Contributors

Antonio Argandoña received his PhD in Economics at the University of Barcelona in 1969. He is Emeritus Professor of Economics and of Business Ethics and holds the CaixaBank Chair of Corporate Social Responsibility at IESE Business School, University of Navarra (Spain). He is a fellow of the Royal Academy of Economics and Finance of Spain, President of the Standing Committee on Professional Ethics of the Economists’ Association of Catalonia and a member of the Commission on Corporate Responsibility and Anti-Corruption of the International Chamber of Commerce (Paris). He has been a journal editor, a member of the ethics committees of business associations and financial institutions, and has held government positions at IESE Business School and on scientific and professional bodies. He has authored, co-authored or edited more than 20 books, about 50 articles in refereed journals, and more than 150 chapters in collective books on economics, business ethics and corporate social responsibility.

Marta Bertolaso is Associate Professor for Philosophy of Science in the Faculty of Engineering and in the Institute of Philosophy of the Scientific and Technological Practice at University Campus Bio-Medico of Rome. She is the promoter and coordinator of BioTechnoPractice Research Empowering Hub (www.biotecnopractice.org) and she works in different funded research projects dealing with the new epistemological and philosophical challenges in the fields of ‘Philosophy of Life Sciences’, ‘In Silico Medicine’, ‘Philosophy of Organized Systems’ and ‘Care Sciences and Management’. She has lectured in philosophy of science and bioethics at several universities in Italy, Munich (Germany), Puebla (Mexico) and St Louis (USA). She has published around 70 scientific papers and 4 volumes. Among her publications is Bertolaso, M. (ed.) (2015), The Future of Scientific Practice: ‘Bio-Techno-Logos’, London, UK: Pickering & Chatto Publishers.

Sir Harry Burns graduated in Medicine from Glasgow University in 1974. He trained in surgery in Glasgow and became a consultant surgeon at the Royal Infirmary in Glasgow in 1984. Working with patients in the east end of Glasgow gave him an insight into the complex interrelationships between social and economic status and illness. In 1994, he became Director of Public Health for Greater Glasgow Health Board and continued research into the problems of social determinants of health. In 2005, he was made Chief Medical Officer for Scotland. In this role, his responsibilities included aspects of public health policy, health protection and sport. In 2011, he received a Knighthood in the Queen’s Birthday Honours. In April 2014, Sir Harry was appointed Professor of Global Public Health at Strathclyde University where he continues his interest in understanding how societies create wellness. He was awarded a lifetime achievement award by the Scottish government and the Scottish Parliament for Public Service in the same year.

Maria do Céu Patrão Neves is Full Professor of Ethics (with Tenure in Philosophical Anthropology), at the Department of Philosophy of the University of the Azores (Portugal), where she is also responsible for teaching and research on Applied Ethics (mainly Bioethics). Within this domain, she has worked as Advisor for Ethics applied to life sciences for the President of the Portuguese Republic, Counsellor for the National Ethics Committee, member of the Board of Directors of International Association of Bioethics, and expert in ethics for the European Commission and UNESCO. She has authored about 170 papers, 10 books and edited 8 others, and is currently leading the publication of a 12-volume collection on applied ethics. She is also the scientific coordinator of the research project ‘(bio)Ethics, Science and Society: Challenges for Bio-Politics’. She was a member of the European Parliament from 2009 to 2014.

E. Philip Davis is Professor of Banking and Finance at Brunel University, London and a fellow at the National Institute for Economic and Social Research. He is also an advisor and consultant to the International Monetary Fund. Davis left Oxford University in 1980, and was employed by the Bank of England until 2000 except for two spells on secondment, to the Bank for International Settlements in 1985–7, and in 1993–8 to the European Monetary Institute. He has published widely in the fields of pensions, institutional investment, Euromarkets, macroeconomics, banking, corporate finance, financial regulation, financial stability and Christian economics. He has undertaken work on pensions for a range of global and national institutions, including contributing to the World Bank’s work entitled Averting the Old Age Crisis. His book on the subject, entitled Pension Funds, Retirement-Income Security and Capital Markets: An International Perspective, was published by Oxford University Press in 1995. Recent work linked to pension issues includes the current work looking at legal, policy and economic issues associated with pension provision, an assessment of the shift of pension regulation towards a risk-based approach, and the relation of corporate financial structure to performance of Dutch pension funds.

Alban d’Entremont is Professor Emeritus of Human Geography at the University of Navarra, Spain. Born in Canada, he has a BA in Sociology and Economics, an MA in Geography and a PhD in Geography and History. At the University of Navarra, he taught Economic Geography, Population Geography and Environmental Studies. He was also Dean of Liberal Arts and Head of the Department of Geography and Territorial Management. He has collaborated extensively with the International Geographical Union and the International Baccalaureate Organisation, and has been Visiting Professor at several dozen universities in Europe and the Americas. He is the author, editor or coordinator of 12 books and over 200 articles on the family, demographics, economics, urban issues, geopolitics, poverty and development, and the environment.

Rosa M. Lastra is Professor in International Financial and Monetary Law at the Centre for Commercial Law Studies, Queen Mary University of London. She is a member of the Monetary Committee of the International Law Association, the European Shadow Financial Regulatory Committee and the Financial Markets Group of the London School of Economics and Political Science. She has served as a consultant to the International Monetary Fund, the European Central Bank, the World Bank, the Asian Development Bank and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. From November 2008 to June 2009 she acted as Specialist Adviser to the European Union Committee (Sub-Committee A) of the House of Lords regarding its Inquiry into EU Financial Regulation and responses to the financial crisis. Since 2015 she has been a member of the Monetary Expert Panel of the European Parliament, and since 2016 she has been a member of the Banking Union (Resolution) Expert Panel of the European Parliament. She has written extensively in her fields of expertise with several authored and edited books and numerous articles.

Alfredo Marcos originally studied Philosophy at the University of Barcelona and was awarded a PhD with a thesis on ‘The role of information in biology’. He spent periods of study and work at Cambridge and Rome. He has published a dozen books on philosophy of science, environmental ethics and Aristotelian studies, and almost 100 book chapters and papers in journals such as Studies in History and Philosophy of Science (Elsevier), Information System Frontiers (Kluwer) and Science and Education (Springer). He has taught courses and conferences at several universities in Spain, Italy, France, Poland, the UK, Mexico, Argentina and Colombia. Currently he teaches Philosophy of Science at the University of Valladolid (Spain), where he was Head of the Department of Philosophy, and is currently Full Professor and Head of the PhD Programme. His recent publications include *Postmodern Triadic Relation’, in G. Terzis and R. Arp (eds), Information and Living Systems: Philosophical and Scientific Perspectives (MIT Press, 2011), and ‘Vulnerability as a Part of Human Nature’, in A. Masferrer and E.
García (eds), Human Dignity of the Vulnerable in the Age of Rights (Springer, 2016).

Mark Regnerus is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Texas at Austin and a senior fellow at the Austin Institute for the Study of Family and Culture. His research is in the areas of sexual behaviour, family, marriage and religion. Mark is the author of over 40 published articles and book chapters, and 3 books: Premarital Sex in America: How Young Americans Meet, Mate, and Think about Marrying (Oxford, 2011), which describes the norms, behaviours and mating-market realities facing young adults; Forbidden Fruit: Sex and Religion in the Lives of American Teenagers (Oxford, 2007), which tells the story of how religion does—and does not—shape teenagers’ sexual decision making; and his latest book (2017), Cheap Sex and the Transformation of Men, Marriage, and Monogamy, in which he describes the world that has come to be due to the influence of technology on sex and sexuality.

Stefano Zamagni was Professor of Economics at the University of Bologna until 2013, when he retired. He continues to teach at the same university as Visiting Professor and he is serving as Adjunct Professor of International Political Economy at Johns Hopkins University, SAIS Europe. He is a fellow of the Academy of Sciences of Milan, Bologna and Modena. Since 2013 he has been a member of the Pontifical Academy of Social Sciences (Vatican City). He is a member of the scientific committees of various economic journals and holds honorary degrees in economics from the University of Prague, Francisco de Vitoria (Madrid), Catholic University of Cordoba (Argentina) and National University of Cordoba (Argentina).