

Acknowledgments

A volume like the present one represents a successful cooperative venture between authors, editors, and others assisting with the process of readying the manuscripts for publication. We thus happily acknowledge our indebtedness to the many individuals who played a role in the emergence of this book.

First and foremost, of course, we need to thank the many contributing authors, whose expertise in their respective subject matter and willingness to work with us made our editorial work easy. Special thanks are due moreover to those among them who joined the project early on and waited patiently for the book's publication.

We also owe a special word of thanks to two individuals, Anthony Cooper and Vincent Yadgood, both May 2018 graduates of Tulane University Law School, who over many months reliably provided extremely valuable editorial assistance to the project. Our thanks also go to Lorie Gendron and Janice Sayas, who assisted with manuscripts at various stages of the project.

Finally, we want to stress that notwithstanding the ready availability of documents and other materials on the internet, the proper editing of a book like this one requires substantial library support. We thus gratefully acknowledge the assistance this project enjoyed by Tulane University Law Library and its director, Prof. James Duggan.
