

Contributors

Emmanuel Akwasi Adu-Ampong is Lecturer in Cultural Geography in the Cultural Geography Chair Group, Wageningen University and Research, the Netherlands, and a research associate at the School of Tourism and Hospitality Management, University of Johannesburg, South Africa. He obtained his PhD from the Department of Urban Studies and Planning at the University of Sheffield, UK. His interdisciplinary research interests are in the allied fields of tourism policy and planning, urban studies and international development planning in the context of Sub-Saharan Africa generally and Ghana in particular. His work is published in leading international journals in the field of tourism and international development such as Annals of Tourism Research, Current Issues in Tourism, Tourism Planning and Development, International Development Planning Review and Development Policy Review.

Julio Aramberri is Sitting Professor at Dongbei University of Finance and Economics, Dalian, China. He has previously held academic positions at Hoa Sen University, Saigon, Vietnam (2009–13), Drexel University, Philadelphia, USA (1999–2009) and Universidad Complutense de Madrid (1964–84). Prior to that, he undertook post-doctoral studies at the London School of Economics (1971–74). He worked for the Spanish Tourist Administration (1985–99) where he became its director general (1987–90). Aramberri has authored or co-authored eight books on sociological subjects and over 50 refereed articles. His Modern Mass Tourism (2010) was translated into Spanish (2012) and Chinese (2014). He is Charter Fellow of the International Academy for the Study of Tourism.

Helene Balslev Clausen is an anthropologist and holds a PhD in migration studies, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark. She is Associate Professor and Coordinator at the Department of Culture and Global Studies, Aalborg University. Her mission is to create new knowledge on ways in which tourism, activism and development can play a significant role in creating social change, stimulating local economies, conserving the environment and generating human wellbeing. She has conducted extensive fieldwork mainly in Latin America and Morocco. She has published extensively on tourism and sustainable development in high-ranking journals and edited various books. Recent publications include 'The Tourism Model in Post-Castro Cuba: Tensions between Ideology and Economic Realities' in the Journal of Tourism Planning and Development (2018) and 'Los norteamericanos que re-inventaron a los pueblos de México' in Latin American Research Review (2019). Currently she is coordinating a major research project in Mexico about sustainable tourism development and informal economies and regulation.

Ingrid Barradas-Bribiesca holds a BA and master's degree from the Institute of Education, University of London, UK. She was born in Germany but has been working at the University of Guanajuato for the last 32 years at the Division of Human Sciences and the Economic Administrative Sciences (DCEA). She has taught BA courses in Teaching English as a Foreign Language and in Education. At present she is teaching courses related to cultural heritage, cultural tourism and intercultural communication. During her time at the University of Guanajuato she has also worked as Coordinator of the Language Department and the Department of Internationalization of DCEA. She has published articles and book chapters in the field of education, popularization of science and tourism.

Tom Baum is Professor and Head of the Department of Work, Employment and Organisation in the University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, UK. Tom's research focuses on the social, cultural and economic context of work in frontline services, primarily hospitality and tourism from a comparative, international perspective. He has contributed to debate in this area for over 30 years, challenging the relative neglect of employment issues in wider discourse relating to tourism development and sustainable tourism. Tom has worked extensively with international agencies and supervised over 35 successful PhD candidates in this area.

Christine Budke is Professor of Epidemiology in the Department of Veterinary Integrative Biosciences at A&M University, College Station, USA. Budke's research focuses on epidemiology, burden of disease indicators, zoonotic diseases, international veterinary medicine and public health. She is a strong proponent of the One Health approach and has acted as a resource adviser for the World Health Organization's Foodborne Disease Burden Epidemiology Reference Group and has contributed to the Global Burden of Disease Study.

Dianne Dredge is Visiting Professor in the Department of Service Management and Service Studies, Lund University, Sweden. She has 20 years' practical experience as a tourism and environmental planner and policy analyst in Australia. She has completed consulting assignments in Canada, Mexico and China and undertaken work for international agencies such as the European Commission and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. Her research focuses on tourism as an agent of change from macro to micro contexts wherein she employs story-telling, policy ethnographies, policy network analysis and social learning approaches. Dianne is currently Chair of the Tourism Education Futures Initiative and a member of the International Academy for the Study of Tourism.

David Harrison is Professor of Tourism at Middlesex University, London, UK. Before that, he was Professor and Head of the School of Tourism and Hospitality Management at the University of the South Pacific, Fiji. He has carried out research on the impact of tourism in the Caribbean, Eastern Europe, Southern Africa, Southeast Asia and the South Pacific and is author of numerous peer-reviewed papers in tourism journals. In addition, he wrote The Sociology of Modernization and Development (1988) and has since edited and co-edited more than a dozen books, including Tourism and the Less Developed Countries (1992) and Tourism and the Less Developed World: Issues and Case Studies (2001). In 2003 he edited

Pacific Island Tourism and later, with Stephen Pratt, he co-edited Tourism in Pacific Islands. More recently, with Richard Sharpley he co-edited Mass Tourism in a Small World (2017) and with Victor T. King and Jerry Eades he co-edited four volumes, Tourism in East and Southeast Asia (2018).

Tazim Jamal is Professor in the Department of Recreation, Park and Tourism Sciences at A&M University, College Station, USA. Her primary research areas are sustainable tourism, collaborative tourism planning and cultural heritage management. She also teaches on theoretical, applied and methodological issues in tourism research, with particular interest in critical and interpretive research as well as issues related to justice and ethics. She is the co-editor of The SAGE Handbook of Tourism Studies (2009) and is the author of Justice and Ethics in Tourism (forthcoming). She is on the editorial board of nine peer-reviewed journals.

Shelagh Mooney is Senior Lecturer in Organizational Behaviour and Human Resources Management, as well as hospitality postgraduate program leader in the School of Hospitality and Tourism, at Auckland University of Technology, New Zealand. Shelagh's career research explores the effects of gender and other dimensions of diversity in employment, focusing on organizational processes within specific societal and industry contexts. The studies have been widely published in employment journals as well as in tourism and hospitality-specific publications. Shelagh's current research projects focus on sustainable human resources management, talent management, gendered organizations and how universities may best 'future-proof' students in a shifting and dynamic employment landscape.

Marina Novelli is an internationally renowned tourism and international development expert and an established academic based at the University of Brighton, UK, where she is Professor of Tourism and International Development and Academic Lead for the Responsible Futures Research and Enterprise Agenda across the university. With a background in economics and a keen interest in international development issues, she has written extensively in the field of international tourism policy, planning, development and management. She has advised on numerous projects funded by the World Bank, the European Union, the United Nations (UN) Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the UN Industrial Development Organization, the UN World Tourism Organization, the Commonwealth Secretariat, national ministries and tourism boards, regional development agencies and non-governmental organizations in Sub-Saharan Africa, Europe and Asia. Her volume Tourism and Development in Sub-Saharan Africa: Current Issues and Local Realities (2016) conveys her extensive empirically grounded research and consultancy engagements and collaborations in some 15 Sub-Saharan Africa destinations.

Stephen Pratt is Head of the School of Tourism and Hospitality Management at the University of the South Pacific, Fiji. Previously, he worked in the School of Hotel and Tourism Management at the Hong Kong Polytechnic University. Steve holds bachelor and master's degrees in economics from the University of Sydney, Australia and a PhD from the University of Nottingham, UK. His research interests include sustainable tourism development (economic, socio-cultural and environmental impacts of tourism), tourism in small island states and film tourism. Steve is co-creator of the popular YouTube channel The Travel Professors. This channel provides a brief overview of current trends and issues in tourism and relates them to academic research. The channel provides additional educational resources for students and lecturers and for anyone curious about travel and tourism.

Amy Scarth is a specialist in tourism, community development and protected areas, particularly in East Africa. Formerly a research analyst for the commercial travel industry in London, followed by a range of consultancy projects in the tourism and development fields, Amy founded and spent six years directing a tourism and philanthropy-related social enterprise in remote parts of Uganda, Malawi and Ethiopia. She is the recipient of an Economic and Social Research Council doctoral scholarship and is currently researching for her PhD at the University of Brighton, UK focusing on the complexity of charity, gift giving and philanthropy through tourism in Sub-Saharan Africa. With her research she intends to enrich the understanding of this topic from an academic and practitioner's perspective. Amy is passionate about the role of tourism in African development and conservation and contributing to a deeper understanding of this field.

Richard Sharpley is Professor of Tourism and Development at the University of Central Lancashire, Preston, UK. He has previously held positions at a number of other institutions, including the University of Northumbria and the University of Lincoln, where he was Professor of Tourism and Head of Department, Tourism and Recreation Management. He is co-editor of the journal Tourism Planning and Development, a resource editor for Annals of Tourism Research and a member of the editorial boards of a number of other tourism journals. His principal research interests are within the fields of tourism and development, island tourism, rural tourism and the sociology of tourism. His books include Tourism and Development: Concepts and Issues (2002, 2015, with David Telfer); Tourism and Development in the Developing World (2008, 2016, with David Telfer); Tourism, Tourists and Society (5th Edition, 2018); The Darker Side of Travel: The Theory and Practice of Dark Tourism (2009, with Philip Stone); Tourism, Development and Environment: Beyond Sustainability (2009); and, co-edited with David Harrison, Mass Tourism in a Small World (2017).

David J. Telfer is Associate Professor in the Department of Geography and Tourism Studies at Brock University, Canada. His research interests are in the areas of the relationship between tourism and development theories, tourism planning, heritage tourism and rural tourism in Japan. He is co-author of Tourism and Development in the Developing World (2nd edition, 2016) and co-editor of Tourism and Development: Concepts and Issues (2nd edition, 2015), both with Richard Sharpley.

