
Contributors

Karen J. Alter is Professor of Political Science and Law at Northwestern University, and a permanent visiting professor at iCourts Center of Excellence, Copenhagen University Faculty of Law. Professor Alter's research has been supported by the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation, the American Academy of Berlin, the Howard Foundation, the German Marshall Fund, the DAAD, and the Bourse Chateaubriand Scientifique. Her book The New Terrain of International Law: Courts, Politics, Rights (Princeton University Press, 2014) provides a framework for comparing and understanding the influence of the 24 international courts, and for thinking about how different domains of domestic and international politics are transformed through the creation of international courts. Her most recent books are Transplanting International Courts: The Law and Politics of the Andean Tribunal of Justice (with Laurence R. Helfer, Oxford University Press, 2017) and International Court Authority (with Laurence R. Helfer and Mikael R. Madsen, Oxford University Press, 2018).

Steven Gow Calabresi is the Clayton J. and Henry R. Barber Professor of Law at Northwestern University and is a graduate of the Yale Law School (1983) and of Yale College (1980). Professor Calabresi has been a Visiting Professor of Law at Yale Law School, a Visiting Professor of Political Science at Brown University and a Scholar in Residence at Harvard Law School. Professor Calabresi served as a Law Clerk to Justice Antonin Scalia of the United States Supreme Court, and he also clerked for U.S. Court of Appeals Judges Robert H. Bork and Ralph K. Winter. From 1985 to 1990 he served in the Reagan and first Bush Administrations working both in the West Wing of the Reagan White House and before that in the U.S. Department of Justice. He is the co-author with Bradley G. Silverman and Joshua Braver of The U.S. Constitution and Comparative Constitutional Law, published in 2016.

Wen-Chen Chang is Professor and Director of Policy and Law Center for Environmental Sustainability at National Taiwan University College of Law. She has published major scholarly works on comparative constitutions, including Asian Courts in Context, with Jiunn-rong Yeh (Cambridge University Press, 2015) and Constitutionalism in Asia: Cases and Materials, with Kevin YL Tan, Li-ann Thio & Jiunn-rong Yeh (Hart Publishing, 2014). Professor Chang focuses her teaching and research on comparative constitutions, international human rights, international environmental law, administrative laws, and law and society. She also serves on the editorial boards of a number of leading academic journals including International Journal of Constitutional Law, Cambridge Journal of Global Constitutionalism, Asian Journal of Comparative Law, and National Taiwan University Law Review.

Erin F. Delaney is Professor of Law at Northwestern Pritzker School of Law, with a courtesy appointment in the Department of Political Science. Her research focuses on constitutional design and comparative constitutional law, with particular attention to the role of courts in multi-level governance systems. She held the Fulbright Visiting Research Chair in the Theory and Practice of Constitutionalism and Federalism at McGill University and has been a MacCormick Visiting Fellow at the University of Edinburgh Law School and a Wiener-Anspach Visiting Research Fellow at the Université Libre de Bruxelles. Professor Delaney served as a law clerk to Associate Justice David H. Souter of the Supreme Court of the United States and to Judge Guido Calabresi of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. She received a J.D., magna cum laude, from NYU School of Law and an A.B., magna cum laude, from Harvard College. Her Ph.D. dissertation (Cambridge University) was awarded the Walter Bagehot Prize from the United Kingdom Political Studies Association.

Rosalind Dixon is Professor of Law at the University of New South Wales (UNSW Sydney), Faculty of Law, whose research focuses on comparative constitutional law and constitutional design, theories of constitutional dialogue and amendment, socio-economic rights, and constitutional law and gender. She is on the Council, and is Co-President Elect, of the International Society of Constitutional Law, and on the Editorial Board of its associated journal, the International Journal of Constitutional Law; a member of the Gilbert + Tobin Centre of Public Law; and deputy director of the Herbert Smith Freehills Initiative on Law and Economics at UNSW. She previously served as an assistant professor at the University of Chicago Law School, and has been a visiting professor at Harvard Law School, Columbia Law School, the University of Chicago Law School, and the National University Singapore.

Lee Epstein is the Ethan A.H. Shepley Distinguished University Professor at Washington University in St. Louis. Her interests center on the U.S. Supreme Court, judicial behavior, empirical legal studies, and constitutional law. A recipient of 12 grants from the National Science Foundation for her work on law and legal institutions, Epstein has authored or co-authored more than 100 articles and essays, as well as 15 books, several multi-award winning. In addition to her appointment at Washington U., Epstein is a Distinguished Affiliated Professor at Hebrew University, Visiting Professor at the University of Bergen, and Lecturer in Law at the University of Chicago. She is also principal investigator of the U.S. Supreme Court Database and an elected member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Tom Ginsburg is the Leo Spitz Professor of International Law and Professor of Political Science at the University of Chicago and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He holds B.A., J.D., and Ph.D. degrees from the University of California at Berkeley. His books include Judicial Review in New Democracies (2003), which won the C. Herman Pritchett Award from the American Political Science Association; The Endurance of National Constitutions (2009), which also won a best book prize from APSA; Constitutions in Authoritarian Regimes (2014); and Judicial Reputation (2015). He currently co-directs the Comparative Constitutions Project, an effort funded by the National Science Foundation to gather and analyze the constitutions of all independent nation-states since 1789.

Jamal Greene is the Dwight Professor of Law at Columbia Law School. His scholarship focuses on the structure of legal and constitutional argument. Greene served as a law clerk to the Honorable Guido Calabresi on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and for the Honorable John Paul Stevens on the U.S. Supreme Court. He was an Alexander Fellow at the New York University School of Law and a Leo Gottlieb Visiting Professor of Law at Harvard Law School. Greene is the author of more than 30 law review articles, including publications in the Harvard Law Review, the Columbia Law Review, and the Yale Law Journal. He is a frequent media commentator on the Supreme Court and on constitutional law.

Alon Harel is the Phillip and Estelle Mizock Chaired Professor in Administrative and Criminal Law at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and a member of the Center of Rationality. His areas of expertise include moral and political philosophy, legal theory, law and economics, constitutional law, and criminal law. Professor Harel was a visiting professor at University of Chicago, Columbia Law School, Texas Law School and Boston University Law School. He was a fellow at the Ethics Center at University of Toronto and at Harvard University. Professor Harel's recent book Why Law Matters (Oxford University Press, 2014) argues that political and legal institutions are not merely means to bring about desirable outcomes such as justice, security and prosperity. Why Law Matters defends the argument that legal institutions and legal procedures are valuable and matter as such, irrespective of their instrumental value.

Ran Hirschl is Professor of Political Science and Law at the University of Toronto, Max Planck Fellow and holder of the Alexander von Humboldt Professorship in Comparative Constitutionalism, awarded by the Humboldt Foundation, Germany. He is the author of several major books, most recently Comparative Matters (Oxford University Press, 2014)—winner of the APSA C. Herman Pritchett Award—and over 100 articles and book chapters on comparative constitutional law and its intersection with comparative politics, religion, sociology and geography. Professor Hirschl served as co-president of the International Society of Public Law and is the recipient of prestigious awards, fellowships, and distinguished visiting professorships in five different countries. His work has been translated into various languages, featured in scholarly symposia worldwide, cited by high courts, and discussed in international media outlets. He is Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada (FRSC), the highest academic accolade in Canada.

Samuel Issacharoff is the Reiss Professor of Constitutional Law at New York University School of Law and a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He helped pioneer the study of the law of the political process with his articles and Law of Democracy casebook (co-authored with Stanford's Pam Karlan and NYU's Rick Pildes). That work was extended internationally in the study of the role of constitutional courts in stabilizing democracy, most notably in his monograph, Fragile Democracies. He is also a leading figure in the field of procedure, both in the academy and outside. He served as the reporter for the Principles of the Law of Aggregate Litigation of the American Law Institute. Professor Issacharoff is a 1983 graduate of the Yale Law School.

Vicki C. Jackson is Thurgood Marshall Professor of Constitutional Law at Harvard Law School and a member of the American Law Institute and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. She is the author of Constitutional Engagement in a Transnational Era (2010), and co-author, with Mark Tushnet, of Comparative Constitutional Law (3d ed. 2014), a leading course book in the field, and co-editor with Mark Tushnet of Proportionality: New Frontiers, New Challenges (2017). She has served on the Executive Committee of the Association of American Law Schools, on the Executive Committee of the International Association of Constitutional Law, on the Board of Managerial Trustees of the International Association of Women Judges, and on the D.C. Bar Board of Governors. She served as a law clerk for Justice Thurgood Marshall and has practiced law both in private practice and as a government lawyer in the Office of Legal Counsel in the U.S. Department of Justice.

Tonja Jacobi is Professor of Law at Northwestern Pritzker Law School. She has a Ph.D. in political science from Stanford University, a Masters from the University of California, Berkeley, and a law degree with first class honors from the Australian National University. Jacobi specializes in judicial behavior and strategy in public law. Her areas of interest include judicial politics, Supreme Court oral arguments, criminal procedure, and constitutional law. Combining doctrinal, empirical, and formal analysis, Jacobi examines how judges respond to institutional constraints. She has published in over 40 peer review and law review journals. Her current projects include an empirical study of Supreme Court oral arguments over time, a formal model of certiorari, and an experiment on understandings of police coercion.

Robert A. Kagan is Professor Emeritus of Political Science and Law at the University of California, Berkeley and a former director of Berkeley's Center for the Study of Law & Society. His publications include Regulatory Justice (1978); Going by the Book: The Problem of Regulatory Unreasonableness (1982, 2002) (with Eugene Bardach); Adversarial Legalism: The American Way of Law (2001); and Shades of Green: Business, Regulation, and Environment (2003) (with Neil Gunningham & Dorothy Thornton). Professor Kagan, a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, received the Law & Society Association's Harry Kalven Prize for Distinguished Contribution to Research (2006) and the Lifetime Achievement Award of the Law & Courts Section of the American Political Science Association (2012). He received his LL.B. from Columbia Law School (1962) and his Ph.D. in Sociology from Yale University (1974).

Diana Kapiszewski is Provost's Distinguished Associate Professor of Government at Georgetown University. Her research interests include public law, comparative politics, and research methods. Her book High Courts and Economic Governance in Argentina and Brazil (Cambridge University Press, 2012) received the APSA Law and Courts Section's C. Herman Pritchett Award. She has also co-edited Consequential Courts: Judicial Roles in Global Perspective (Cambridge University Press, 2013) and Beyond High Courts: The Justice Complex in Latin America (University of Notre Dame Press, forthcoming 2018). Kapiszewski also co-directs the Qualitative Data Repository and co-edits the Cambridge University Press Methods for Social Inquiry book series. She co-authored Field Research in Political Science: Practices and Principles (Cambridge University Press, 2015) and in 2013 was awarded the APSA Qualitative and Multi-Method Research section's Mid-Career Achievement Award. Her current work examines judicial politics and the uses of law in Latin America.

Jack Knight is the Frederic Cleaveland Professor of Law and Political Science at Duke University. His primary areas of interest lie at the intersection of law and politics. His major research focuses on issues in modern social and political theory, law and legal theory, and the political economy of institutions. His publications include Institutions and Social Conflict (Cambridge University Press, 1992), Explaining Social Institutions (with Itai Sened, The University of Michigan Press, 1995), The Choices Justices Make (with Lee Epstein, CQ Press, 1997) and The Priority of Democracy (with James Johnson, Princeton University, 2012), as well as articles in numerous law reviews, journals and edited volumes.

David Landau is the Mason Ladd Professor and Associate Dean for International Programs at Florida State University College of Law. He holds an A.B., J.D., and Ph.D. from Harvard University. Since 2012, he has been a founding editor of IConnect, the blog of the International Journal of Constitutional Law. Professor Landau writes primarily about the field of comparative constitutional law. His recent work has focused on democratic backsliding and the potential risks of constitutional amendment and constitution-making for democracy, as well as on judicial activism on socioeconomic rights issues. He has published in various journals including the Harvard International Law Journal, the International Journal of Constitutional Law, and the University of Chicago Law Review.

Yi-Li Lee is a Visiting Scholar at Global Taiwan Institute in Washington D.C., United States. She was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship and a scholarship from Taiwan's Ministry of Science and Technology to serve as a post-doctoral visiting fellow at the Human Rights Program and East Asian Legal Studies of Harvard Law School. Dr. Lee received her Ph.D. in law from National Taiwan University College of Law in 2014. Her academic interests cover a variety of topics including transitional justice, comparative constitutions, international human rights, international humanitarian law and international criminal law.

Hanna Lerner is Senior Lecturer in the School of Political Science, Government and International Affairs at Tel Aviv University. She is the author of Making Constitutions in Deeply Divided Societies (Cambridge University Press, 2011) and co-editor of Global Justice and International Labour Rights (with Yossi Dahan and Faina Milman-Sivan, Cambridge University Press, 2016) and of Constitution Writing, Religion and Democracy (with Asli Bali, Cambridge University Press, 2017). Her articles have appeared in numerous books and in journals including Law and Social Inquiry, World Politics, Michigan Journal of International Law, Theoretical Inquiries in Law, Constellations, Nations and Nationalism, Journal of Social Philosophy, and Cornell International Law Journal.

Sonia Mittal focuses her research on comparative constitutional law, criminal law and procedure, law and economics, and American political development. She will clerk for Chief Judge Robert A. Katzmann, United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, in 2019. She previously clerked for Judge Denise L. Cote, United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. She received a B.A. in History, and an M.A. and Ph.D. in Political Science from Stanford University. Her J.D. is from Yale Law School. Her work has appeared in the Northwestern University Law Review; Harvard Law & Policy Review; Journal of Law, Economics, & Organization; and the University of Pennsylvania Journal of Constitutional Law; among other publications. She served as a Trial Attorney at the United States Department of Justice working on complex corporate and individual white-collar criminal prosecutions.

Theunis Roux is Professor of Law at the University of New South Wales in Sydney. Before relocating to Australia in 2009, he was the founding director of the South African Institute for Advanced Constitutional, Public, Human Rights and International Law (SAIFAC), an independent research institute based on Constitution Hill, Johannesburg. His main research interest is the politics of judicial review in new democracies. His book on the Chaskalson Court (The Politics of Principle) was published by Cambridge University Press in 2013. His second monograph, The Politico-Legal Dynamics of Judicial Review: A Comparative Analysis, will be published by Cambridge in late 2018. He is a former Secretary-General of the International Association of Constitutional Law and was previously a co-editor of the leading loose-leaf commentary on South African constitutional law, Constitutional Law of South Africa.

Wojciech Sadurski is the Challis Professor in Jurisprudence at the University of Sydney Law School and Professor at the University of Warsaw, Centre for Europe. His interests include jurisprudence, legal theory, philosophy of law, political philosophy, constitutional theory, and comparative constitutionalism. His most recent books include Constitutionalism and the Enlargement of Europe (Oxford University Press, 2012), Equality and Legitimacy (Oxford University Press, 2008), and Rights before Courts (Springer, 2005 and 2014). He has previously taught at Yale Law School, the New York University School of Law, Cardozo Law School, Cornell Law School, National University of Singapore and the University of Trento. Currently he is working on books on (anti-)constitutional backsliding in Central Europe, in particular in Poland, and on constitutional public reason.

Adam Shinar is Associate Professor at the Radzyner Law School in IDC Herzliya. He holds an S.J.D. from Harvard Law School, where he also served as the Clark Byse Fellow. He also holds an LL.B. from the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and an LL.M. from Harvard Law School. He clerked for the President of the Israeli Supreme Court, Aharon Barak, and worked as an attorney for several human rights NGOs in Israel and India. He specializes in constitutional law and theory, administrative law, and labor law.

Virgílio Afonso da Silva is Professor of Law and Head of the Public Law Department at the University of São Paulo Law School. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Kiel, Germany. He was a visiting researcher at the Max Planck Institute of Comparative Public Law and at the Humboldt University in Berlin. He is the recipient of a scholarship for distinguished researchers from the Brazilian Research Council (CNPq). His articles and book chapters on balancing and proportionality, judicial review, human rights and socio-economic rights have been published in Brazil and other Latin American countries, as well as in leading international journals such as International Journal of Constitutional Law, Oxford Journal of Legal Studies, European Journal of Political Research, and Ratio Juris, among others. His book The Constitution of Brazil: A Contextual Analysis, will be published in the series Constitutional Systems of the World (Hart Publishing).

Gordon Silverstein is an Assistant Dean at Yale Law School, where he oversees the School's graduate degree programs, including the LL.M., M.S.L., J.S.D., and Ph.D., as well as the Visiting Researcher and Law Teaching programs. Before Yale, Silverstein served for many years as a faculty member in Political Science at the University of California, Berkeley. Silverstein is the author of two books: Law's Allure: How Law Shapes, Constrains, Saves and Kills Politics (Cambridge University Press, 2009), which won the C. Herman Pritchett Award from the American Political Science Association's Section on Law and Courts for best book of the year in 2010, and Imbalance of Powers: Constitutional Interpretation and the Making of American Foreign Policy (Oxford University Press, 1997). He is the co-editor of Consequential Courts: Judicial Roles in Global Perspective (Cambridge University Press, 2013). Silverstein earned his Bachelor's degree from Cornell University and his Ph.D. in political science at Harvard University.

Kristen Stilt is Professor of Law at Harvard Law School, where she is also the Director of the Islamic Legal Studies Program and Faculty Director of the Animal Law & Policy Program. Professor Stilt's research focuses on Islamic law and society in both historical and contemporary contexts. She was named a Carnegie Scholar for her work on constitutional Islam, and in 2013 was awarded a John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation Fellowship. Publications include Islamic Law in Action (Oxford University Press, 2011); "Constitutional Innovation and Animal Protection in Egypt," Law & Social Inquiry (forthcoming); and "Contextualizing Constitutional Islam: The Malaysian Experience," International Journal of Constitutional Law (2015). She is currently working on a new book project entitled Halal Animals, to be published by Oxford University Press.

Yvonne Tew is Associate Professor of Law at Georgetown University Law Center. Before joining the faculty at Georgetown, she taught at Columbia Law School as an Associate-in-Law, and was a Hauser Global Research Fellow at the New York University School of Law. She completed her Ph.D. in constitutional law at the University of Cambridge as a Gates Cambridge Scholar. Her dissertation was awarded the Distinction in Research Prize in the Arts and Humanities by St. Catharine's College, Cambridge, in 2012. While at the University of Cambridge, she served as the Editor-in-Chief of the Cambridge Student Law Review (the flagship student-run law review). Professor Tew received her first law degree from the University of Cambridge and completed her Masters in Law (LL.M.) at Harvard Law School.

Mila Versteeg is Class of 1941 Research Professor of Law and Director of the Human Rights Program at the University of Virginia School of Law. In 2017, Professor Versteeg was named an Andrew Carnegie Fellow. She earned her B.A. in public administration and first law degree from Tilburg University in the Netherlands in 2006, an LL.M. from Harvard Law School in 2007, and a D.Phil. in socio-legal studies in 2011 from Oxford University, where she was a Gregory Kulkes Scholar at Balliol College and recipient of an Arts and the Humanities Research Council Award. Prior to joining the Law School, Professor Versteeg worked at the U.N. Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute in Turin and at the Southern Africa Litigation Centre in Johannesburg.

Salma Waheedi is an Affiliated Scholar of the Islamic Legal Studies Program: Law and Social Change at Harvard Law School and a Clinical Instructor at the Harvard Law School International Human Rights Clinic. Ms. Waheedi received her J.D. from Northwestern Pritzker School of Law and holds an M.A. in Government and International Law from Georgetown University and an M.A. in International Affairs from American University. Her academic interests include comparative constitutional law, Islamic law, gender justice, and social and economic rights.

Barry R. Weingast is Ward C. Krebs Family Professor, Department of Political Science at Stanford University, a Senior Fellow at the Hoover Institution, and a member of the National Academy of Sciences and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. Professor Weingast's research focuses on the political foundation of markets, economic reform, and regulation. He has written extensively on problems of political economy of development, federalism and decentralization, legal institutions and the rule of law, and democracy. He has won numerous awards, including the William H. Riker Prize, the Heinz Eulau Prize (with Ken Shepsle), the Franklin L. Burdette Pi Sigma Alpha Award (with Kenneth Schultz), and the James L. Barr Memorial Prize in Public Economics. Professor Weingast is co-author of Violence and Social Orders: A Conceptual Framework for Interpreting Recorded Human History (with Douglass C. North and John Joseph Wallis, Cambridge University Press, 2009) and Analytic Narratives (Princeton University Press, 1998).

Emily Zackin is Assistant Professor at the Krieger School of Arts & Sciences at Johns Hopkins University. She earned her Ph.D. in politics from Princeton University. Professor Zackin is the author of Looking for Rights in All the Wrong Places: Why State Constitutions Contain America's Positive Rights (Princeton University Press, 2013), which focuses on three political movements that added positive rights to state constitutions. In particular, it examines the campaign for education rights, which spanned the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, the movement for positive labor rights, which occurred during the Gilded Age and Progressive Era, and the push to add environmental bills of rights to state constitutions during the 1960s and 1970s. Professor Zackin spent the 2016–17 academic year as a member in the School of Social Science at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, New Jersey. Her current book project focuses on the role of debt and debtors' movements in American constitutional and political development.