

---

Contributors

---

Pamela Aall is a Senior Advisor for Conflict Prevention and Management at the United States Institute of Peace (USIP), a Senior Fellow at the Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI) and an Adjunct Professor at American University. She serves on the board of Women in International Security and is a member of the World Refugee Council. She has co-authored and co-edited a number of articles and books in the field of conflict management.

Zorzeta Bakaki is a Lecturer in the Department of Government at the University of Essex, UK. Her research and teaching interests include international relations, the quantitative and qualitative analysis of conflict management and resolution, international cooperation, and environmental politics.

John Bangerter is Fusion Center Security Advisor at the Microsoft Virtual Security Operations Center. He has a Masters of International Affairs from the Penn State School of International Affairs.

Matthew Barrett is a senior International Studies major and research assistant to Dr. Karl DeRouen, Director of the International Studies program at the University of Alabama. He is focusing on peace and conflict studies, concentrating on Russia and Eastern Europe.

Kyle Beardsley is a Professor of Political Science at Duke University. He is Co-director of the International Crisis Behavior data project. His research interests include questions related to the role of third parties in managing conflict, the relationship between gender power imbalances and international security, the interdependence of international actors, and the impact of nuclear weapons on international crisis behavior. He is the author of two books, The Mediation Dilemma (2011) and Equal Opportunity Peacekeeping (2017) (the latter with Sabrina Karim), as well as numerous articles.

Dani Belo is a PhD student at the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs at Carleton University, Canada. His research focuses on the evolution of NATO–Russia relations, Russian foreign and domestic policy, hybrid warfare, conflict mediation, ethnic conflict, and nationalism in the post-Soviet space. He is the Editor-in-Chief of the Paterson Review of International Affairs journal and a regular contributor to iAffairs Canada.

Tobias Böhmelt is a Professor in the Department of Government at the University of Essex, UK. His main research and teaching interests are the quantitative analysis of conflict and cooperation, environmental politics, international mediation, military effectiveness, and network analysis.

J. Arthur Boutellis is a non-resident adviser at the International Peace Institute (IPI) in New York, where he was Director of the Brian Urquhart Center for Peace Operations until November 2017, and a Lecturer at Columbia University. He has worked with the United Nations Missions in Burundi (BINUB), Chad, the Central African Republic (MINURCAT), and Haiti (MINUSTAH), as well as the UN Mission in Mali (MINUSMA), where he supported the 2014–15 Mali peace negotiations as part of the UN Mediation Team. His prior work with humanitarian non-governmental organizations and think tanks focused on the Middle East and Africa.

Michael Brecher is R.B. Angus Professor of Political Science at McGill University, Canada. He and Jonathan Wilkenfeld were Co-directors of the International Crisis Behavior (ICB) Project from its inception in 1975 to 2015. Among his 22 books, two received international prizes: NEHRU: A Political Biography (1959), for which he received the Watumull Prize of the American Historical Association (AHA) in 1960 for its contribution to the understanding of modern Indian history and politics; and The Foreign Policy System of Israel: Setting, Images, Process (1972), for which he received the Woodrow Wilson Prize of the American Political Science Association (APSA) for the best book in political science in 1972.

David Carment is Professor of International Affairs at the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs, Carleton University, Ottawa and Editor of Canadian Foreign Policy Journal. In addition, Carment serves as the principal investigator for the Country Indicators for Foreign Policy project. His research focuses on developing fragile states' risk assessment and early warning methodologies as well as evaluating models of third-party intervention.

Ayşe Betül Çelik is Professor of Political Science and Conflict Resolution at the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences at Sabancı University, Turkey. She is an expert on ethnic conflict, reconciliation, dialogue, forced migration and gender and peacebuilding.

Kenneth Christie is Professor and Program Head in Human Security and Peacebuilding at Royal Roads University, British Columbia. He is the author, co-author, editor, and co-editor of 12 books, the most recent being Migration, Refugees and Human Security in the Mediterranean and MENA (co-edited with Marion Boulby, 2018). He has also held senior appointments at universities in the UK, USA, Singapore, South Africa, Norway, and the UAE.

Chester A. Crocker is the James R. Schlesinger Professor of Strategic Studies at Georgetown University, Washington DC. He is a former Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs and was principal architect of the diplomacy leading to Namibian independence and Cuban withdrawal from Angola. He served as Chairman of the United States Institute of Peace from 1992 to 2004. He is a founding member of the Global Leadership Foundation.

David E. Cunningham is an Associate Professor of Government and Politics at the University of Maryland and a Research Associate at the Peace Research Institute Oslo. He is the author of Barriers to Peace in Civil Wars (2011), and his research has appeared in the American Journal of Political Science, International Organization, Journal of Conflict Resolution, and World Politics, among other outlets. His current research focuses on conflict prevention and international influences on dissident behavior.

Karl DeRouen Jr. is Professor of Political Science and Director of the International Studies BA program at the University of Alabama. His research interests are mediation, civil war peace agreements, civil war dynamics, and international political economy. He has published over 50 peer-reviewed articles, and his most recent book is An Introduction to Civil Wars (2014). DeRouen created the Civil War Mediation dataset.

Paul F. Diehl is Associate Provost, Ashbel Smith Professor of Political Science, and Director of the Center for Teaching and Learning at the University of Texas-Dallas. He is the co-author most recently of The Puzzle of Peace (2016). He served as President of the International Studies Association for the 2015–16 term. His areas of expertise include the causes of war, UN peacekeeping, and international law.

Yasin Duman is a PhD researcher at the Centre for Trust, Peace and Social Relations (CTPSR) at Coventry University, UK. His research areas are displacement and integration of Syrian refugees in Turkey, and post-2011 Kurdish politics and de facto autonomy in northern Syria (Rojava), with a focus on conflict resolution and peacebuilding.

Scott Sigmund Gartner is Professor of International Affairs and Director of the Penn State School of International Affairs. His research has appeared in The American Political Science Review, The American Sociological Review, The Journal of Politics, The Journal of Conflict Resolution, International Studies Quarterly, The Journal of Peace Research, and many other outlets. His books include International Conflict Mediation: New Approaches and Findings (2009) and Strategic Assessment in War (1997). His most recent research (published in Foreign Policy Analysis) studies the connection between error avoidance and decisions regarding torture. His areas of expertise include conflict management and mediation as well as national security, strategic assessment, and counter-terrorism.

Michele Gelfand is Distinguished University Professor of Psychology at the University of Maryland. She uses field, experimental, computational, and neuroscience methods to understand the evolution of culture and its multilevel consequences for human groups. She received the 2017 Outstanding International Psychologist Award from the American Psychological Association, the 2016 Diener Award from the Society for Personality and Social Psychology, and the Annaliese Research Award from the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation. Her work that was published in Science was honored with the Gordon Allport Intergroup Relations Prize from the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues.

Stephen E. Gent is an Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His areas of expertise include conflict management, international legal dispute resolution, and military intervention. His research has appeared in The Journal of Politics, International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Conflict Resolution, and Journal of Peace Research, among other outlets.

Zackary Goncz is a policy analyst for the city of New York, Department of Citywide Administrative Services. He has a Masters of International Affairs from the Penn State School of International Affairs.

J. Michael Greig is Professor of Political Science and University Distinguished Teaching Professor at the University of North Texas. He is the co-author of International Mediation (2012), and his research has appeared in The Journal of Politics, American Journal of Political Science, International Studies Quarterly, and Journal of Conflict Resolution, among other outlets. His most recent research examines the onset and termination of civil conflict, the application and effectiveness of peacekeeping, and the use of diplomacy to mitigate conflict in the international system.

Fen O. Hampson is Distinguished Fellow and Director of the Global Security and Politics Program at the Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI). Most recently, he served as Director of the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs (NPSIA), where he is concurrently Chancellor's Professor at Carleton University in Ottawa, Canada. He is also Director of the World Refugee Council. He is the author/co-author of 13 books and editor/co-editor of 28 other volumes.

Evan Hoffman is a Senior Associate at the Canadian International Institute of Applied Negotiation. He has provided consulting services to Global Affairs Canada (GAC), the Carter Center, the UN, the EU, the Ottawa Police Service, St. Lawrence College (Cornwall), the Vietnamese Ministry of Justice, and others. Over the last ten years, he has conducted workshops and training sessions with hundreds of community leaders, university students, police officers, and government officials from around the world.

P. Terrence Hopmann is Professor of International Relations and former Director of the Conflict Management Program at the School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), Johns Hopkins University. He is a former professor and chair of the Political Science Department at Brown University, where he was Director of the Global Security Program of the Thomas J. Watson Jr. Institute of International Studies, the Center for Foreign Policy Development and the International Relations Program; was Professor of Political Science at the University of Minnesota and Director of its Center for International Studies; served as Vice President of the International Studies Association and Program Chair of three ISA international meetings; was Editor of International Studies Quarterly; was a Fulbright Fellow in Belgium and Austria; and was a Senior Fellow at the United States Institute of Peace and the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. His main research focuses on the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE).

Lisa Hultman is an Associate Professor of Peace and Conflict Research at Uppsala University, Sweden. Her research focuses on civil war dynamics and international interventions, with a particular interest in UN peacekeeping and the protection of civilians. Her work is published in American Political Science Review, International Organization, American Journal of Political Science, and Journal of Politics, among other outlets.

Luke Kemp is a Research Associate (Foresight) at the Centre for the Study of Existential Risk (CSER) in Cambridge University. He is an expert in international environmental policy and advised the Australian Parliament on the ratification of the 2015 Paris Agreement on Climate Change. His work on international relations and environmental policy has appeared in Nature Climate Change, Climate Policy, and International Environmental Agreements. His research has been covered by international media outlets such as the New York Times, the Guardian, the Washington Post, and the New Yorker.

Roudabeh Kishi is Research Director of the Armed Conflict Location and Event Data Project (ACLED). She is also an Honorary Fellow in African Studies at the Center for Research on Gender and Women at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Her research has appeared in The Journal of Conflict Resolution, Terrorism and Political Violence, and Peace Economics, Peace Science and Public Policy. Her research explores political violence through a variety of lenses, such as direct and indirect government repression, the impact of external aid and investment, and political violence targeting women.

Ryan C. Maness is an Assistant Professor in the Defense Analysis Department at the Naval Postgraduate School. His research includes cyber conflict, cyber security, cyber coercion, cyber strategies, information warfare, Russian foreign policy, American foreign policy, and conflict-cooperation dynamics between states using Big Data. He is co-author of Russia's Coercive Diplomacy: Energy, Cyber and Maritime Policy as New Sources of Power (2015), Cyber War versus Cyber Realities: Cyber Conflict in the International System (2015), and Cyber Strategy: The Evolving Character of Power and Coercion (2018).

Molly M. Melin is an Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at Loyola University Chicago. Her publications on third-party interventions in international conflicts, the dynamics of conflict expansion, and peacekeeping operations have appeared in International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Conflict Resolution, Conflict Management and Peace Science, and International Interactions. Her current research explores the role of the private sector in peacebuilding.

Elizabeth J. Menninga is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Iowa. Her research focuses on the impact of mediation, especially multiparty mediation, on conflict resolution. Her research has appeared in The Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, International Interactions, International Theory, and Conflict Management and Peace Science, among other outlets.

Milana Nikolko is an Adjunct Professor at the Institute of European, Russian and Eurasian Studies (EURUS), Carleton University, Canada. She is Co-editor (with David Carment) of the volume Post-Soviet Migration and Diasporas: From Global Perspectives to Everyday Practices (2017). Her fields of interest include research on Ukraine's national building process, mediation of gray zone conflicts, a study on political narratives of victimization in ethnic discourses, migration and diaspora groups on post-Soviet space, and research on social capital and diaspora networks in comparative perspective.

Paul Olander is a doctoral candidate at Loyola University Chicago. His research focuses on the role of private military and security contractors in civil wars.

Andrew P. Owsiak is an Associate Professor of International Affairs at the University of Georgia. His areas of expertise include interstate conflict and conflict management processes, including diplomacy, territorial disputes, rivalries, war, and non-violent conflict management strategies. His published articles appear in The Journal of Politics, The British Journal of Political Science, International Studies Quarterly, and Journal of Conflict Resolution, among other outlets.

David Quinn is a Research Associate in the National Consortium for the Study of Terrorism and Responses to Terrorism (START), University of Maryland, and Project Manager for the International Crisis Behavior (ICB) and Mediating Intrastate Crises (MISC) data projects. His research interests include mediation, and international and intrastate crisis. His research has appeared in the Journal of Conflict Resolution, Conflict Management and Peace Science, and International Interactions, and he is co-author of the book Mediating International Crises (2005) with Jonathan Wilkenfeld, Kathleen Young, and Victor Asal.

Lindsay Reid is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of California, Davis. Her research has appeared in Journal of Conflict Resolution and International Theory. Her areas of expertise include intrastate conflict and conflict management, with recent research examining third-party mediation, civil war peace agreements, gender and conflict, and quality of post-conflict peace.

Michelle Sarver is a Senior New Business Specialist at DAI Global, supporting the development of proposals for USAID-funded projects in Asia and the Pacific. She has a Masters of International Affairs from the Penn State School of International Affairs.

Natalie Schreffler studies women in politics and advocates for immigrant rights in Denver, Colorado. She has a Masters of International Affairs from the Penn State School of International Affairs.

John A. Stevenson is a Principal Research Scientist at NSI, Inc. Prior to NSI, he was an assistant research scientist at START located at the University of Maryland. His peer-reviewed research primarily concerns security dynamics in sub-Saharan Africa, examining the use of state-sponsored genocide memorials to create ideological support for an authoritarian regime in Rwanda, as well as an empirical analysis comparing the effectiveness of counter-terrorism strategies against Boko Haram in Nigeria and Cameroon. His current research efforts include a book project using organizational psychology to illustrate how commercial firms can overcome common organizational blind-spots to harness the best ideas of their teams, as well as an analysis of international influences on violent contentious refugee mobilization in a comparative analysis of the Tutsi diaspora in the Great Lakes region of central Africa.

Isak Svensson is Professor at the Department of Peace and Conflict Research, Uppsala University, Sweden, and former Director of Research at the National Centre for Peace and Conflict Studies, University of Otago, New Zealand. His research focuses on international mediation in civil wars, religious dimensions of armed conflict, and dynamics of non-violent civil resistance. His articles appear in Journal of Peace Research, Journal of Conflict Resolution, European Journal of International Relations, and International Negotiation. He is the author of several books, including Ending Holy Wars: Religion and Conflict Resolution in Civil Wars (2012) and International Mediation Bias and Peacemaking: Taking Sides in Civil Wars (2015).

Brandon Valeriano is the Donald Bren Chair of Armed Conflict at the Marine Corps University. He has published five books and dozens of articles. His two most recent books are Cyber War versus Cyber Reality (2015) and Cyber Strategy (2018). Current research explores cyber coercion, big data in cyber security, repression in cyberspace, and the influence of video games on foreign policy.

Siniša Vuković is an Assistant Professor in the Conflict Management Program at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS). He also holds visiting professorships at the universities of Amsterdam and Leiden. His teaching and research focuses on various forms of international conflict resolution, negotiation, and mediation. He has published in a range of scholarly journals such as Washington Quarterly, Cooperation and Conflict, Studies in Conflict and Terrorism, Millennium Journal of International Studies, International Journal of Conflict Management, International Negotiation, and Acta Politica, as well as policy-relevant outlets such as Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, World Economic Forum, Sustainable Security, and Policy Forum. His book International Multiparty Mediation and Conflict Management was published in 2015.

Peter B. White is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Auburn University. His research appears in the Journal of Politics, International Organization, the British Journal of Political Science, and Security Studies, among other outlets. His current research focuses on the interaction of civil–military relations and armed conflict, security sector reform, and conflict prevention.

Jonathan Wilkenfeld is Professor Emeritus in the Department of Government and Politics where he served as Chair from 1990 to 2002, and Research Professor at the Center for the Study of Terrorism and Responses to Terrorism at the University of Maryland. He has been Director of the ICONS simulation project and Co-director of the International Crisis Behavior (ICB) project. His books and articles focus on conflict processes, international crises, and conflict resolution, with a particular emphasis on mediation. He was awarded the Distinguished Scholar Award of the Foreign Policy Section of the International Studies Association in 2004.

Marie-Joëlle Zahar is Professor of Political Science and Director of the Research Network on Peace Operations at the Université de Montréal and a non-resident Senior Fellow at the Brian Urquhart Center for Peace Operations of the International Peace Institute (IPI) in New York. A specialist in civil wars and conflict resolution, her research has focused on the logics of violence in peace processes and the conditions of sustainable peace, with comparative experience in the Balkans, the Middle East, and sub-Saharan Africa. Between 2013 and 2015, she served on the United Nations' Standby Team of Mediation Experts, and in that capacity supported the UN Mediation Team to the 2014–15 Mali peace negotiations.

I. William Zartman is the Jacob Blaustein Distinguished Professor Emeritus at the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) and member of the International Steering Committee of the Processes of International Negotiations (PIN) Program at GIGA-Hamburg. He is the author of a number of books on mediation and negotiation, including Preventing Deadly Conflict (2015); Negotiation and Conflict Management: Essays on Theory and Practice (2010); Cowardly Lions: Missed Opportunities to Prevent Deadly Conflict and State Collapse (2005); Ripe for Resolution (1989); and The Practical Negotiator (1982). He holds honorary doctorates from Louvain and Uppsala universities.