

Contributors

Elena Bargelli is full Professor of Private Law at the University of Pisa (Italy). She was a Research Fellow of the Alexander von Humboldt Stiftung at the Max Planck Institut für ausländisches und internationales Privatrecht in Hamburg (2008–2009), Visiting Fellow at the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies, London (2011–2012) and at the Yale Law School, New Haven, USA (2007). She is currently a member of the ELI (European Law Institute) Council and Membership Committee. She is also a member of ECTIL (European Centre of Tort and Insurance Law). Her areas of interest are contract law, tort law, family law and housing law both from the national and comparative perspectives.

Ranieri Bianchi has a Degree in Juridical Sciences (cum laude), a Master's Degree in Law (cum laude) and a PhD in Private Law. He has a research grant on contract law at the University of Pisa and is a practising lawyer. In 2011 he was appointed as young researcher under the TENLAW Project, co-ordinated by the University of Bremen and funded by the EU Commission within the 7th Framework Program. For many years, he has been dealing with issues in housing law, particularly tenancy rights and has written essays and other legal publications on these topics. He has also participated in the EU Project on Preventing Evictions and Homelessness as well as being an invited speaker at national and international conferences. He is a member of the European Network of Housing Research and the Southern European Housing Working Group.

Maša Drofenik graduated (2012) from the Faculty of Law, University of Maribor, Slovenia. After her graduation, she completed an internship at a law firm dealing mostly with corporate law. In the years 2014–2015 she worked as a junior researcher at the International School of Social and Business Studies in Celje, Slovenia. While working there she participated in the FP7 project 'Tenancy Law and Housing Policy in Multi-Level Europe' under the mentorship of Dr Špelca Mežnar. From 2016 she has been employed as a lawyer at Registry.si, part of a public institution Academic and Research Network of Slovenia.

Maria Olinda Garcia, Professor of the Faculty of Law, University of Coimbra (Portugal) and Judge at the Portuguese Supreme Court. Invited

Professor of Macao University (China) and Luanda University (Angola). Member of several national and international research projects and scientific associations. Author of 50 published research works. Supervisor of more than 90 approved Master and PhD theses. Over 100 papers delivered at national and international conferences. ORCID ID: <http://orcid.org/0000-0002-9583-9110>.

Magdalena Habdas, Associate Professor in Private Law at the Faculty of Law and Administration, University of Silesia in Katowice (Poland), MSc Property Valuation and Management (Sheffield Hallam University), MA English (University of Silesia, Katowice), attorney-at law (JPW Prawniczy Legal Offices), property valuer, member of the Foreign Affairs Committee in the Regional Chamber of Attorneys at Law in Katowice, member of the State Examinations Committee for property valuers at the Polish Ministry of Infrastructure and Development, team leader in the EU Framework 7 research project TENLAW, team leader in a Habitat for Humanity Poland project on Social Rental Agencies, active participant in the Common Core of European Private Law project (time-limited interests in land and condominiums); member of the Expert Group on Expropriation Law (cooperating with Nijmegen University, Groningen University, the Netherlands and University of Cape Town, RSA). Specializes in various aspects of real estate law, including conveyancing, leases, expropriation and valuation as well as in legal aspects of valuations of enterprises/businesses. Publishes and lectures internationally.

Marietta E.A. Haffner, economist, has more than two decades of experience in conducting European comparative housing (policy) studies at Delft University of Technology (Netherlands). She is currently cooperating in two European projects on the topics of social protection of citizens and pensions and homeownership. In recent years the private rental sector has featured in a number of research projects (new developments; institutional investments). She holds honorary research appointments at RMIT (Australia) and the University of Cambridge (UK). Next to conducting research, Marietta Haffner is a member of the Management Board of Housing Studies. She is office coordinator of the European Network for Housing Research. ORCID ID: <http://orcid.org/0000-0002-5001-2056>

József Hegedűs is a founding member of the Metropolitan Research Institute (Budapest, Hungary). He has been a co-organizer of the East European Working Group of the European Network for Housing Research since 1989 and a member of the Housing Policy Council in Hungary, a high-level advisory group in housing policy matters since 1996. Since 1994 he has been a part-time Associate Professor at Corvinus University

Budapest. His research has focused on urban and housing issues following the transition in Eastern Europe with special attention to social issues.

Vera Horváth has been working at the Metropolitan Research Institute (Budapest, Hungary) since 2012; she holds a Master's degree in International Relations and is currently pursuing doctoral studies in Sociology at the Corvinus University of Budapest. Her main research interests include housing policy, residential renting, residential mobility, and socially sensitive urban renewal.

Ave Hussar (mag iur), PhD candidate and Lecturer, University of Tartu (Estonia); Adviser to the Civil Chamber, Supreme Court of the Republic of Estonia; European Court of Justice, Seconded National Expert.

Mark Jordan, Lecturer in Land Law, University of Southampton (UK). He holds an LLB degree from the National University of Ireland Galway and is currently completing his doctorate in the field of comparative property law at the University of Southampton. He has worked on a number of international research projects and his research work also extends to supporting advocacy. From 2012 to 2016, he has provided research support to a grassroots housing rights action taken against Ireland: International Federation for Human Rights (FIDH) v. Ireland Complaint No. 110/2014.

Jakob Juul-Sandberg, Professor (WSO) at Department of Law, University of Southern Denmark, Odense. He holds a Master's Degree in Law and a PhD from a thesis on rent regulation in Denmark. Jakob worked as a private law lawyer for several years before starting his academic career in 2005 during which he also worked as a District Court Judge for a limited period. He is the chairman of one of the larger Rent Tribunals in Denmark. Jakob is the author of more than 30 legal research works mainly in Danish. His research interests are primarily landlord and tenant law, but also procedural law, housing law, contract and insolvency law. ORCID ID: <http://0000-0003-3773-3753>.

Annika Klopp is a trainee lawyer at the Hanseatic Oberlandesgericht (Higher Regional Court) Hamburg (Germany). Before that, she worked and studied at the Institute for Commercial Law and the Centre of European Law and Politics at the University of Bremen.

Irene Kull, University of Tartu (Estonia), Head of the Private Law Department; Counsellor to the Civil Chamber, Supreme Court of the Republic of Estonia.

Špelca Mežnar is a judge at the Slovenian Constitutional Court (since October 2016) and a teacher and researcher at the International School for Social and Business Studies in Celje (Slovenia) (since 2008). In the years 2012–2015, she led a group of researchers from Slovenia, Croatia, and Serbia in the FP7 project “Tenancy Law and Housing Policy in Multi-Level Europe”. From 2007 until 2016, she worked as an attorney. She specializes in the fields of contract, tort and copyright law as well as the law of consumer protection and public procurement.

Elga Molina Roig is the Head of the Housing Office of the Tarragona Regional Council (Spain). She holds a degree in law and a Master’s degree in corporate and contract law, as well as a Diploma in property administration and management. Her Master’s dissertation covered urban leases, and was awarded first class honours. Her professional career has taken place in different areas of the property sector: first in the private sector in real estate agencies, property administration and property development and marketing, and currently in the public sector dealing with social housing policy. Since last year she has been working with the URV’s Research Group on Access to Housing as its national reporter for the Project known as the 7th Framework Programme – TENLAW. She assisted and collaborated in the organization of the 25th International Congress of the European Network for Housing Research: ‘Overcoming the crisis: integrating the urban environment’, in which she presented a paper on the current problems in urban leases. She has also given several conferences, seminars and workshops on public policies on property rental of the Generalitat de Catalunya, as well as on the emancipation of young people. She has recently defended her doctoral thesis on urban leases as a way to access housing.

Sergio Nasarre Aznar, Full Professor of Civil Law, UNESCO Housing Chair, University Rovira i Virgili (Spain). Deputy Judge in the Court of Appeal of Tarragona since 2004, he is a European Doctor in Law and holds an MPhil in Land Economy from the University of Cambridge. Since 2008 he has been a Corresponding Member of the Spanish Royal Academy of Jurisprudence and Legislation. He has been granted an ICREA Fellowship for the excellence of research 2016–2020. He has also acted as consultant to the EU Commission, the Catalan Parliament and Government, Amnesty International, FAO and the Verband Deutscher Pfandbriefbanken (Association of German Mortgage Banks). He is the author of more than 80 research works and has delivered over 130 invited speeches in 14 countries. He has been lead researcher in 10 national and international projects and has advised private and public institutions on these matters. His research interests are mainly property law, landlord and tenant law, housing law, the mortgage market, European private law, trusts and tort law.

Per Norberg is a Doctor of Law and a Senior Lecturer at the University of Lund (Sweden). His research field is the conflict between market norms and social regulation including tenancy law. He has written on the difference between the concepts of renting a dwelling but owning a right to a home which is central in Sweden. The goal of the legislation is to provide tenants with the same freedom and security as is enjoyed by property owners. He has also written extensively on Swedish rent regulation and the conflict between that and EU market law before the Swedish reforms described in his chapter and advised property owners with regard to legal disputes in this area.

Grzegorz Panek doctorates in law and linguistics. Graduate of the Faculty of Law and Administration of the University of Silesia (Katowice, Poland), where he lectured on civil procedure, and of the Faculty of Philology of the same alma mater. Author of several articles on the law of obligations, property law and civil procedure. National reporter and researcher in the EU Framework 7 research project TENLAW, sworn translator of English.

Christoph U. Schmid was a postdoctoral fellow at the EUI from 1995–2005 and has been Director of ZERP and Professor of European Private, Economic and Constitutional Economic Law at Bremen University since 2005, as well as Visiting Professor and External Faculty Member of the University of Sassari/Italy since 2009. His research revolves around the Europeanisation of private law in general and consumer, tenancy and real property law in particular. He is a member of several transnational Study Groups on European Private Law and has on numerous occasions acted as an expert for the European Parliament, the European Commission, the OECD and the German Government. He was the coordinator of the EU-funded TENLAW-project on which this volume is based. ORCID ID: <http://orcid.org/0000-0002-2321-5069>

Héctor Simón Moreno is currently a postdoctoral researcher in Civil Law in Rovira i Virgili University (Spain). He has written several scientific publications (articles, books, book chapters and chronicles) and has participated in national and international workshops and conferences, some of them also organized by him. In addition, he has undertaken research stays at Oxford University, the National University of Ireland, as well as the Verband Deutscher Pfandbriefbanken. His research focuses on the following fields: (a) housing law within the TENLAW project and the housing chair; (b) real rights and trusts; and (c) contract law within the optional instrument in European contract law.

Kurt Xerri has completed his PhD at the Housing Chair of the Universitat Rovira i Virgili (Spain). His current research focuses on Maltese post-war housing policy with particular regard to tenancy law. He has an LLD and an MA (cum laude) from the University of Malta and was also appointed as a young researcher in the European TENLAW Project coordinated by the European University Institute (Bremen). He has also participated in the EU Pilot Project on Preventing Evictions and Homelessness where he was selected as the Maltese rapporteur by the managing consortium. Besides these contributions he has also co-authored articles with Professor Dr Sergio Nasarre-Aznar (URV), Dr David Zammit (University of Malta) and Professor Maria Olinda Garcia (University of Coimbra) and has presented his works in various conferences including: the ENHR2014 Conference in Edinburgh, the TENLAW meetings in Tarragona (June 2013), Delft (January 2014) and Ljubljana (October 2014) as well as the 19th General Meeting of the Common Core of European Private Law in Torino (2013). He is also a casual lecturer at the University of Malta.