

Contents

List of figures	vii
List of tables	viii
List of contributors	ix
Acknowledgments	xii
1 Introduction: de-centering state making Jens Bartelson, Martin Hall and Jan Teorell	1
PART I WHAT MAKES A STATE?
2 Steppe state making Martin Hall	17
3 De-centering federal origins: India and the contested appropriation of federal democracy Ted Svensson	38
4 The current developing state Jonathan K. Hanson	59
PART II WHAT STATES DOES WAR MAKE?
5 When does war make states? War, rivalries and fiscal extraction in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries Agustín Goenaga and Alexander von Hagen-Jamar	85
6 War and variation in the structure of historical international systems: a theoretical model Charles Butcher and Ryan Griffiths	112
7 Imagined states and clashing state-building processes in the Bosnian space Annika Björkdahl	131

PART III STATE MAKING AND INTERNATIONAL SOCIETY

8	Configurations of semi-sovereignty in the long nineteenth century Arthur Learoyd	155
9	Acting like a state: non-European membership of international organizations in the nineteenth century Ellen Ravndal	175
PART IV CONCLUSION
10	Concentric circles: aporias of de-centering state making in time and space Janis Grzybowski	199
11	After de-centering: a new research agenda for state making Jens Bartelson and Jan Teorell	218
	Index	233