

Acknowledgments

The publication of this book owes much to many people. The Ministry of Employment and Labor of Korea envisioned the publication of this book in 2014 to deliver the true story and facts of Korean employment and labor relations to the world, and it has kept the promise for the project since then. Its support as well as the respect given to maintain the book's objectivity has been greatly appreciated.

The Korea Labor and Employment Relations Association (KLERA) also supported this three-year project. The former presidents of KLERA, Jun-Mo Cho, Jung Lee, and Byoung-Hoon Lee and their staffs carefully supported the completion and publication of this book.

In reviewing the manuscript of this book, many globally well-known scholars in employment and labor relations from far afield have contributed their time and effort. We gratefully acknowledge these reviewers: William Brown at the University of Cambridge, John Budd at the University of Minnesota, Alexander Colvin at Cornell University, Cynthia Estlund at New York University, Harry Katz at Cornell University, and Manfred Weiss at Goethe Universitaet.

In managing and completing this book's publication, we greatly appreciate the work of Professor Karin McDonald at Dongguk University, Seoul, South Korea for her contribution in editing, reviewing and trafficking the production of the manuscript. Also, Hyung-Tag Kim, the former Vice-President of Korean Confederation of Trade Unions, participated as an author and in addition as translator of manuscripts written in Korean. We also thank Tae-Jung Shin for carefully managing the project budget that allowed us to realize this publication.

Finally, we would like to sincerely thank our family members: Diane and also Seunghun, Eunhye and Eonseon Jin for their endurance while we were absorbed in the work of editing this book.
