The editors wish to thank all the contributors to this volume as well as the two UN Special Rapporteurs in the field of cultural rights, Farida Shaheed and Karima E. Benounne and the people from the Special Procedures Division of the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights in Geneva, Dragana Korljan, Mylène Bidault, and Johanne Bouchard.

The editors furthermore wish to thank the Danish Velux Foundation who funded Helle Porsdam’s project, ‘The Past’s Present: Digital Transformations and Cultural Heritage Institutions’ (pf.ku.dk). Members of this collaborative project met in Copenhagen in November 2015 at the Royal Library and the National Museum, two of the external partners for Porsdam’s project, to plan this volume. It was the former, and now sadly deceased, Director of the Royal Library, Erland Kolding Nielsen, who helped us organize a dinner on November 13, 2015 at the Royal Library’ wonderful restaurant ‘Søren K’, named after Søren Kierkegaard. And it was during this dinner that Danish composer and conductor Bo Holten had members of his vocal ensemble ‘Musica Ficta’ perform various songs by the famous Danish composer Carl Nielsen in order then to ask all conference participants to come and join him at the piano. Once we were standing around his piano, Holten managed to make us all join in a circle canon or round, focusing on the old song known in French as ‘Frère Jacques, Frère Jacques.’ No one present that evening will ever forget how we all sang this song in our own respective languages – loud and clear, with a feeling of unity and cultural kinship through song!

What made this event even more memorable was the fact, as we learned later that evening, that at the very moment we were joined in song, gunmen and suicide bombers hit a concert hall, a major stadium, restaurants and bars in Paris and left more than one hundred people dead and hundreds more wounded. Nothing could have brought home to us more forcefully the importance of finding common ground around and guarding against the abuse of cultural rights!
