Contributors

Anne-Marie Broudehoux is Associate Professor at the School of Design of the University of Quebec at Montreal, where she has been teaching since 2002. She received her doctoral degree in architecture from the University of California at Berkeley in 2002. She is the author of Mega-Events and Urban Image Construction: Beijing and Rio de Janeiro, published by Routledge in 2017. She has published multiple articles on the socio-spatial impacts of event-led urban transformations. Her book, The Making and Selling of Post-Mao Beijing, also published by Routledge, was awarded the International Planning History Society book prize in 2006.

Yongshun Cai is Chair Professor in the Division of Social Science at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. His research interests include social movements and collective action and governance in China.

Kam Wing Chan is Professor of Geography at the University of Washington. His research focuses on China’s urbanization, cities, migration, the hukou system and spatial economy. He was a consultant for the World Bank, Asian Development Bank, International Labor Organization, Paulson Institute, and McKinsey & Co. His commentaries and interviews have appeared in Wall Street Journal, New York Times, The Economist, South China Morning Post, BBC, Caixin, Ming Pao and China Daily. His web page is at http://faculty.washington.edu/kwchan.

Feng Chen is Professor at the Department of Government and International Studies, Hong Kong Baptist University. He has published extensively on Chinese labour politics, labour movement, labour rights as well as local governance.

Li Chen is a Research Associate in the Department of Public Policy at City University of Hong Kong. His main research interests focus on art intervention in China cities, particularly on the underground music scene, socially engaged art and aesthetic politics in Chinese contemporary art.

Edmund W. Cheng is Assistant Professor of Comparative Politics at Hong Kong Baptist University. His research interests include contentious politics, political sociology, public sphere and urban governance. His recent publications include An Epoch of Social Movements (Chinese University Press, 2018) and The Umbrella Movement: Civil Resistance and Contentious Space in Hong Kong (Amsterdam University Press, 2019) and articles in China Quarterly, China Journal, Political Studies and Social Movements Studies.

Howard Chiang is Assistant Professor of History at the University of California, Davis. He is the author of After Eunuchs: Science, Medicine, and the Transformation of Sex in Modern China (New York: Columbia University Press, 2018) and editor of Sexuality in China: Histories of Power and Pleasure (Seattle: University of Washington Press, 2018).

Mun Young Cho is an Associate Professor of the Department of Cultural Anthropology at Yonsei University, South Korea. Her research focuses on poverty, labour, development and youth in China and South Korea. She is the author of the book The Specter of ‘The People’: Urban Poverty in Northeast China (Cornell University Press, 2013). Cho is currently studying the problematic of ‘the Chinese social’, focusing on the landscapes of social governance (shehui zhili) and social innovation (shehui chuangxin) that loom large in Shenzhen.

Bing Guan is Professor in the School of Public Administration at the South China University of Technology. His research interests include social movements and contentious politics, social organizations and grassroots governance in China.

Daniel R. Hammond is Senior Lecturer in Chinese Politics and Society at the University of Edinburgh. His main research focus has been on social assistance in contemporary China focusing in particular on the urban resident minimum livelihood guarantee system at both national and local level. In addition, he has written about China’s representation in international media and co-authored on China and international politics. Current projects include discourses on poverty, China’s representation digital games, and teaching Chinese politics and policy making.

Pu Hao is an Assistant Professor at the Department of Geography, Hong Kong Baptist University. His research interests include urban socio-spatial dynamics, urban economic geography, migration and mobility, and urban housing. His publications appear in international peer-reviewed journals including Urban Studies, Environment and Planning A, and the International Journal of Urban and Regional Research.

Thomas Heberer is Senior Professor of Chinese Politics & Society at the Institute of Political Science and the Institute of East Asian Studies at the University Duisburg-Essen/Germany. He has been conducting field research in China on an annual basis since the early 1980s. Among his recent research interests (with regard to China) are: urban and rural governance; local cadres and private entrepreneurs as strategic groups; political and symbolic representation; political steering; nationalities’ policies; the Chinese developmental state; and civil society development.

Thomas Johnson is a Lecturer in the Department of Politics in the University of Sheffield. His work focuses on environmental activism in China, and has appeared in journals such as Environmental Politics, Regulation & Governance and The China Quarterly.

Karita Kan received her DPhil and MPhil in Politics from the University of Oxford. She is currently Assistant Professor at the Department of Applied Social Sciences, Hong Kong Polytechnic University. Her research interests include rural political economy, land politics and state-society relations in contemporary China.

Graeme Lang, now retired, was a professor in the Department of Asian and International Studies at City University of Hong Kong. He has published journal articles, book chapters and newspaper op-ed pieces on sustainability of cities, environment-related protests in China, deforestation and related state policies in China and Southeast Asia, and problems of climate-change resilience in vulnerable societies such as the Philippines. His most recent project is a comparative study of the sustainability of cities beyond fossil fuels.

Jing Li is an Assistant Professor at Department of Geography and Resource Management, and Deputy of Center of Land Resource and Housing Policy, Institute of Future Cities,
The Chinese University of Hong Kong. His research interests include housing policy, urban economics and sustainable development.

Shuo Liu is Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology, Hong Kong Shue Yan University. She graduated with a PhD in Sociology from the Chinese University of Hong Kong in 2009. Her main research interests include interpersonal relationship (guanxi) and the middle class in mainland China. Her publications include ‘A middle class community: class formation and the building of a moral order’ published in Shehuixue Yanjiu. Her current research interest focuses on the consumption pattern among Chinese middle-class consumers.

Yuyang Liu got both of his PhD and master degrees in Hong Kong Polytechnic University. His PhD project focuses on China’s prefectural urban development in terms of land-based finance, land requisition and resident relocation. After graduation, Dr Liu had been employed by the Development Research Center, Guangming district branch of Shenzhen municipal government; he was then recruited as the general project manager of Country Garden (a top three real estate development company in China). Dr Liu has been simultaneously appointed as the principal investigator of the Guangdong provincial-level research project: the win-win logic between local governments and evicted residents under the background-scenario of local urbanization. His PhD research and work experiences provide him with deep insights on project-centred urban development patterns and local government behaviour in land-based finance.

Tai-lok Lui is Chair Professor of Hong Kong Studies, the Director of the Academy of Hong Kong Studies, and Vice President (Research and Development) at the Education University of Hong Kong. His publications include City-States in the Global Economy, Hong Kong, China: Learning to Belong to a Nation and Hong Kong: Becoming a Chinese Global City. His academic writings also appear in academic journals such as Asia Pacific Viewpoint, Inter-Asia Cultural Studies, The Sociological Review, Urban Studies, etc.

Bo Miao is an Associate Professor in the School of Law at SUN Yat-Sen University. Before that, he was an assistant professor in the Department of Asian and International Studies at City University of Hong Kong. Dr Miao’s research interests lie mainly in global environmental politics, Chinese environmental governance and urban policies.

Junxi Qian is Assistant Professor in the Department of Geography, The University of Hong Kong. His research is located at the intersection of geography, urban studies and cultural studies. He holds a PhD in Human Geography from the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, UK. His recent research focuses on urban public space, ethnic minorities/frontiers, religion and China’s urban transformation, with regional foci on Pearl River Delta, Yunnan and Tibet.

Li Tao is an Assistant Professor at Department of Management, Shanghai University. Her research interests include migration, population and urbanization.

June Wang is Assistant Professor of Urban Geography in the Department of Public Policy at City University of Hong Kong. Her research interests include cultural/creative cities and culture-led urban transformation, such as gentrification and recently, territorialization of creative cities through assemblage of land and population, and the consequently precarious geography of the cultural workforce. She has co-edited the book Making Cultural Cities in Asia: Mobility, Assemblage, and the Politics of Aspirational Urbanism (Routledge, 2016), and has authored published papers in various journals, such as Cities, Geoforum, Territory, Politics, Governance and Urban Geography.

Lan Wang is Head of the Healthy City Lab and Professor of Department of Urban Planning at Tongji University. Her research focuses on urban development strategy and its planning, particularly with respect to current and pressing issues like healthy cities, high-speed rail new towns and global cities. She has published more than 50 journal articles and four monographs, and presided over four research projects funded by the National Nature Science Foundation and a number of consulting projects for city governments. Prof Wang serves as Secretary General of the National College of Urban Planning Steering Committee, Deputy Executive Director of the Asian Development Bank-Tongji Urban Knowledge Hub, Urban Development Consultant of the World Bank, and Assistant Dean of College of Architecture and Urban Planning, Tongji University.

Bart Wissink is Associate Professor Urban Studies and Urban Policy at the Department of Public Policy at City University Hong Kong. He holds master degrees in urban planning and public administration (both cum laude) and a PhD in Social and Behavioural Sciences, all at the University of Amsterdam. His research projects explore enclave urbanism in five Asian city regions (Bangkok, Guangzhou, Hong Kong, Mumbai and Tokyo), with special attention for comparative urban form, urban controversies, and social networks and the neighbourhood. Bart Wissink has held visiting appointments in Bangkok, Hong Kong, Mumbai, Tokyo and Paris. His most recent co-edited book (with Ray Forrest and Sin Yee Koh) — Cities and the Super-Rich: Real Estate, Elite Practices, and Urban Political Economies — appeared with Palgrave MacMillan in April 2017.

Rebecca W. Y. Wong completed her DPhil at the Department of Sociology, University of Oxford. Her primary research interests are in the fields of green criminology with a specific focus on illegal endangered wildlife trade in Hong Kong and Mainland China. She is also interested in criminal networks and issues of trust in the underworld.

Ying Wu is an Associate Research Fellow at the National Institute of Social Development, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences. She was awarded a Bachelor of Laws at Jilin University in 2004 and PhD at Peking University in 2009. Her major research covers urbanization, grassroots governance and public service. She is the author of three books and a number of articles in international renowned journals, such as the Journal of Social Policy and Habitat International, and top sociological journals in China.

Xuehui Yang is a postdoctoral fellow in the Department of Applied Social Sciences at Hong Kong Polytechnic University. She received her PhD in Political Science from Hong Kong Baptist University. Her research interests lie in labour politics, contentious politics, civil society and social policy development in Asia.

Ray Yep is Professor of Politics and Associate Head of Department of Public Policy at the City University of Hong Kong. His articles on political economy of China’s development appeared in leading journals including China Quarterly, Development and Change and Public Administration Review. He has held visiting positions in Academia Sinica, Brookings Institution, Bristol University and Peking University.
Xu Zhang is an Assistant Professor in Human Geography and Urban Planning at the Department of Regional Planning and Management, Wuhan University of Technology. He is an urban geographer interested in urban spaces, urban networks and cultural economies. His current research has focused on the development and the spatial characteristics of cultural and creative economic activities in China’s major metropolitan areas.