Contributors

Sofia Aboim received her PhD from the University of Lisbon (ISCTE-IUL), Portugal, in 2004 and is an assistant professor at the Institute of Social Sciences, ISCTE-IUL. Her research interests include gender, feminisms, masculinity studies as well as social theory, justice, inequality and post-colonial studies. She is currently working on book projects on masculinities and gender while developing research on the same topics. She coordinates the project TRANSRIGHTS – Gender citizenship and sexual rights in Europe (consolidator grant, 2014–19), which is financed by the European Research Council.

Jonathan Bradshaw is Emeritus Professor of Social Policy at the University of York, UK. He was founding director of the Social Policy Research Unit and served two terms as head of department. His research has focused on social security policy, living standards, comparative social policy, child poverty and child well-being. He is currently the UK Coordinator for the EU Social Policy Network. He is a trustee of the Child Poverty Action Group and chair of their social policy committee. He was appointed Commander of the British Empire (CBE) in 2005 for services to child poverty and Fellow of the British Academy in 2010.

Gary Craig is Emeritus Professor of Social Justice at the Wilberforce Institute for the study of Slavery and Emancipation at the University of Hull, UK, and visiting professor at three other universities. He worked for half his career as a community development activist. He has researched and published widely in the fields of ‘poverty, ‘race’ and ethnic-nity, and modern slavery; recent books include Community Organising Against Racism (Policy Press, 2017) and Understanding ‘Race’ and Ethnicity (second edition, Policy Press, 2018).

Miriam E. David is Professor Emerita of Sociology of Education at University College London (UCL) Institute of Education, UK, and a visiting professor at the Centre for Higher Education Research (CHeER) at the University of Sussex, UK. Formerly she was a professor and associate director of the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) Teaching and Learning Research Programme (2005–10). She has published widely in the fields of education, family, gender and social policies. Her most recent books are Reclaiming Feminism: Challenging Everyday Misogyny (Policy Press, 2016) and A Feminist Manifesto for Education (Polity Press, 2016). She is currently editing the Sage Encyclopaedia of Higher Education with Marilyn Amey (Michigan State University, USA).

W. Thomas Duncanson is a professor of communication at Millikin University in Decatur, Illinois, USA. He writes and teaches primarily about environmental advocacy,
Contributors

Nick Ellison is Professor of Social Policy at the University of York, UK. He has published widely on the politics of social policy in the UK, comparative social policy, with books including Egalitarian Thought and Labour Politics (Routledge, 2015) and The Transformation of Welfare States? (Routledge, 2005). Other work includes articles on citizenship and democratic participation, digital democracy and theories of policy transfer.

Ian Greener is Professor of Social Policy at the University of Strathclyde, UK. He is interested in how individual decisions often seem to lead to poor social outcomes, despite the promises of the economists. He has written over 50 articles in peer-reviewed journals and several books on a range of issues from the history of health policy through to social research methods.

Lady Brenda Hale is current President of the UK Supreme Court, having served in a variety of senior judicial positions during her career, including being a Law Lord, a member of the Court of Appeal and Deputy President of the Supreme Court. She spent about 18 years in academic life including being a professor of law at Manchester University.

Jeff Hearn is currently Senior Professor, Gender Studies at Örebro University, Sweden and formerly Professor of Sociology, University of Huddersfield, UK, and Professor Emeritus, Hanken School of Economics, Finland. He holds an honorary doctorate in social sciences from Lund University, Sweden. His many books include 'Sex' at 'Work' (with Parkin; St. Martin's, 1987/1995); The Sexuality of Organization (co-edited; Sage, 1989); Gender, Sexuality and Violence in Organizations (with Parkin; Sage, 2001). He is co-managing editor of the Routledge Advances in Feminist Studies and Intersectionality book series; and co-chair, RINGS: International Association of Institutions of Advanced Gender Studies. His more recent books include Men of the World: Genders, Globalizations, Transnational Times (Sage, 2015); Men's Stories for a Change: Ageing Men Remember (with Barber and Blake; Common Ground, 2016); Engaging Youth in Activist Research and Pedagogical Praxis (co-edited with Shefer, Ratele and Boonzaier; Routledge, 2018); and Revenge Pornography (with Hall; Routledge, 2017).

Michael Hill is Emeritus Professor of Social Policy at the University of Newcastle, UK, and an Honorary Fellow of the School of Social Science at the University of Brighton. He combines an interest in many aspects of social policy with a commitment to the study of the policy process. During much of his early career he researched on social security and employment. His long-standing text The Public Policy Process has recently reached its seventh edition in a joint version with Frédéric Varone of the University of Geneva (Routledge, 2017). He is working with Zoë Irving on a comparative text on social policy.

John Hudson is a professor in the Department of Social Policy and Social Work at the University of York, UK, where he is also currently head of department.

Leora Kahn is the executive director of PROOF: Media for Social Justice, a non-profit that uses visual storytelling for social change. She has worked on projects with Amnesty International and the United Nations. She has edited books and curated exhibitions on child soldiers and Darfur. She lectures and teaches about human rights and photography.
Handbook on global social justice at Yale, International Center for Photography and Clark University. She has formerly been a fellow at the Genocide Studies Program at Yale University and is a Fulbright Senior Specialist. Leora has also interviewed and researched survivors in Rwanda, Cambodia, Bosnia, Sri Lanka and Iraq.

Miriam Kennet was named as one of the 100 most powerful women globally by One World Charity. She has also received the Honour Award from the Economics Ministry in Luxembourg for founding The Green Economics Institute and The Green Economics Institute Publishing House, and is a writer, speaker and inclusive innovator on economics, and lectures in universities and for governments across Europe, from Montenegro to Estonia to Spain. She runs regular conferences at Oxford University, UK, and is credited with creating the academic discipline of green economics, which is predicated on the complex and indivisible mesh of social and environmental justice. She has developed a unique global network empowering diverse peoples from all walks of life.

Stewart Lansley is a visiting fellow at London's City University and at the University of Bristol, UK. He has written widely on inequality, wealth and poverty, and is co-editor (with Amy Downes) of It's Basic Income: The Global Debate (Policy Press, 2018). He is also the author of A Sharing Economy, How Social Wealth Funds Can Tackle Inequality and Help Balance the Books (both published by Policy Press, 2016); Breadline Britain (with Jo Mack; Oneworld, 2015); and the Cost of Inequality (Gibson Square, 2011).

Aleksandra Lewicki is a political sociologist with a PhD from the University of Bristol, UK. She currently holds a postdoctoral fellowship at the Freie Universität Berlin, Germany. Her work engages with discourses and practices that iterate, perpetuate or neutralise and thereby reproduce structural inequalities and institutional discrimination in public institutions. Lewicki is the author of the monographs Souveränität im Wandel (LitVerlag, 2005), and Social Justice through Citizenship? The Politics of Muslim Integration in Germany and Great Britain (Palgrave Macmillan, 2014) and the editor of several volumes and journal editions. Her articles have appeared in leading journals such as Ethnic and Racial Studies and Citizenship Studies.

Karen Lucas is Professor of Transport and Social Analysis at the University of Leeds, UK. She has had 20 years of experience in social research in transport and is a world-leading expert in the area of transport-related social exclusion. In 2015, she was awarded the Edward L. Ullman Award by the Transport Geography Specialty Group of the Association of American Geographers for her significant contribution to transportation geography. She is a regular advisor to national governments in the UK, recently acting as part of a scrutiny panel for the London Assembly for the Mayor’s Future Transport Strategy and the Social and Environmental Advisory Group for Northern Rail.

Halima Mahomed is an independent consultant whose work focuses on research and advocacy to strengthen the narrative, knowledge, practice and impact of African philanthropy. Over the past 16 years she has been closely affiliated with, amongst others, the Ford Foundation, TrustAfrica and the Global Fund for Community Foundations. She is also a member of Philanthropy for Social Justice and Peace and of the Alliance magazine editorial board. Halima has written extensively on African philanthropy, and holds a master's in development studies, with a focus on social justice philanthropy.
Karel Martens is an associate professor at the Technion–Israel Institute of Technology at Haifa, Israel, and Radboud University at Nijmegen, the Netherlands. He has published extensively on fairness, justice and equity in the domain of transport, including in leading journals such as Transportation, Transportation Research Part A, Transport Geography and Transportmetrica A. He has brought his insights together in his book Transport Justice: Designing Fair Transportation Systems (Routledge, 2017), in which he develops a radically new perspective on transport planning based on principles of justice. He was elected Transport Professional of the Year in the Netherlands in 2014.

Marjorie Mayo is Emeritus Professor of Community Development at Goldsmiths, University of London, UK, where her research has included a focus on community action and development, community–university engagement, learning for active citizenship, and access to justice in disadvantaged communities. Her recent publications include Changing Communities (Policy Press, 2017), Challenging the Third Sector (with Sue Kenny, Marilyn Taylor and Jenny Onyx; Policy Press, 2016), jointly edited collections on Class, Inequality and Community Development (Policy Press, 2016) and Community Research for Community Development (Palgrave, 2013). Previous publications include Access to Justice for Disadvantaged Communities (with G. Koessl, M. Scott and I. Slater; Policy Press, 2014).

Philip Mendes is Associate Professor and Acting Head of the Social Work Department and the Director of the Social Inclusion and Social Policy Research Unit (SISPRU) at Monash University in Victoria, Australia. His key research interests include young people leaving state care, income security and the welfare state, social workers and policy practice, social work and community development, and Indigenous social policy. He is the author or co-author of 11 books, including most recently Young people Transitioning From Out-of-Home Care: International Research, Policy and Practice (co-edited with Pamela Snow; Palgrave Macmillan, 2016), and the third edition of Australia’s Welfare Wars (UNSW Press, 2017).

Satya P. Mohanty is Professor of English at Cornell University, USA, where he has taught since 1983. His work focuses on issues that reflect his commitment to a view of culture as ‘a field of moral inquiry’ (on this topic, see Chapter 7 of his Literary Theory and the Claims of History; Cornell University Press, 1997). He is best known for his ‘post-positivist realist’ theory, a position that is simultaneously a critique of postmodernism and an elaboration of a radical alternative to it. He has edited or co-edited four volumes and is completing a book titled Thinking Across Cultures (Duke University Press, forthcoming).

Nicolette Naylor is a South African human rights lawyer who has completed two law degrees at the University of the Western Cape, South Africa, and a master’s in law in international human rights at University College London, UK. She started practising law in the commercial, human rights and public interest law arena in London and South Africa. In 2007, she joined the Ford Foundation as programme officer, responsible for human rights programming in southern Africa. She has focused on issues of human rights and social justice philanthropy. In 2015, she became regional director for the Ford Foundation in southern Africa.

Frank Nullmeier is a professor at the University of Bremen, SOCIUM Research Center on Inequality and Social Policy, Germany. His research interests are welfare state theory, German social policy, normative political theory and empirical legitimation studies. His most important publications are The Oxford Handbook of Transformations of the State (co-edited with Stephan Leibfried, Evelyne Huber, Matthew Lange, Jonah D. Levy and John D. Stephens; Oxford University Press, 2015), his chapter ‘Global social governance in the media’ in Actors and Agency in Global Social Governance (edited by Alexandra Kaasch and Kerstin Martens; Oxford University Press, 2015) and an article ‘Towards a political theory of the market economy’ published in the World Political Science Review.

Phil Parvin is a senior lecturer in politics at Loughborough University, UK. He has held positions at numerous universities, including the University of Cambridge, UK, and University of California, Berkeley, USA. His published work lies at the intersection between political theory and practice. He has published on a wide range of topics in political theory and political science, including democratic theory, citizen participation, political lobbying, political parties, multiculturalism, egalitarianism, markets and inequality. He has written two books, Political Philosophy: A Complete Introduction (Hodder, 2012) and Karl Popper (Bloomsbury, 2013).

Jenny Phillimore is Director of the Institute for Research into Superdiversity and Professor of Migration and Superdiversity at the University of Birmingham, UK. Her research interests span refugee integration, with a particular focus on health, housing and social networks, and access to healthcare. She has led multiple research projects for UK research councils, the European Union and research foundations. She has advised governments in the UK and Europe. She has also published widely in leading academic journals such as Social Science and Medicine, Urban Studies, Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, Policy and Politics and Journal of Social Policy.

Michael J. Prince holds the Landsdowne Chair in Social Policy at the University of Victoria, Canada. He is active in the disability rights movement, among other social groups and public issues, and the author of many books, including Struggling for Social Citizenship (McGill-Queen’s University Press, 2016).

Kirstein Rummery is Professor of Social Policy and Co-Director of the Centre on Gender and Feminist Studies at the University of Stirling, UK. She is also a founder member and Scottish policy spokesperson for the Women’s Equality Party. Her research interests include gender and disability, health and social care policy, and independence movements. She recently completed a large ESRC-funded comparative research project on gender equality and care policies, and is currently researching dementia-friendly neighbourhoods and costing the benefits of disability and carers’ support. She is disabled and is co-owned by three children, two cats and a dog.

Patrick Savidan is a professor at the Universite Paris-Est Creteil in the val de Marne, France.

Andrew Sayer is Professor of Social Theory and Political Economy at Lancaster University, UK. His main interests are in moral economy, inequality and ethics, and in constructing a dialogue between philosophy and social science on these issues. His books include The Moral Significance of Class (Cambridge University Press, 2005), and Why Things Matter to People: Social Science, Values and Ethical Life (Cambridge University Press, 2011), and Why We Can’t Afford the Rich (Policy Press, 2014).
Tom Shakespeare is a professor of disability research at the University of East Anglia, UK. He specialises in qualitative research with people with disabilities, both in Britain and in developing countries. His many books include Disability Rights and Wrongs (Routledge, 2006), The Sexual Politics of Disability (Continuum, 1996) and Disability – the Basics (Routledge, 2017).

Tamara Shefer is a senior professor at the Women’s and Gender Studies Department, Faculty of Arts, University of the Western Cape, South Africa. Her scholarship and publications have primarily addressed gendered, intersectional power relations among young people, including sexualities education, HIV/AIDS, gender-based violence, masculinities, memory and apartheid, gender and care, gender and dis/ability, social justice, and feminist pedagogies. Her most recent books are Engaging Youth in Activist Research and Pedagogical Praxis: Transnational and Intersectional Perspectives on Gender, Sex, and Race (co-edited with J. Hearn, K. Ratele and F. Boonzaier; Routledge, forthcoming) and Care in Context: Transnational Gender Perspective (co-edited with V. Reddy, S. Meyer and T. Meyiwe; HSRC Press, 2014).

John Solomos is Professor of Sociology and Head of Department, Department of Sociology, University of Warwick, UK. He has researched, lectured and written widely on the history and contemporary forms of race and ethnic relations in Britain. He is joint-editor with Martin Bulmer of the international journal Ethnic and Racial Studies, which is published 15 times a year by Routledge and the author of Race and Racism in Britain (Palgrave, 2003), now in its third edition.

Peter Somerville is Professor of Social Policy at the University of Lincoln, UK. He has been responsible for over 70 research projects covering a wide variety of social justice issues. His most recent books have been Interpreting Rurality: Multidisciplinary Perspectives (with G. Bosworth; Routledge, 2013), and Understanding Community: Politics, Policy and Practice (second edition, Policy Press, 2016). He is currently working on climate change policy.

Hilary Sommerlad is Professor of Law and Social Justice at Leeds University, UK. Following a history degree from the University of Cambridge, and PhD in political science from the University of York, she retrained in law and practised as a legal aid solicitor. She then taught law and developed socio-legal research at Leeds Beckett, Leicester and Birmingham universities. She is Fellow of the Academy of Social Sciences, serves on the editorial boards of the Journal of Law and Society and the International Journal of the Legal Profession, and is a member of the International Legal Aid Group. She has published widely on access to justice and legal aid.

Viviene Taylor currently teaches comparative social policy in Africa, development planning and social and economic development in the Department of Social Development at the University of Cape Town, of which she is the head. Her academic career consists of both national and international development experience spanning over 30 years, approximately 20 years of this being at a senior policy and/or management level. She has researched and published widely on social security and social policy, social justice, and inequality and poverty. Her experience includes working at the United Nations on a global commission on human security with Professor Amartya Sen, undertaking research on social policy areas for the African Union, and with governments, the non-governmental sector and in academia.

Alan Walker is Professor of Social Policy and Social Gerontology at the University of Sheffield, UK. He has been researching and writing on aspects of ageing and social policy for more than 40 years. He was Director of the European projects MOPACT (http://www.mopact.group.shef.ac.uk), INNOVAGE (http://www.innovage.group.shef.ac.uk), and The New Dynamics of Ageing Programme (http://www.newdynamics.group.shef.ac.uk), and The Growing Older Programme (http://www.shef.ac.uk/uni/projects/gop/index.htm).

Nicholas Watson is Professor of Disability Research and Director of the Centre for Disability Research at the University of Glasgow, UK. He has written on a range of disability issues including disability and childhood, disability and social justice, disability and technology, disability and identity, and disability theory.