

Contributors

---

Bridget Anderson is Professor of Mobilities, Migration and Citizenship at the University of Bristol. She was previously the Research Director of the Centre on Migration, Policy and Society (COMPAS) at the University of Oxford, United Kingdom. She is co-editor with Vanessa Hughes of Citizenship and its Others, Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan (2015).

Wieger Bakker is Professor at the Faculty of Law, Economics and Governance (LEG) of Utrecht University, the Netherlands. Since 2010 he has been the Director of the bachelor's programme of the Utrecht University School of Governance within the faculty. At present he is working on the quality and innovation of society oriented higher education. He focuses on issues of democratic citizenship, higher education and the open society, on issues of diversity in higher education, and on international development cooperation. His recent publications include Wieger Bakker, Gabriel van den Brink and Erik van Ingen (2016), 'Signs of moral resilience', in G. van den Brink (ed.), Moral Sentiments in Modern Society, Amsterdam: Amsterdam University Press, pp. 291–318.

Vedrana Baričević is Assistant Professor at the Department of Political Science at the Faculty of Political Science, University of Zagreb, Croatia. She focuses on migration, citizenship and asylum. Her most recent publication is 'Europeizacija azilnih politika i izbjeglička prava: razvoj hrvatskog sustava azila i zaštita izbjeglica u Hrvatskoj', in Milardović, Anđelko (ed.), Stranci pred vratima Europe, Zagreb: Pan Liber (2014), pp. 111–36.

Francis Cheneval holds the Chair in Political Philosophy at the University of Zurich, Switzerland. He is the author of four books, including The Government of the Peoples. On the Idea and Principles of Multilateral Democracy, New York: Palgrave Macmillan (2011). His work has appeared in journals such as Journal of European Public Policy, Journal of Social Philosophy, Journal of Common Market Studies, European Law Journal, Swiss Political Science Review and Analyse & Kritik.

Sybe de Vries is Full Professor of EU Single Market Law and Fundamental Rights and since 2012 he has held the Jean Monnet Chair at the Europa Institute of Utrecht University, the Netherlands. His research and education focus on EU single market law and the interconnection between EU free movement law and fundamental rights. In this respect he co-edited a book on The EU Charter of Fundamental Rights as Binding Instrument (Oxford: Hart Publishing, 2015) and The Protection of Fundamental Rights in the EU after Lisbon (Oxford: Hart Publishing, 2013). He was the coordinator of the FP7 research project 'bEUCitizenship' on European citizenship. The bEUCitizen consortium consists of 26 universities and institutions from the EU and beyond. He is currently the Academic Director of the Utrecht Centre of Global Challenges – UGlobe.

Domenico di Micco holds a PhD cum laude on the globalization process from Turin University, Italy and is Lecturer in the Faculty of Law, Trento University, Italy. His major fields of interest are comparative law and legal anthropology. He has been Italian reporter at the general congress of the French-based Association Henri Capitant des Amis de la Culture Française, as well as author of several publications in prestigious reviews. He has cooperated in international research studies and projects. His recent publications include 'Mondialisation et sources du droit en Italie', in La Mondialisation, Volume 66 des Travaux Internationaux de l'Association Capitant, Paris: Dalloz, forthcoming.

Oliver Eberl is a Senior Researcher in the Department of Political Science at Goethe-University Frankfurt, Germany. He focuses on issues of political theory and democratic theory. His most recent publication is Perspektiven Sozialer Demokratie in der Postdemokratie, Wiesbaden: Springer VS (2017) (co-edited with David Salomon).

Mónica Ferrín is Post-doctoral Fellow at The Collegio Carlo Alberto at Turin University, Italy. Her research interests include public opinion, political participation, citizenship, immigration and mobility, and gender. She is co-editor (with Hanspeter Kriesi) of How Europeans View and Evaluate Democracy, Oxford: Oxford University Press (2016).

Marie-Pierre Granger is Associate Professor at the School of Public Policy, Department of International Relations and Legal Studies Department, at the Central European University in Budapest, Hungary. She focuses on European Union law, comparative public law, human rights law and courts. Her most recent publication is The New EU Judiciary: An Analysis of Current Judicial Reforms, Kluwer Law International (2017), co-edited with Emmanuel Guinchard.

Marcel Hoogenboom is Assistant Professor at the Department of Interdisciplinary Social Science at Utrecht University, the Netherlands. His research focuses on comparative welfare state analysis in unemployment provision and social assistance, the history of the welfare state, welfare state and modernization, and new private initiative in welfare and care. One of his key publications is ‘Transnational unemployment insurance: the inclusion and exclusion of foreign workers in labour unions’ unemployment insurance funds in the Netherlands (approx. 1900–1940)’, International Review of Social History, 58(2) (2013), 247–84.

Elena Ioriatti is Full Professor of Comparative Law at Trento University, Faculty of Law, Italy, where she teaches Comparative Legal Systems (English language) and EU legal translation (bilingual Italian–English). Her main research activity is focused on the interaction between law and language, on legal translation, comparative private law and European private law. At Trento University she leads the ‘Law and language programme’ and the ‘Transnational law programme’. In 2017 she was invited to present her research results at the prestigious ‘Accademia Nazionale dei Lincei’ in Rome. Her key publications include ‘Formulation of rights and European legal discourse: any theory behind it?’, International Journal of Legal Discourse, 1(2) (2016), 375–400.

Trudie Knijn is Professor of Interdisciplinary Social Science at the Faculty of Social and Behavioural Sciences at Utrecht University, the Netherlands, and Visiting Professor at the University of Johannesburg, South Africa. She participates in the Horizon 2020 research programme SOLIDUS on solidarity projects in ten EU Member States and coordinates the Horizon 2020 research programme ETHOS on justice and fairness. Her research focuses on care, family policies, gender and generations in European welfare states and in South Africa. With Jane Lewis she published ‘ECEC: childcare markets in the Netherlands and England’, in B. Unger, D. van der Linde and Michael Getzner (eds), Public or Private Goods? Redefining Res Publica, Cheltenham, UK and Northampton, MA, USA: Edward Elgar Publishing (2017), pp. 150–72.

Nir Kosti is a graduate student at the Department of Political Science at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel. His research interests include public policy, regulation and governance, and comparative politics. His current research focuses on patterns of relations between law and regulation.

David Levi-Faur is Professor for Political Science and Public Policy at the Federman School of Public Policy and the Department of Political Science of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel. He specializes in regulation of governance theory and its application and extension to various domains of governance. For the last ten years he has been the editor of Regulation & Governance, a highly ranked journal that serves as a leading platform for the study of regulation and governance in the social sciences.

Manuela Naldini is Associate Professor of Sociology of the Family at the University of Turin, Italy. She focuses on issues of family and social policy in a comparative perspective. Among her most recent journal articles is 'Politics of defamilialization: A comparison of Italy, Japan, Korea and Spain' (with M. Estévez-Abe), Journal of European Social Policy, 26(4) (2016), 327–43.

Maarten Prak is Professor of Social and Economic History at the Department of History and Art History, Utrecht University, the Netherlands. His research concentrates on the lives of the inhabitants of European – and especially Dutch – towns during the Middle Ages and Early Modern period. His book Citizens without Nations: Urban Citizenship in Europe and the World c. 1000–1789 will be published by Cambridge University Press in the spring of 2018.

Elisabetta Pulice holds a PhD in European and Comparative Legal Studies, a double degree awarded in the framework of the 'co-tutelle de thèse' agreement between the University of Trento, Faculty of Law, Italy, and the University Paris Ouest Nanterre la Défense, France, and completed in compliance with the requirements of 'Doctor Europaeus'. She is currently teaching assistant in European Union Law and Constitutional Law at the Faculty of Law, University of Trento. She focuses on issues of EU and comparative public law, linguistic rights and language translation, and professional ethics. One of her key publications is 'South Tyrol's autonomy after the conflict settlement: Compromise, power sharing, and the rights of language groups', in F. Andreatta and E. Castelli (eds), Solutions and Failures in Identity-based Conflicts. The Autonomy of Trentino-South Tyrol in Comparative Perspective, Trento: FBK Press (2014), pp. 75–114.

Martin Seeleib-Kaiser is Professor of Comparative Public Policy at the Institute of Political Science of the Eberhard Karls University in Tübingen, Germany. Previously he held appointments at the University of Oxford (UK), Duke University (North Carolina, USA) and the University of Bremen (Germany). He has published widely on comparative social policy and social rights of EU migrant citizens, among others in American Sociological Review, Comparative Political Studies, Journal of Common Market Studies, Journal of European Social Policy, Politics and Society, Politische Vierteljahresschrift, Social Policy and Administration, Social Politics, West European Politics and Zeitschrift für Soziologie. His work has been translated into Chinese, Dutch, French, Italian and Korean.

Sandra Seubert is Professor of Political Theory in the Department of Political Science at Goethe-University Frankfurt, Germany. She is project coordinator of the interdisciplinary research group Structural Transformations of Privacy, funded by the VW Foundation. Her research focuses on transnationalization of democracy, transformations of citizenship and the shifting boundaries between public and private. Her most recent publications include 'Antinomies of European citizenship' in Jürgen Mackert and Bryan Turner (eds), The Transformation of Citizenship, Vol. 2: Boundaries of Exclusion and Inclusion, London and New York: Routledge (2017), pp. 135–51.

Isabel Shutes is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Social Policy at the London School of Economics and Political Science, United Kingdom. Her research examines the interactions of citizenship, migration policies and welfare systems, and the implications for social divisions and inequalities. Her recent publications include 'Gender and free movement: EU migrant women's access to residence and social rights in the UK', Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies (with Sarah Walker, published online June 2017), and 'Work-related conditionality and the access to social benefits of national citizens, EU and non-EU citizens', Journal of Social Policy, 45(4) (2016), 691–707.

Marlot van der Kolk graduated in 2015 with honours from the Master's programme of the Utrecht University School of Governance, the Netherlands. Her main areas of interests are education policy, labour market and citizenship studies. Since 2016 she has combined research on EU citizenship with lecturing in the area of public administration and organizational science. Recently she started working as a policy officer in the field of regional public service provision. Recently she published on differences between EU Member States in young generations' access to the labour market: 'Jongeren, de crisis en toenemende verschillen binnen de EU: een onderzoek naar toenemende verschillen tussen lidstaten van de EU wat betreft de toegang van jongeren tot de arbeidsmarkt', Public Note, 1(1) (2016), 6–13.

Frans van Waarden is Emeritus Professor of Policy and Organization Studies in the Faculty of Social and Behavioural Sciences and University College, Utrecht University, the Netherlands. He was one of the initiators of the bEUcitizen project (2013–17). His interests are in phenomena at the boundaries of politics, economics, law and history (in particular, economic and business history), notably organization, regulation and governance. His most recent publications include The Changing Landscape of Food Governance: Public and Private Encounters, Cheltenham, UK and Northampton, MA, USA: Edward Elgar Publishing (2015), co-edited with Tetty Havinga and Donal Casey.

Sarah Walker is a PhD candidate in the Department of Sociology at Goldsmiths, University of London, United Kingdom. Her PhD research seeks to critically investigate the laws and structures that frame the lives of separated young people as they transition to adulthood in Italy. Her most recent publications are 'Gender and free movement: EU migrant women's access to residence and social rights in the UK', Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies (with Isabel Shutes, published online June 2017) and 'Detention and its discontents: Punishment and compliance within the UK detention estate through the lens of the withdrawal of Assisted Voluntary Return (AVR)', Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, doi: 10.1080/1369183X.2018.1443805 (published online February 2018).

Patrick Wallis is Professor of Economic History at the London School of Economics and Political Science, United Kingdom. His work focuses on the development of the European economy in the three hundred years before the Industrial Revolution, with a particular interest in apprenticeship and guilds and the contribution of human capital to economic development. With Teerapa Pirohakul he has published 'Medical revolutions? The growth of medicine in England, 1660–1800', Journal of Social History, 49(3) (2016), 510–31.