Clearly, a Handbook like this cannot come about without the help of many people. First and foremost, we are greatly indebted to the authors who contributed to this book. Despite their being among the world's leading retailing academics with many demands on their side, they were willing to spend their precious time on this Handbook and showed remarkable enthusiasm for the project. We are gratified by their dedication, commitment to quality and responsiveness. Our many thanks to all contributors! Moreover, this project would have never taken off without the generous support of both the Kenan-Flagler Business School and Tilburg University. Sincere thanks, also, to Mike Hanssens, whose encouragement and advice was highly instrumental in our undertaking this project. In addition, we extend our appreciation to Alan Sturmer and Karissa Venne of Edward Elgar Publishing, who provided invaluable support and guidance in bringing this effort to conclusion, and to Erin McVicar of Edward Elgar Publishing for efficiently managing the production of this volume. Last but not least, our special thanks go to Laura Howe, our faculty support aide at the Kenan-Flagler Business School, for her administrative guidance in various tasks. She put up with our unrealistic demands and unreasonable deadlines with unfailing good humor, and we would not have managed without her.
