Contributors

Salima Ahmadou is a Moroccan national and MA student in Development Studies at the International Institute of Social Studies, Erasmus University Rotterdam, the Netherlands. She has ample experience working with civil society organisations focusing on gender, youth, social movements and democratisation in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region.

Zeineb Alsabeehg is a young political scientist. She received her BA and MA in Political Science from the University of Oslo. Her fields of interest are the Middle East with an emphasis on the Gulf region, the Arab Uprisings, citizenship and statelessness. She engages with non-governmental organisations (NGOs) for the cause of human rights in Bahrain, and she writes in the Norwegian press about the situation in Bahrain and the Gulf. Her contribution to this book is based on her MA thesis, From Citizen to Non-Existent: A Study of Bahrain’s Politics of Citizenship (2017).

Sylvia I. Bergh (a Swedish national) is Associate Professor in Development Management and Governance at the International Institute of Social
The Middle East in transition

Nathalie Bernard-Maugiron is a Senior Researcher at the French National Research Institute for Sustainable Development (IRD/CEPED) and Associate Researcher at the Law Faculty of Paris Descartes University. She holds a PhD in Public Law from Paris University and wrote her thesis on the Egyptian Supreme Constitutional Court and the protection of human rights (published by Bruylant, 2003). She works on the transition processes after the 2011 Uprisings, the judiciary, and personal status law in Egypt and in the Arab World. She was co-director of the Institut d’études de l’Islam et des sociétés du monde musulman (IISMM) at the Ecole des Hautes études en sciences sociales (EHESS) in Paris from 2010 to 2014. She has edited several volumes: (with Baudouin Dupret) Ordre public et droit musulman de la famille en Europe et en Afrique du Nord (Bruylant/IRD, 2012) and Egypt and its Laws (Kluwer Law International, 2002); and Judges and Political Reform in Egypt (American University in Cairo Press, 2008).

Lillian C. Frost is currently a PhD candidate in The George Washington University’s Political Science Department, where her research focuses on citizenship, nationalism, refugees, and political identity. Her dissertation... project explores variations in the sets of rights and forms of citizenship statuses host states offer to protracted refugees, including shifts in formal laws as well as the informal enforcement of these laws. She has received support for her research from the Fulbright US Student Program, Council of American Overseas Research Centers and American Center of Oriental Research, as well as The George Washington University’s Institute for Middle East Studies and Department of Political Science.

Basak Ince is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science and Public Administration at Bilkent University. She holds a PhD in Politics from the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London. She conducts research on citizenship, citizenship education, gender and citizenship, and sexuality and citizenship. She has articles published in journals such as: Middle Eastern Studies and Oxford Review of Education. Her book entitled Citizenship and Identity in Turkey: From Atatürk’s Republic to the Present Day was published by I.B. Tauris in 2012. Currently she is working on a book project titled Gender and Citizenship in Turkey from the late Ottoman Empire to the Present Day.

Mariwan Kanie is a lecturer in Arabic studies at the Faculty of Humanities (University of Amsterdam). He teaches political and intellectual history of the Middle East and the modern Arab world. He is author of many books in Kurdish, and some of his publications are translated into Persian and Arabic. Among his publications are: ‘Nationalism, Martyrdom and Body in the Modern Kurdish Politics and Culture’, Lijf en leden Gender en het historische lichaam Jaarboek voor Vrouwengeschiedenis 28 (2008): 85–103; (with Michiel Leezenberg) ‘Governing Iraq by Tribes and Constitutions: British Mandate Rule in Iraq’, IMISCOE Research (2011): 89–110.

Roel Meijer is Associate Professor in Middle East history at the Department of Religious Studies at Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands. He has edited seven volumes, including: Global Salafism: Islam’s New Religious Movement (Hurst/Columbia University Press, 2009, translated into Arabic and Chinese) and The Muslim Brotherhood in Europe (Hurst/ Columbia University Press, 2012). He has published widely on social movements, the Islamist movement, and the political situation in Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Bahrain. His latest interest is in concepts of citizenship in the Middle East. Recently he edited (with Nils Butenschøn), The Crisis of Citizenship in the Arab World (Brill, 2017). He is currently writing a monograph for Polity Press, State and Citizenship in the Middle East.

Valentine M. Moghadam is Professor of Sociology and International Affairs at Northeastern University, former director of the International Affairs Program (2012–2017) and directs the Middle East and Zoltan Pall is a research fellow at the Middle East Institute at the National University of Singapore, and a former visiting Assistant Professor at the Gulf University of Science and Technology in Kuwait. Currently he is working on a research project that focuses on the activities of Kuwaiti and other Middle Eastern Islamic NGOs in Southeast Asia. He is the author of Salafism in Lebanon: Local and Transnational Movements (Cambridge University Press, in press) and Lebanese Salafis between the Gulf and Europe: Development, Fractionalization and Transnational Networks of Salafism in Lebanon (Amsterdam University Press, 2013).

Shirin Saeidi holds a PhD from Cambridge University, UK. She recently completed a post-doctoral fellowship at the Centre for Global Cooperation Research in Duisburg, Germany. She has published in the journal Citizenship Studies and Gender & History. She is currently an Adjunct Professor at George Mason University, Fairfax VA.

Ruth Hanau Santini is Assistant Professor at Università L’Orientale in Naples, where she teaches politics and international relations. Her research area covers international relations of the MENA region and in particular regional security and domestic and foreign policy of Tunisia and European foreign policy towards the MENA region. Her previous affiliations include associate fellowship at the Brookings Institution, Washington DC, and at Johns Hopkins, SAIS Europe and Bologna. Her most recent publications are: ‘A New Regional Cold War in the Middle East and North Africa: Regional Security Complex Theory Revisited’, The International Spectator (November 2017), and (with Francesco N. Moro) ‘Civil–Military Relations and the State after the Arab Uprisings: Armed Peter Seeberg is Associate Professor at the Centre for Contemporary Middle East Studies, University of Southern Denmark. He is also Director of the DJUCO-project, an academic cooperation project in Amman, Jordan. Peter Seeberg has published widely on relations between the EU and the Middle East, migration and security, etc. His most recent publications are Peter Seeberg and Musa Shteiwi (eds.), European Foreign Affairs Review, Special Issue: New Challenges for the EU in the Arab Mediterranean and the Revision of the European Neighbourhood Policy (Kluwer, 2017); Peter Seeberg, Martin Beck and Dietrich Jung (eds.), The Levant in Turmoil: Syria, Palestine, and the Transformation of Middle Eastern Politics (Palgrave Macmillan, 2016). His articles appeared in: British Journal of Middle Eastern Studies, Democracy and Security, Democratization, European Foreign Affairs Review, Mediterranean Politics, Middle East Critique, and Middle East Policy.

Musa M. Shteiwi is a Professor of Sociology and is currently the Director of the Center for Strategic Studies at the University of Jordan. His research focuses on political development and state building, political parties and civil society and gender issues. Most recently he has been working on radical and soft extremism and refugees. He is the editor of a joint policy study, Migrants and Refugees: Impact and Future Policies: Case Studies of Jordan, Lebanon, Turkey and Greece, published in 2016. He is also the co-author of the chapter titled: ‘Economic and Social Integration of Migrants and Refugees in Jordan and Lebanon’ in the above volume. He is currently finishing an empirical study on inter-communal relations between Jordanians and Syrian refugees.