Contributors

Alessandro Bozzini is an international development practitioner in the field of governance, specializing in transparency, accountability, anti-corruption, parliamentary support and civil society strengthening. He has worked for various organizations, such as Transparency International and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

Dr. Daniel Buquet Corleto holds a PhD in Political Science from the Latin American Faculty of Social Sciences (FLACSO-Mexico). He is a professor in the Faculty of Social Sciences of the University of the Republic of Uruguay. He has lectured as guest professor in several universities in Latin America and Spain, specializing in political parties and electoral systems in Latin America, and has published dozens of articles in books and magazines nationally and internationally.

Dr. Christian Göbel is Professor for Contemporary Chinese Studies at the University of Vienna. His current research is concerned with the political economy of innovation in authoritarian regimes. Dr. Göbel is author of The Politics of Rural Reform in China (Routledge, 2010) and The Politics of Community Building in Urban China (Routledge, 2011, with Thomas Heberer).

Michael Johnston is an Emeritus Professor at Colgate University, New York State. His publications include Syndromes of Corruption: Wealth, Power, and Democracy (Cambridge University Press, 2005); the edited volumes Public Sector Corruption (SAGE, 2010) and Civil Society and Corruption: Mobilizing for Reform (University Press of America, 2005); Political Corruption: Concepts and Contexts (Transaction Publishers, co-edited with Arnold J. Heidenheimer, 2002); Political Corruption: A Handbook (Cambridge University Press, co-edited with Arnold J. Heidenheimer and Victor LeVine, 1988); Fraud, Waste, and Abuse in Government (Institute for the Study of Human Resources, co-edited with Jerome B. McKinney, 1986); and Political Corruption and Public Policy in America (Brooks/Cole Pub., 1982). He has been a consultant to many international organizations and development agencies, including the World Bank, the OECD, the Asia Foundation, the New York State Commission on Governmental Integrity, USAID and the United Nations.

Dr. Valts Kalniņš was awarded his doctorate in political science from the University of Latvia. He has been a senior researcher at the Centre for Public Policy PROVIDUS, a Riga-based non-governmental think-tank, since 2003. He is also an assistant professor at the University of Latvia. He consults for the OECD and the European Commission (DG Home).

Dr. Lina Khatib is Head of the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) programme at Chatham House in London. Formerly she was the director of the Carnegie Middle East Center in Beirut and the co-founding head of the Program on Arab Reform and Democracy at Stanford University’s Center on Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law. Her research focuses on the international relations of the Middle East, Islamist groups and security, political transitions, and foreign policy, with special attention on the Syrian conflict. She has published seven books and has also written widely on public diplomacy, political communication, and political participation in the Middle East.

Dr. Alexander Kupatadze is an assistant professor at King’s College London, studying organized crime and corruption issues in post-Soviet Eurasia. He is the author of numerous articles and book chapters on smuggling, policing, and criminality. He holds a PhD in International Relations from St Andrews University. In 2012–14 Dr. Kupatadze was Oxford-Princeton postdoctoral fellow in Global Governance. Apart from academic research he has been advising various government, commercial and non-government institutions on corruption, crime, and informal politics in post-Soviet countries.

Maira Martini holds a Master of Public Policy (MPP) degree from the Hertie School of Governance in Berlin, and is a senior researcher with the Transparency International (TI) secretariat in Berlin.

Dr. Alina Mungiu-Pippidi chairs the European Research Centre for Anti-Corruption and State-Building (ERCAS) at the Hertie School of Governance in Berlin. Her theory of corruption has been published in various journal articles, most notably Nature, and at greater length in The Quest for Good Governance (Cambridge University Press, 2015). Dr. Mungiu-Pippidi has designed several corruption assessment methodologies, for instance to evaluate integrity in public universities or parliaments. She has consulted more recently for the governments of Sweden and the Netherlands, the World Bank, the European Commission and the Council of Europe. She designed the EU FP7 ANTICORRP project, which examined corruption and the responses to corruption around the world, and was the principal investigator of Work Package 3, which was the origin of the present book.
Contributors

Dr. Patricio Navia holds a PhD in political science from New York University. He is currently a Master Teacher of Global Studies in the Liberal Studies Program and an adjunct professor at the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies at the University of New York. He is also a professor in the School of Political Science, Universidad Diego Portales, Chile. He has been a visiting professor at several universities, including Princeton and the University of Chile. Dr. Navia has published on democratization, institutional design and electoral laws in Latin America in book chapters and scholarly articles.

Dr. Rafael Piñeiro holds a PhD from Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile and is an assistant professor with Universidad Católica del Uruguay, Department of Social and Political Sciences. He is the author of several papers on Uruguay and Chile politics.

David Sebudubudu is a professor in the Department of Political and Administrative Studies (PAS) of the Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Botswana. His research interests are democracy and development in sub-Saharan Africa.

Evelyn Villarreal (MPhil Latin American Studies, University of Oxford) is Research Coordinator at Programa Estado de la Nación (PEN), Costa Rica and has taught courses on Central America politics and methodology at UCR and UNED. She is a founding member and vice president of Costa Rica Íntegra, the national chapter of Transparency International.

Dr. Bruce M. Wilson is Professor of Political Science at the University of Central Florida, Orlando; Associated Senior Researcher, Chr. Michelsen Institute; and Global Fellow, Centre on Law and Social Transformation, Bergen, Norway. His peer-reviewed research has appeared in Comparative Political Studies, Journal of Latin American Studies and Comparative Politics. His books are Costa Rica: Politics, Economics, and Democracy (Lynne Rienner, 1998) and, as co-author, Courts and Political Power in Latin America and Africa (Palgrave Macmillan, 2010).

Dr. Jong-sung You holds a PhD in public policy from Harvard University. He has taught at the University of California, San Diego and Australian National University (ANU). His research interests include comparative politics and political economy of inequality, corruption, social trust, freedom of expression and election campaign regulations, with regional focus on Korea and East Asia. His book entitled Democracy, Inequality and Corruption: Korea, Taiwan and the Philippines Compared was released by Cambridge University Press in 2014. Dr. You’s articles on the causes of corruption and social trust were published in the American Sociological
Transitions to good governance

Review and Political Psychology. Before pursuing an academic career, he worked for democratization and social justice in South Korea, being imprisoned for more than two years because of his active role in the anti-dictatorship student movement under the military regimes.

Bianca Vaz Mondo, Aare Kasemets, Denise Misleh, Roberto Martinez Barranco Kukutschka, Dr. Ramin Dadašov and Sindy Natalia Alvarado Pachon were associated with the project in the early phases as ERCAS associates, and contributed documentation and statistical work. Christian van Soest and Thomas Richter were in charge of the project on behalf of the German Institute for Global Studies (GIGA). Philip Keefer, Michael Johnston and Robert Klitgaard reviewed the individual contributions. Special thanks go to the editors of Journal for Democracy, Larry Diamond and Marc F. Plattner, for publishing an advance sample of the present book in their winter 2016 issue.