

Contributors

Inge Bakker is the Research Manager at Kennispunt Twente, a regional intermunicipal organisation providing data and analysis for smart regional development in Twente, the Netherlands. Inge graduated in social psychology at the University of Amsterdam, and subsequently worked at the Verwey-Jonker Institute in Utrecht and the Public Administration group of the University of Twente. She has recently been working on policy added value, governance, security and quality of life issues. She has extensive experience in both qualitative and quantitative research methods as well as the development of applied research instruments.

Sabrina Bandera is Policy Analyst and Project Manager at Polis-Lombardia – Institute for Research, Statistics and Training (formerly Éupolis Lombardia). Her research focuses on public management, decision-making process, strategic planning and training. Previous appointments include the positions of policy officer at the European Commission and research fellow in universities.

Paul Benneworth is a Senior Researcher at the Center for Higher Education Policy Studies, University of Twente, the Netherlands, and Senior Researcher at Agderforskning, Kristiansand, Norway. His research focuses on the dynamics of innovation and regional development and, in particular, the ways in which cooperations and coalitions function in supporting regional innovation processes. He has been chief scientist of projects for a range of research funders. He has published more than 30 peer-reviewed scientific articles in the last decade, serves as reviewer for a range of journals, research councils and funding agencies, and currently acts as special scientific adviser to research council funded projects in Norway, Austria and Belgium.

Maria Chiara Cattaneo has a PhD in Institutions and Policies from Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Milan. She currently holds a three-year scholarship on Policy Analysis Network at Polis-Lombardia – the Institute for Research, Statistics and Training of the Lombardy Region (formerly Éupolis Lombardia).

Paola Coletti has a PhD in Public Policy Analysis from the University of Pavia. She received a post-doctoral research fellowship from Politecnico di Milano in Public Policy Analysis (2007–2010). Her scientific interests include Public Policy Analysis, with specific reference to the theories and methods for decision analysis and evaluation, Public Administration and Local Government.

Annalisa Colombino is Assistant Professor at the Institute of Geography and Regional Sciences, University of Graz, Austria. Her research interests include urban and tourism studies, food and consumption, and human-animal studies.

Alessandro Colombo, PhD, MPhil Cam, MSc, is currently Scientific Director of Polis-Lombardia (formerly Éupolis Lombardia) and Director of the Academy for Social and Health Care Training in Milan. His professional experience has been entirely in research and service to public institutions. He also teaches Public Policy at the Catholic University of Milan.

Juan Luis de las Rivas Sanz is Professor of Spatial Planning and Urban Design at the Instituto Universitario de Urbanística (IUU) of Valladolid University (Spain). He has been visiting professor in Italy, Portugal, Mexico, Venezuela and the USA. He leads the IUU research group involved in spatial planning and urban design innovation.

Nicola Francesco Dotti is Post-Doc in Regional Economics and Policy at the Solvay Brussels School of the Université Libre de Bruxelles (ULB), and affiliated to the Louvain-Europe Department (ISPOLE) of the Université Catholique de Louvain (UCL). Previously, he carried out research at Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB) and Politecnico di Milano; he also worked for the European Union (EU) Commission and as policy consultant. Recently, he joined the unit Dynamics of Innovation, Research and Higher Education of the VUB. He combines economics, policy studies and geography as well as academic and policy-oriented research (<https://nfdotti.me/>).

Franziska Eckardt is a PhD student at the Center for Higher Education Policy Studies (CHEPS) in the faculty of Behaviour, Management and Social Sciences at the University of Twente, the Netherlands. Her dissertation was part of the international collaborative research project ‘Knowledge Matters’ funded by the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO). Her research focuses on the integration of ‘citizen knowledge’ in local decision-making processes of sustainable urban governance.

Alwin Gerritsen is a researcher at Wageningen University & Research, the Netherlands, with broad experience in the evaluation and facilitation of policy and innovation processes. His main topics are the governance of sustainable development in agri-, food- and the bio-economy, environmental governance and territorial innovation.

Sarah Giest is an Assistant Professor at the Institute of Public Administration, Leiden University, the Netherlands. She is conducting research on urban policymaking, specialising in networking among various governmental and non-governmental stakeholders and the policy design connected to that. Sarah is currently working on several papers and projects connected to big data use by policymakers, together with researchers from Computer Science, with the goal of unpacking the way data information enters the policy process in the city context.

Dan Greenwood is Senior Lecturer in Politics and PhD programme coordinator at the Centre for the Study of Democracy, University of Westminster, London, UK. His research combines political economy, policy analysis and political theory, including empirical work on governance for climate change mitigation, the built environment and health services.

Adrian Healy is a Senior Research Fellow at Cardiff University, UK. His expertise focuses on the resilience of people and places to shocks and crises, regional economic development and innovation. He has acted as an expert advisor to the UK Government and the European Commission and has worked extensively with local, regional and national authorities in the UK and the EU.

Tassilo Herrschel is Reader (Associate Professor) in the Department of Politics and International Relations at the University of Westminster, London, UK. His main research interests focus on cities as locales and actors between 'state' and 'globalisation' and the resulting governance challenges, and potential conflict between functional-relational and institutional geographies, such as illustrated by city-regions.

Tamara Metze is Associate Professor in Public Administration and Policy in the Social Sciences Group of Wageningen University & Research. Her research interest is the (im)possibility of democratic innovations. She is a Project Leader of 'Travelling of Framed Facts and Uncertainties', with a special interest in visual framing, boundary objects, boundary work, and communities of practice in energy controversies, environmental policies, food policies and urban planning. She is editor of Local Government Studies and the Journal of Environmental Policy and Planning, and a member of the advisory board of the international conference on Interpretive Policy Analysis.

Stéphane Moyson is Assistant Professor of Public Administration and Public Policy at the Institut de Sciences Politiques Louvain-Europe of the Université catholique de Louvain, Belgium (<http://www.stephanemoyson.eu>).

Mario Paris is an architect and has a PhD in Urban and Regional Planning. Since 2006, he has collaborated with the Urb&Com Lab at Politecnico di Milano, Italy, and the IUU of the Universidad de Valladolid, Spain, as researcher, consultant and teacher. His main research interest is on the regional and urban impact of clusters of central functions in metropolitan areas, with a specific focus on retail and tertiary functions in contemporary territorial patterns.

Serafin Pazos-Vidal has a PhD in European Union from the Universidad Nacional de Educación a Distancia (UNED) in Spain. He is Head of the Brussels Office of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities (COSLA), where he is responsible for European policy development and negotiation. This has led to authoring a number of academic publications on EU cohesion policy, subsidiarity, comparative public policy and multilevel governance across Europe.

Dorina Pojani is a Senior Lecturer of urban planning at the University of Queensland in Australia. Her research focuses on urban transport in both developed and developing countries. She has lived, worked and/or studied in Albania, Austria, Belgium, Italy, the Netherlands, and the USA.

Peter Scholten is Full Professor at Erasmus University Rotterdam, the Netherlands, and Director of IMISCOE, Europe's largest network of academic research on International Migration, Integration and Social Cohesion (<http://www.peterscholten.eu>).

Dominic Stead is Associate Professor of Urban and Regional Development at Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands. He is regional editor of Planning Practice and Research and a member of the editorial boards of the European Journal of Transport and Infrastructure Research, European Planning Studies, the Journal of Planning Education and Research, and Planning Practice and Research.

Marian Stuiver is Senior Researcher at Wageningen University & Research, the Netherlands, with broad experience in the social sciences. Her topics are multi-stakeholder processes, governance, sustainability, green businesses and blue growth. She has a track record in EU, international organizations (United Nations) and local government.

Catrien Termeer is Chair of the Public Administration and Policy Group at Wageningen University & Research, the Netherlands. Her research addresses the governance of wicked problems in the policy domains of sustainable agri-food systems, adaptation to climate change, and vital rural areas.

Giulia Urso is Assistant Professor of Economic Geography at Gran Sasso Science Institute, Social Sciences Unit, L'Aquila, Italy. She holds a PhD in Geography from the University of Salento, Italy. Her research interests include local development, rural–urban relationships, local effects of cultural activities, social capital and place identity.

Joost Vaesen is Director of the Brussels Studies Institute (an interuniversity knowledge consortium on Brussels) and assistant professor at Vrije Universiteit Brussel. He works and teaches on the complex governance system in Brussels and on urban education

Willem-Jan Velderman is a policy officer at the municipality of Dalfsen in Salland, in the east of the Netherlands. He has recently graduated with a degree in Public Administration from the Erasmus University Rotterdam, the Netherlands. His MSc dissertation was entitled 'Creating Space for Regional Coalitions: Opportunistic Learning Processes in Regional Agenda-setting'. He is a board member of the Twente branch of 'De Maatschappij', a local political journalist and is actively involved in stimulating and supporting social entrepreneurship projects within Twente, the Netherlands.

Benjamin Wayens has a PhD in geography. As a Research Professor, his work at IGEAT (Université libre de Bruxelles) and IRIB (Université Saint-Louis Bruxelles) is focused on the geography of services and spatial analysis applied to urban observation and history. He pays particular attention to the issues of education, training, valorisation and popularisation. Since 2012, he has been Senior Editor of Brussels Studies.