
Acknowledgements

The editors are grateful to people who have contributed directly to the book. Writing a book like this is a big job which has taken over two years. It involves careful planning, ongoing collaboration, many ‘gentle reminders’, and communication with authors and many others.

We are particularly grateful to Andrew Gibson for his ongoing management of the process.

More generally, the editors are very grateful to the much larger group of people who have helped to shape this book. A book like this is shaped by conversations with thousands of people all around the world over many years. Too many pages would be required to list everyone, and it is impossible to list people who have provided anonymous insights or confidential advice.

The editors are grateful to Edward Elgar Publishing for commissioning and working with them to produce this book.

Finally, the editors are very grateful to their families for helping them produce this book: Sara Bice, Momo Bice, Annabel Coates; Eric, Ila and Lisa of the Hazelkorn-Byrne family; and Judy Ouimet.

