

Contributors

Francis Cheneval holds the Chair in Political Philosophy at the University of Zurich, Switzerland. He is the author of four books, including The Government of the Peoples: On the Idea and Principles of Multilateral Democracy (2011), and his work has appeared in journals such as Journal of European Public Policy, Journal of Social Philosophy, Journal of Common Market Studies, European Law Journal, Swiss Political Science Review, and Analyse & Kritik.

Hartley Dean is Professor of Social Policy at the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE), United Kingdom. His principal research interests stem from concerns with poverty, social justice and welfare rights. His recent publications include: Social Policy (Polity, 2006 and 2012); Understanding Human Need (Policy, 2010); Social Rights and Human Welfare (Routledge, 2015); and Social Advantage and Disadvantage (co-edited with Lucinda Platt, Oxford University Press, 2016).

Oliver Eberl is Senior Researcher at the Department for Political Science at Goethe-University Frankfurt, Germany. He focuses on issues of political theory and democratic theory. His most recent publication is Perspektiven Sozialer Demokratie in der Postdemokratie (co-edited with David Salomon, Springer, 2017).

Mónica Ferrín is Post-doctoral Fellow at the Collegio Carlo Alberto, Turin, Italy. Her research interests include public opinion, political participation, citizenship, immigration and mobility and gender. She is the co-editor (with Hanspeter Kriesi) of How Europeans View and Evaluate Democracy (Oxford University Press, 2016).

Vít Hloušek is Professor of European Politics at the Department of International Relations and European Studies in the Faculty of Social Studies at Masaryk University, Czech Republic, and a Director of the International Institute of Political Science in the same faculty. He focuses on issues of contemporary history and comparative political science. He most recently published (with Vlastimil Havlík and Petr Kaniok) Europeanised Defiance: Czech Euroscepticism since 2004 (Barbara Budrich, 2017).

Marcel Hoogenboom is Assistant Professor at the Department of Interdisciplinary Social Science at Utrecht University, the Netherlands. He focuses on comparative welfare state analysis in unemployment provision and social assistance; the history of the welfare state; welfare state and modernization; and new private initiative in welfare and care.

Jan Komárek is Professor of EU Law, iCourts (the Danish National Research Foundation's Centre of Excellence for International Courts), Faculty of Law, University of Copenhagen, Denmark. He focuses on European constitutional law and theory, and most recently published articles dealing with the legitimacy of constitutional adjudication in Europe.

Viktor Koska is a Researcher at the Centre for the Study of Ethnicity, Citizenship and Migration, Faculty of Political Science, University of Zagreb, Croatia, where he conducts research on the role of ethnicity, policy measures and institutional provisions for the successful host countries integration of former refugees in the area of ex-Yugoslavia. His most recent publications include 'Croatian Citizenship Regime and Traumatized Categories of Croatian Citizens: Serb Minority and Croatian Defenders of the Homeland War' (co-authored with Ana Matan, in Croatian Political Science Review, 2017) and 'Refugee Integration and Citizenship Policies: The Case Study of Croatian Serbs in Vojvodina' (Ethnopolitics, 2016).

Philippe Van Parijs is a guest professor at the Universities of Louvain and Leuven, Belgium, a Robert Schuman Fellow at the European University Institute, Florence, Italy and an associate member of Nuffield College, Oxford, United Kingdom. He was the founding director of Louvain's Hoover Chair of Economic and Social Ethics from 1991 to 2016. His most recent books are Just Democracy (ECPR 2011), Linguistic Justice for Europe and for the World (Oxford University Press 2011), After the Storm: How to Save Democracy in Europe (Lannoo 2015, edited with Luuk van Middelaar) and Basic Income: A Radical Proposal for a Free Society and a Sane Economy (Harvard University Press 2017, with Yannick Vanderborght).

Maarten Prak is Professor of Social and Economic History at the Department of History and Art History, Utrecht University, the Netherlands. His research concentrates on the lives of the inhabitants of European – and especially Dutch – towns during the Middle Ages and early modern period. His book Citizens without Nations: Urban Citizenship in Europe and the World c. 1000–1789 (Cambridge University Press) is scheduled for 2018.

Sandra Seubert is Professor of Political Theory at the Department of Political Science at Goethe-University Frankfurt, Germany. She is project coordinator of the interdisciplinary research group Structural Transformations of Privacy, funded by the Volkswagen Foundation. Her research focuses on transnationalization of democracy, transformations of citizenship and the shifting boundaries between public and private. Her most recent publications include 'Antinomies of European Citizenship' in Jürgen Mackert and Bryan Turner (eds), The Transformation of Citizenship, Vol. 2: Boundaries of Exclusion and Inclusion (Routledge, 2017).

Christoph Strünek is Full Professor of Political Science and Social Policy Analysis at the University of Siegen, Germany. He is also Director of the Institute of Gerontology at the Technical University Dortmund. He focuses on social policy and consumer policy, interest groups politics, local politics and third sector organizations, as well as on law and politics. His most recent publication (co-edited with Detlef Sack) is Verbände unter Druck: Protest, Opposition und Spaltung in Interessenorganisationen (Springer, 2016).

Frans van Waarden is Emeritus Professor of Policy and Organization Studies at the Department of Interdisciplinary Social Sciences and University College, Utrecht University, the Netherlands. He was one of the initiators of the bEUcitizen project (2013–17). His interests are in phenomena at the boundaries of politics, economics, law and history (in particular economic and business history), notably organization, regulation and governance. His more recent publications include The Changing Landscape of Food Governance: Public and Private Encounters, co-edited with Tetty Havinga and Donal Casey (Edward Elgar, 2015).

