

---

Contributors

---

Carsten Anckar is Professor of Political Science (Comparative Politics) at Åbo Akademi University, Finland.

Derek Beach is Professor of Political Science at Aarhus University. His research focuses on elite decision making, policy learning, and case study methodology.

Laura Chaqués Bonafont is Professor of Political Science at the University of Barcelona and research fellow at the Institut Barcelona d'Estudis Internacionals (IBEI). She is leading the research group Quality of Democracy (www.Q-Dem.com) which aims to analyse and create data to better understand agenda dynamics in comparative perspective.

Daniel Dickson is a PhD candidate in Political Science at Concordia University. His dissertation project is the development of a cross-provincial policy index to compare effectiveness in implementing social inclusion policies for older Canadians with developmental disabilities. Drawing from his past experience in the social services sector, his primary research interest is in analysing the effects of public policies designed to reduce social marginalization and exclusion, with a specific focus on disability and population ageing.

Keith Dowding is Distinguished Professor of Political Science and Political Philosophy at the Australian National University, Canberra. He has published over 20 books including The Philosophy and Methods of Political Science (Palgrave Macmillan, 2016).

Anne-Sophie Dubé currently works for the Centre de recherche et d'expertise en gérontologie sociale (CREGÉS) in Montreal, Québec. She has a Master's degree in public health (specialization in epidemiology) at Université de Montréal. Her primary research interests include population health, active transportation and the built environment.

William N. Dunn is Professor of Public Policy at the University of Pittsburgh. He is author of Public Policy Analysis: An Integrated Approach, 6th ed. (Routledge, 2018) and Pragmatism and the Origins of the Policy Sciences: Rediscovering Lasswell and the Chicago School (Cambridge University Press, 2019). His awards include the Donald T. Campbell, Aaron Wildavsky, and Douglas M. McGregor awards and the University of Pittsburgh Provost award for Excellence in Mentoring. He is an elected fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration.

Tero Erkkilä is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Helsinki. His research interests include global knowledge governance, public institutions and collective identities.

Guillaume Fontaine is senior researcher at the Latin American Faculty for Social Sciences (FLACSO) in Ecuador. He has published extensively on comparative policy analysis, democratic governance and policy design in Latin America, including The Politics of Public Accountability (with Cecilia Medrano and Ivan Narváez, Palgrave Macmillan, 2019).

Iris Geva-May has been recognized by Thomson Reuters for having pioneered the field of comparative policy analysis since 1998, when she founded the highly cited Journal of Comparative Policy Analysis in 1998, and the International Comparative Policy Analysis Forum Scholarly Society. She is the author of numerous articles and books among which Thinking Like a Policy Analyst: Policy Analysis as a Clinical Profession (Palgrave Macmillan, 2005) and An Operational Approach to Policy Analysis: The Craft (Springer, 1997) and editor of Classics of Comparative Policy Analysis (Routledge, 2019), International Library of Comparative Policy Analysis Series (Policy Press), and Routledge Handbook of Comparative Policy Analysis (Routledge, 2017). She is currently a honorary visiting professor and Adjunct at Carleton University, Canada, the Wagner School NYU, and Professor Emerita, Vancouver, Canada.

Fabrizio Gilardi is Professor of Policy Analysis in the Department of Political Science at the University of Zurich. His research interests include policy diffusion, gender and politics, and digital technology and politics.

Christoffer Green-Pedersen is Professor of Political Science at Aarhus University. His research focuses on party competition, agenda-setting and public policy.

Adam D. Henry is an Associate Professor in the School of Government and Public Policy at the University of Arizona, USA, and is affiliated with the University of Arizona Institute of the Environment. His research applies network science and computational social science to the study of learning in the policy process.

David C. Hoffman earned his PhD from the University of Iowa in 2000 and has served on the faculty of the Marxe School of Public and International Affairs since 2003, where he is an Associate Professor. He has published work on classical rhetorical theory, as well as rhetorical criticism of political figures, both historical and contemporary, and has interests in deliberation and computer-aided textual analysis.

Karin Ingold is an Associate Professor of Policy Studies and Environmental Governance at the Institute of Political Science and the Oeschger Center for Climate Change Research, University of Bern, Switzerland. She also holds an affiliation to the Water Research Institute, Eawag, of the ETH domain. She is interested in research about complex decision-making processes applying the Advocacy Coalition Framework and tools borrowed from Social Network Analysis.

Grace Jaramillo, PhD, is Postdoctoral Fellow and lecturer at The University of British Columbia, Department of Political Science. She is a former professor at the Latin American Faculty for Social Sciences, FLACSO, where she became the chair of the Department of International Relations from 2007 to 2010.

Peter John is Professor of Public Policy at King's College London. He is known for his work on the theory of public policy and citizen engagement. His most recent books are: How Far to Nudge (Edward Elgar, 2018) and Nudge, Nudge, Think, Think (Bloomsbury, 2019).

Michael D. Jones is an Associate Professor at Oregon State University's School of Public Policy and Editor-in-Chief of the Policy Studies Journal. His research interests include the Narrative Policy Framework and policy process theory. His recent research has appeared in top journals such as Political Psychology, Critical Policy Studies, and Social Science Quarterly, among others.

Adrian Kay is Professor of Politics and Public Policy at Swansea University in the UK. He has previously held positions in Australia, Asia and Europe. Adrian works at the intersection of international and comparative public policy, with a particular interest in Islamic governance.

Patrik Marier is a Professor of Political Science at Concordia University, where he holds a Concordia University Research Chair in Aging and Public Policy. He is also the Scientific Director of CREGÉS, a university research centre housed at the Integrated Health and Social Services University Network for West-Central Montréal. Dr Marier's research focuses on the impact of ageing populations on a number of public policy fields including pensions, health-care, and labour policy across comparative cases.

Astrid Molenveld is Assistant Professor at the Department of Public Administration and Sociology of the Erasmus University Rotterdam. She has a particular interest in applying multiple research methods in her work, like QCA, Q-methodology and statistics. Her current research activities include comparative research on coordination and collaborative governance, with a special focus on cross-cutting and 'wicked' policy issues.

Joselyn Muhleisen is a Doctoral Lecturer at the Marxe School of Public and International Affairs, where she teaches courses on regulatory policy, comparative public policy and public administration, and global economic governance. She earned her doctorate in political science from The Graduate Center, CUNY. She has published work about the development of comparative policy analysis and its relationship to international studies.

Daniel Nohrstedt is an Associate Professor of Political Science in the Department of Government at Uppsala University, Sweden, and research coordinator in the Centre of Natural Hazards and Disaster Science (CNDS). His research interests include public policy and the policy process, particularly through the lens of the Advocacy Coalition Framework.

Raul Pacheco-Vega is an Assistant Professor in the Public Administration Division of the Centre for Economic Teaching and Research (Centro de Investigacion y Docencia Economicas, CIDE) in Mexico. He is a specialist in comparative public policy and focuses on North American environmental politics, primarily sanitation and water governance, solid waste management, neoinstitutional theory, transnational environmental social movements and experimental methods in public policy.

B. Guy Peters is Maurice Falk Professor of Government at the University of Pittsburgh and was founding president of the International Public Policy Association. He is currently editor of the International Public Policy Review and Honorary Editor of the Journal of Comparative Policy Analysis.

Osmany Porto de Oliveira is Assistant Professor of International Relations at the Federal University of São Paulo (Unifesp). He holds two PhDs in Political Science (University of Sorbonne Nouvelle – 2015 and University of São Paulo – 2013). He received his BA in International Relations from the University of Bologna (2006) and an MA in Sociétés Contemporaines: Europe – Amériques from the University of Sorbonne Nouvelle/IHEAL (2008). In 2019 he received the 'Early Research Award' of the International Public Policy Association (IPPA). His main books are Latin America and Policy Diffusion: From Import to Export (Routledge, 2020), with Cecilia Osorio, Sergio Montero and Cristiane Leite, International Policy Diffusion and Participatory Budgeting: Ambassadors of Participation, International Institutions and Transnational Networks (Palgrave MacMillan, 2017) and Le transfert d'un modèle de démocratie participative: Paradiplomatie entre Porto Alegre et Saint-Denis (Éditions IHEAL/CREDA, 2010).

Julia Schnepf has studied political science, economics and psychology at Heidelberg University. At present, she is doing her PhD in Political Psychology at the University of Koblenz-Landau. Her research addresses explanations of non-voting and extreme voting decisions, party polarization and populism, and methodological questions on voting behaviour.

Henrik Bech Seeberg is an Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at Aarhus University. His research focuses on political agenda-setting at the national and local level in addition to party competition and its policy consequences. His research appears in European Journal of Political Research, West European Politics, Party Politics, Journal of European Public Policy, Policy Studies Journal, and Journal of Public Administration Research and Theory.

Aaron Smith-Walter is an Assistant Professor of Political Science and core faculty member in the Master of Public Administration programme at the University of Massachusetts Lowell. His research interests include the narrative policy framework, Grid-Group Cultural Theory, and images of public administration in popular fiction. He serves as Vice-President of the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Society of Public Administration and is an Associate Editor of the Policy Studies Journal.

Eva Thomann from the University of Exeter specializes in public policy, public administration, and case-oriented and set-theoretic research methodology. Her research about or applying Qualitative Comparative Analysis has appeared in international journals including Sociological Methods & Research, European Journal of Political Research, Policy Sciences, and Journal of Public Administration Research and Theory, and she is working on a co-authored textbook about QCA in R for Cambridge University Press. Eva is a co-chair of the international COMPASSS methods network and teaches QCA and related techniques at various international method schools.

Jale Tosun is Professor of Political Science at Heidelberg University and a Co-Director of the Heidelberg Center for the Environment. Her research interests comprise various topics in comparative public policy, comparative politics, international political economy, public administration and European studies.

Christopher M. Weible is Professor with the School of Public Affairs at the University of Colorado, Denver, USA. He co-directs the Workshop on Policy Process Research (woppr.org).

Bruno Wüest is a data analyst at sotomo (<https://sotomo.ch/>) and former senior researcher at the Department of Political Science of the University of Zurich. His principal research interests are computational social science, political communication, and political behaviour.