in Galicia, Spain and a member of the EQUALITAS network of researchers on income distribution. His main research interests are distributive issues such as poverty, inequality, mobility or polarization, as well as gender and ethnic economics. His research has been published in journals such as the Journal of Economic Inequality, Review of Income and Wealth, Review of Household Economics, Journal of Development Studies, Regional Studies, Journal of African Economics, and Industrial Relations, among others.

Lena Hohfeld is an evaluator at DEval, the German Institute for Development Evaluation, Bonn, Germany. A development economist interested in issues of vulnerability to poverty, food security, gender and migration in Southeast Asia, she has work experience as researcher and lecturer at the Institute of Development and Agricultural Economics, Leibniz University of Hanover and as consultant for the World Bank in Myanmar and Thailand. She holds a Diploma and a PhD in economics from the University of Hanover, Germany.

Stephan Klasen is a Professor of Development Economics at the University of Göttingen in Germany. He holds a PhD from Harvard University, USA and has since held positions at the World Bank, King's College, Cambridge, UK and the University of Munich. His research focuses on issues of poverty, inequality and gender in developing countries. He is a member of the United Nations Committee on Development Policy and has been a member of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change for the 5th Assessment Report.

Jacques Silber (PhD, University of Chicago, 1975), Professor Emeritus of Economics at Bar-Ilan University, Israel, a specialist in the measurement of income inequality, poverty and segregation, is the author of more than 100 scientific papers and of several books, among which is the Handbook on Income Inequality Measurement. He was the founding Editor of the Journal of Economic Inequality, is the Editor of the book series Economic Studies in Inequality, Social Exclusion and Well-Being (Springer) and edited several special issues of academic journals. He was President of ECINEQ, the (International) Society for the Study of Economic Inequality, between 2011 and 2013.

Hermann Waibel is a Professor of Agricultural Economics and Director of the Institute of Development and Agricultural Economics, School of Economics and Management, Leibniz University of Hanover, Germany. He has 30 years of experience in research and development in Southeast Asia. Formerly Associate Professor with the Asian Institute of Technology (AIT) in Bangkok he holds a PhD in agricultural economics from the University of Hohenheim, Germany. His current research focus is on vulnerability to poverty and rural development in Asia.

Guanghua Wan is the Director of Research at the Asian Development Bank Institute (ADBI), Tokyo, Japan. Previously, he was Principal Economist and Head of the Poverty/Inequality Group, Asian Development Bank (ADB). Prior to ADB/ADBI, he was a senior economist at the United Nations and taught in a number of universities in Australia and the People's Republic of China. Trained in development economics and econometrics, he is a multi-award-winning scholar on the Chinese economy and an expert on Asia, with an outstanding publication record of more than 100 professional articles and a dozen books including two by Oxford University Press. An honorary professor of over ten top institutions in the People's Republic of China, including Fudan and Zhejiang universities, he is among the top 8 percent of economists globally and top 4 percent in Asia according to the latest ranking of REPEC.

