
Contributors

Mark Beeson is Professor of International Politics at the University of Western Australia. He has written extensively on the politics, economics and security of the broadly conceived Asia-Pacific region.

Andrea Benvenuti is a Senior Lecturer in International Relations and European Studies at the School of Social Sciences, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, University of New South Wales, Australia. Educated at Florence University, Monash University and Oxford University, Dr Benvenuti currently teaches twentieth-century international history and European politics at both undergraduate and postgraduate level. His research interests lie in the field of post-1945 international history with a strong focus on the Cold War. He recently published Cold War and Decolonisation: Australia's Policy towards Britain's End of Empire in Southeast Asia (Singapore: NUS Press, 2017). He is currently working on a co-authored book on the impact of Western power in shaping the Asian regional system (1900–1989) and on a single-authored book on the Western alliance and the challenge of non-alignment in Asia (1954–1961).

Axel Berkofsky is Senior Lecturer at the University of Pavia, Italy, and Senior Associate Research Fellow at the Milan-based Istituto per gli Studi di Politica Internazionale (ISPI). He is also Executive Committee Board Member at the Stockholm-based European Japan Advanced Research Network (EJARN) and Research Affiliate at the EU Centre for Japanese Studies at the Stockholm School of Economics. Previously, he was Senior Policy Analyst and Associate Policy Analyst at the European Policy Centre (EPC), and Research Fellow at the European Institute for Asian Studies (EIAS), both in Brussels, and also lectured and taught at numerous think tanks, research institutes and universities in Europe and Asia. His research interests are Japanese and Chinese foreign and security policies, Chinese history, Cold War history, Asian security and EU–Asia relations. He has authored and edited several books and numerous papers, articles and essays in academic journals, as well as newspapers and magazines.

Alan Bloomfield is a Lecturer at the University of Western Australia. He researches Australian and Indian foreign policy; his first book, India and the Responsibility to Protect, was published by Ashgate in 2015. He also researches international norms, in particular the Responsibility to Protect or 'R2P' norm, as well as norm dynamics theory, and he edited the 2017

Routledge book Norm Antipreneurs and the Politics of Resistance to Global Normative Change. He has also published articles in leading journals including Review of International Studies, Pacific Review, Contemporary Security Policy, Australian Journal of Politics and History, and India Review.

Kerry Brown is Professor of Chinese Studies, Director of the Lau China Institute, King's College, London, and Associate Fellow, Chatham House. He is the author of over ten books on contemporary China, the most recent of which is China's World (London: I.B. Tauris, 2017).

Jai Galliot is a Researcher at the University of New South Wales at the Australian Defence Force Academy. His expertise spans defence strategy and ethics as they pertain to emerging military technologies. He is author of Military Robots: Mapping the Moral Landscape (London: Routledge, 2015).

Yee-Kuang Heng Professor at the Graduate School of Public Policy, University of Tokyo. Before joining UTokyo, he was Associate Professor at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, National University of Singapore (NUS), where he also served as Assistant Dean for Research. He graduated from the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE) with a BSc (First Class Honours) and subsequently PhD in International Relations funded by a British government research scholarship. After completing his PhD at the LSE, he held faculty positions at Trinity College Dublin, Ireland and the University of St Andrews, United Kingdom. His research interests comprise Security Studies; Great Power Politics; Soft Power in the Asia-Pacific and the Globalization of Risk and Strategic Studies. His work includes peer-reviewed articles in journals such as Global Governance, The Pacific Review, International Relations in the Asia-Pacific, Security Dialogue, and Journal of Strategic Studies. His fourth and most recent book is Managing Global Risks in the Urban Age: Singapore and the making of a Global City (London: Routledge, 2016).

Meghan Iverson is a foreign policy and international affairs specialist with expertise in strategy development and operational planning. She has extensive experience advising top leaders in the US and allied governments, the armed forces, and in the private sector on political and military risks. She worked for the US Department of Defense from 2009 to 2016, specializing in assessments of China, Russia, and transnational security challenges. She is finalizing an MA in Science and Security with a focus on emerging technologies at King's College London, and holds a BA in Political Science from Loyola University New Orleans.

Van Jackson joined Victoria University of Wellington in 2017 as a Senior Lecturer in International Relations. He is also the Defence and Strategy Fellow with the Centre for Strategic Studies. Van's research broadly concerns the intersection of US strategy and the Asia-Pacific. He is the author of numerous journal articles, book chapters, and policy reports, as well as the 2016 book with Cambridge University Press, Rival Reputations: Coercion and Credibility in US–North Korea Relations. Prior to joining Victoria, Van taught courses on Asian security, US foreign policy, and Korea and Japan at Georgetown University, Hawaii Pacific University, the Catholic University of America, and the Asia-Pacific Center for Security Studies. His research has been funded by the Smith Richardson Foundation, the Academy of Korean Studies, and the Council on Foreign Relations, and he has held policy research appointments with the Center for a New American Security, the Council on Foreign Relations, and Pacific Forum CSIS. Before becoming a scholar, Van was a practitioner of foreign and defence policy, serving in several positions in the Office of the US Secretary of Defense from 2009 to 2014, as well as the US Air Force, from 2000 to 2006.

S.R. Joey Long is Associate Professor of History at the National University of Singapore. His main fields of interest are the cold and hot wars in post-Second World War Southeast Asia, the history of American foreign relations with Asia, the history of Singapore, and Asia-Pacific security. He has published on those subjects, and is the author of Safe for Decolonization: The Eisenhower Administration, Britain, and Singapore (Kent, OH: Kent State University Press, 2011). Fellowships and awards he has received include a Fulbright Grant, the Lawrence Gelfand-Armin Rappaport Fellowship from the Society for Historians of American Foreign Relations, and the Holland Rose Trust Award from the University of Cambridge.

David W. Lovell (PhD ANU) is a Professor of International and Political Studies at the University of New South Wales Canberra at the Australian Defence Force Academy. For more than a decade he was Head of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at UNSW Canberra, and is currently Associate Dean (International). He is a member of the Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia-Pacific (CSCAP), and has written or edited nearly 20 books on topics from Asia-Pacific security, through Australian politics, communist and post-communist systems, and the challenges of democratization, to the history of ideas.

Andrew O'Neil is Professor of Political Science and Dean of Research in the Griffith Business School, Griffith University, Australia. He is the author of a wide range of publications examining security in the Asia-Pacific and more specifically on the Korean peninsula. O'Neil has won research income from a range of grant agencies to investigate these issues, and is also a frequent media commentator. He is an editorial board member of the Korean Journal of International Studies and the North Korean Review.

Harsh V. Pant is Distinguished Fellow and Head of Strategic Studies at Observer Research Foundation, New Delhi. He holds a joint appointment as Professor of International Relations in the Defence Studies Department and the India Institute at King's College London. He is also a Non-Resident Fellow with the Wadhvani Chair in US–India Policy Studies at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, Washington, DC. He has been a Visiting Professor at the Indian Institute of Management, Bangalore; a Visiting Fellow at the Center for the Advanced Study of India, University of Pennsylvania; a Visiting Scholar at the Center for International Peace and Security Studies, McGill University; and an Emerging Leaders Fellow at the Australia–India Institute, University of Melbourne. His current research is focused on Asian security issues. His most recent books include The US Pivot and Indian Foreign Policy (London: Palgrave Macmillan, 2015), Handbook of Indian Defence Policy (London: Routledge, 2015), and The US–India Nuclear Pact: Policy, Process and Great Power Politics (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2011).

Benjamin Schreer is Professor and Head of the Department of Security Studies and Criminology at Macquarie University, Sydney. Previous positions included senior analyst for defence strategy at the Australian Strategic Policy Institute (ASPI); senior lecturer at the Strategic and Defence Studies Centre (SDSC) at the Australian National University; and senior analyst at the German Institute for International and Security Studies (Stiftung Wissenschaft und Politik, SWP). He has published widely on international security and defence affairs, including East Asian strategic trends.

Paul J. Smith is Professor of National Security Affairs at the US Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island (USA). He has published over 35 journal articles and chapters on subjects related to transnational security and the international politics of East Asia (with particular emphasis on the People's Republic of China). His edited books include Human Smuggling: Chinese Migrant Trafficking and the Challenge to America's Immigration Tradition (Washington, DC: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1997) and Terrorism and Violence in Southeast Asia: Transnational Challenges to States and Regional Stability (London: M.E. Sharpe, 2004). He is author of the book The Terrorism Ahead: Confronting Transnational Violence in the 21st Century (London: M.E.

Sharpe, 2007). Dr Smith frequently provides commentary for national and international news organizations. He earned his BA from Washington and Lee University, his MA from the University of London (School of Oriental and African Studies-SOAS) and his JD and PhD (political science) from the University of Hawaii.

Sean Kenji Starrs is Assistant Professor of International Relations in the Department of Asian and International Studies at City University of Hong Kong, and Research Affiliate at the Center for International Studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He gratefully acknowledges the Hong Kong Research Grants Council for fully supporting the empirical research in his chapter, Grant #21615915.

Douglas Stuart is the first holder of the Stuart Chair in International Studies at Dickinson College. He is also an Adjunct Research Professor at the US Army War College. His research focuses on American security policy in the Indo-Asia-Pacific and proposals for reform of the US national security bureaucracy. His recent publications include The Pivot To Asia: Can it Serve as the Foundation for American Grand Strategy in the 21st Century?, a monograph published by the Strategic Studies Institute of the US Army War College in 2016.

Robert Sutter is Professor of Practice of International Affairs at George Washington University. Dr Sutter (Harvard PhD) has published 21 books, and hundreds of articles and government reports dealing with China, Asia and the United States. He has almost 50 years of university teaching experience. In government (1968–2001), he served as Director of the Foreign Affairs and National Defense Division of the Congressional Research Service, National Intelligence Officer for East Asia, and China Division Director at the State Department's intelligence bureau.

Andrew T.H. Tan is Associate Professor at the Department of Security Studies and Criminology, Macquarie University, Australia. He was previously Associate Professor at the University of New South Wales and has also taught at Kings College London, UK. Andrew has published 17 sole-authored, edited and co-edited books, and over 60 refereed journal and chapter articles. Some of his latest books include: US–China Relations (Cheltenham, UK and Northampton, MA: Edward Elgar Publishing, 2016), Security and Conflict in East Asia (London: Routledge, 2015), The Arms Race in Asia: Trends, Causes and Implications (London: Routledge, 2014), East and Southeast Asia: International Relations and Security Perspectives (London: Routledge, 2013), Security Strategies in the Asia-Pacific (London: Palgrave Macmillan, 2011) and US Strategy Against Global Terrorism: How it Evolved, Why it Failed and Where it is Headed (London: Palgrave Macmillan, 2009). Andrew is listed in the United Nations Global Experts Database.

Jeffrey D. Wilson is a Senior Lecturer in International Political Economy in the Asia Research Centre at Murdoch University. He is also the Head of Research at the Perth US-Asia Centre. Jeffrey specialises in economic regionalism, trade and resource/energy politics in the Asia-Pacific. He consults for governments in the region on trade, energy and security policy issues; and is a sought-after commentator on Asian international affairs in international media. He is widely published on the political economy of Asian regionalism, and his latest book is International Resource Politics in the Asia Pacific: The Political Economy of Conflict and Cooperation (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2017).

Pichamon Yeophantong is an ARC DECRA Fellow and Lecturer in International Relations and Development at UNSW Canberra at the Australian Defence Force Academy. She is also the Director of the Environmental Justice and Human Rights Project at the Australian Human Rights Centre. Previously, Pichamon was a Global Leaders Fellow at Princeton University and Oxford University, and an ASEAN-Canada Senior Fellow at Nanyang Technological University. Her work has appeared in many edited volumes and journal publications, including Asian Survey, Chinese Journal of International Politics and Pacific Affairs.

Jingdong Yuan is Associate Professor at the Centre for International Security Studies, the University of Sydney. Professor Yuan specializes in Asia-Pacific security, Chinese defence and foreign policy, Sino-Indian relations, and global and regional nuclear arms control and non-proliferation issues. Between 1999 and 2010, he was Director of East Asia Nonproliferation Program, James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies, Monterey Institute of International Studies. Professor Yuan has held visiting appointments at the Cooperative Monitoring Center, Sandia National Laboratories, National University of Singapore, the University of Macau, East-West Center, National Cheng-chi University, and Mercator Institute for China Studies. He is co-author of Chinese Cruise Missiles: A Quiet Force-Multiplier (Lynne Rienner, 2003), China and India: Cooperation or Conflict? (Washington, DC: National Defence University Press, 2014) and co-editor of Australia and China at 40 (Sydney, University of NSW Press, 2012). His publications have appeared in Asia Policy, Asian Affairs, Asian Survey, Asian Perspective, Contemporary Security Policy, Far Eastern Economic Review, The Hindu, The International Herald Tribune, International Affairs, International Journal, International Politics, Jane's Intelligence Review, Japan Times, Journal of Contemporary China, Journal of Current Chinese Affairs, Journal of International Affairs, Korean Journal of Defense Analysis, The Los Angeles Times, Moscow Times, Nonproliferation Review, Security Challenges, The Washington Quarterly and in many edited volumes. He is currently working on a book manuscript on China–South Asian relations.