
Contributors

Abbas Alizadeh is a PhD Candidate in the Department of Tourism, University of Otago, New Zealand. Supervised by Associate Professor Filep and Professor Higham, his thesis focuses on the interconnections between tourists' responsible decisions and psychological well-being. Abbas served as a researcher from 2016 to 2017 in the Sustainable Development of Tourism Programme of the World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) providing research support on international processes and issues on sustainable development, including sustainable consumption and production, resilient tourism, travel facilitation, tourism security, and measuring sustainable tourism, among others.

Joshua D. Bernstein is a Lecturer in the Language Institute, Thammasat University, Thailand. His research interests include volunteerism is/as performance, the TEFL/ TESOL industry, and alternative/sustainable tourism.

Ingvild H. Blomstervik is a PhD student in Marketing in the Arctic University of Norway, focusing on co-creation in the tourism context.

Erik Cohen is Emeritus Professor, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is now based in Thailand. Erik does research in Social Anthropology, Sociological Theory and Tourism Studies. His main current projects are Animals in Tourism, and Space Tourism.

Antonia Correia holds a PhD from University of Algarve, Portugal. She has published on a wide range of articles in top-tier journals. She is involved in several tourism-based national and international research projects, particularly with her partners based in Europe. Antonia has also organised conferences or acted as a part of the scientific committee worldwide. Her research interests entail tourism consumer behaviour, marketing, and image measurement. Currently, she is affiliated to Universidade Europeia and Universidade do Algarve. She is also affiliated at CEFAGE, Research Center award by national science foundation in Portugal.

Larry Dwyer is Visiting Research Professor at University of Technology, Sydney and Adjunct Professor at Griffith Institute for Tourism (GIFT). He is the past Chair of the International Academy for the Study of Tourism with research interests in tourism economics, management and policy.

Deborah Edwards is an Associate Professor and Director (Postgraduate Research) in the Business School, University of Technology Sydney. She has published extensively in a wide variety of areas including tourism sustainability, business events, and visitor experiences. Deborah's research interests are in sustainable tourism management, festival and event impacts and the legacies of business events, tourists' spatial behaviour, and urban tourism precincts.

Daniel R. Fesenmaier is a Co-founder of the Tourism Education Futures Institute (TEFI), Fellow at the International Academy for the Study of Tourism, and Visiting Fellow at multiple universities, including appointments in Australia and Europe. He has worked at several universities in the United States including Temple and Florida International University. Dr Fesenmaier is the author of over 250 articles dealing with tourism marketing, advertising evaluation, and information technology. He has recently co-edited a book on design science in tourism.

Sebastian Filep is an Associate Professor based in the Department of Tourism, University of Otago, New Zealand. Filep's research focuses on explorations of well-being in tourism contexts, drawing from positive psychology (study of optimal human functioning). Filep is a co-author of Tourists, Tourism and the Good Life (Routledge, 2011), the lead editor of Tourist Experience and Fulfilment: Insights from Positive Psychology (Routledge, 2013) and the lead editor of Positive Tourism (Routledge, 2016). Filep is an Associate Editor of Leisure Sciences, a leading international journal in the field, and is an editorial board member of several major tourism, leisure and hospitality journals.

C. Michael Hall is a Professor in Marketing in the Department of Management, Marketing & Entrepreneurship, in University of Canterbury which he joined in 2007. His doctorate is in geography from the University of Western Australia. He has long-standing teaching and research interests in tourism and temporary mobility; regional development; environmental history, wine and food marketing and gastronomy.

Anja Hergesell is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the University of Technology Sydney's Centre for Business and Social Innovation. She received a PhD from Vienna University in Economics and Business for her research on vacation decision making and the determinants of environmentally friendly tourist choices. Anja has previously worked at universities in Austria and Denmark, and has been involved in a number of research projects in the areas of sustainable tourism, event management and impact assessment.

Hyelin (Lina) Kim, PhD, is an Assistant Professor in William F. Harrah College of Hospitality at University of Nevada, Las Vegas. She has worked on the development of theoretical models to better understand quality of life of tourists/residents/employees in tourism and hospitality contexts. She has also conducted research in understanding consumer/attendee behaviour in meetings and at events. She has published a number of peer-reviewed articles in academic journals and book chapters.

Metin Kozak holds a PhD degree from Sheffield Hallam University, UK. As a Research Fellow, Metin was affiliated with the University of Namur (Belgium) and as Visiting Professor at Hong Kong Polytechnic University (SAR China), and Bournemouth University (UK). He serves an editorial board member and ad hoc reviewer of over 20 journals in tourism and hospitality. He is elected as the Fellow of the International Academy for the Study of Tourism and Tourist Research Centre. His research interests include consumer behaviour, competitiveness, and branding. His current affiliation is with Dokuz Eylul University, Turkey and acting as the co-editor of the journal Anatolia.

Zihui Ma, PhD, is an Assistant Professor in residence in William F. Harrah College of Hospitality at University of Nevada, Las Vegas. Her research interests focus on exploring the business model of senior living from a hospitality viewpoint, specifically on the consumer's perception and behaviour towards senior living and quality of life of senior consumers. She has also conducted research in hospitality education, such as the effectiveness of financial management education and internship in hospitality programmes.

Matthew McDonald is a Senior Lecturer in the Asia Graduate Centre, RMIT University, Vietnam. His research interests include the social psychology of work and leisure, Continental philosophy applied to psychology, political economy and consumer culture.

Truc Ha Thanh Nguyen is a Research Assistant in the Asia Graduate Centre, RMIT University, Vietnam. Her research interests include ethical leadership, moral philosophy and institutional theory.

Hera Oktadiana earned her PhD from the School of Hotel and Tourism Management, the Hong Kong Polytechnic University. She also received CHE (Certified Hospitality Educator) from the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Institute. She has been the Head of Hotel Management/Hospitality and Tourism Departments at Bina Nusantara (BINUS) University and Bunda Mulia University, and Deputy Manager for the International Hotel and Tourism at Trisakti Institute of Tourism in Indonesia. She joined James Cook University, Australia as a Visiting Scholar (tourism research) in 2017, then later as an Adjunct Senior Lecturer. She is presently the Regional Vice President Southeast Asia of the International Tourism Studies Association (ITSA). Her research interests include tourism education and tourist behaviour.

Anja Pabel is a Lecturer in Tourism, School of Business and Law, Central Queensland University, Australia. Her research interests are tourist behaviour, marine tourism, tourism sustainability and humour research. Anja completed a Bachelor of Business with first class honours in 2009 and a PhD in tourism in 2015, both at James Cook University.

John R. Pearce holds a double degree with psychology and marketing with First Class Honours in Business. He is doing a Master's degree at Southern Cross University in the area of destination marketing and management. He has interests in social and environmental psychology and tourism.

Philip L. Pearce is the Foundation Professor of Tourism at James Cook University, Townsville, Australia and the first Professor of Tourism in Australia. He did his doctorate in social psychology at the University of Oxford. He has interests in many aspects of tourist behaviour, and has studied multiple markets across cultures.

Nina K. Prebensen is Professor at Buskerud and Vestfold University College, Norway, and holds a position as Professor at University of Tromsø, the Arctic University of Norway. Prebensen has been teaching in various marketing and tourism courses and tutored a number of Bachelor, Master and PhD students. She has edited a monograph titled Creating Experience Value in Tourism, and written a number of articles in refereed journals and book chapters. She is collaborating with international scholars doing research, editing books and publishing in international journals. Prebensen has and has had several board positions and has been collaborating with different businesses and business organisations for many years.

Jillian M. Rickly is an Associate Professor of Tourism Management and Marketing. She joined the Nottingham University Business School in 2014. She is a tourism geographer with interests in authenticity/alienation in tourism motivation and experience, the ethics of sustainability, and mobilities and well-being. She is Series Editor for De Gruyter Studies in Tourism and an Associate Editor for the Annals of Tourism Research. She is also a co-author of Tourism, Performance, and Place: A Geographic Perspective (2014, Ashgate) and co-editor of Tourism and Leisure Mobilities: Politics, Work, and Play (2017, Routledge), Event Mobilities: Politics, Place and Performance (2017, Routledge), and Authenticity & Tourism: Materialities, Perceptions, Experiences (2018, Emerald).

Muzaffer Uysal, PhD, is a Professor and chair of the Department of Hospitality and Tourism Management – Isenberg School of Management at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. He is a member of International Academy for the Study of Tourism, the Academy of Leisure Sciences. He has also authored and co-authored a significant number of articles, book chapters, monographs, and books. Dr Uysal has also received a number of awards for Research, Excellence in International Education, Teaching Excellence, Lifetime Achievement Awards, and best paper awards. His current research interests centre on tourism development and quality of life research in tourism and hospitality.

Stephen Wearing is an Honorary Professor in the Management Discipline Group, University of Technology, Sydney, Australia. His research interests include ecotourism, volunteer tourism, community development and the sociology of leisure.

Junjie Wen completed his PhD in Tourism at James Cook University in Australia, and now is a Lecturer at Tourism School, Sichuan University in China, serving as the Associate Director of Department of International Tourism and Hotel Management. His research interests include tourist behaviours in emerging markets, the on-site tourist experience in special interest tourism such as astronomy tourism and wine tourism. Most of his recent work attempted to build research links between the tourism contexts of Australia and China.

Mao-Ying Wu holds a Master's degree in Tourism from Zhejiang University and a PhD from James Cook University. She has interests in communities and tourism, tourism planning and new trends in the Chinese domestic and outbound markets. Her work has used a range of methods including netnographic studies, interviews, survey work and photo-elicitation procedures.

Chiemi Yagi holds a Master's degree from the University of Wisconsin Stout and a PhD from James Cook University. She works at the University of Ryukyus Okinawa, Japan and teaches tourist behaviour and general tourism subjects. She has interests in the perceptions of Japanese tourists abroad and tourist–tourist encounters.

Samira Zare obtained her Master's degree in Tourism Planning from Malaysia. She is a third year PhD Candidate in Tourism in James Cook University of Australia. Her doctoral research investigates the effects of travel order in remembering tourist destinations. She is working under the supervision of Professor Philip Pearce. Her research interests are tourists' behaviours, memorable tourism experiences, and intercultural studies in tourism.