It is impossible to give proper recognition to everyone who contributed to the realization of this book. Most of the chapters made their first appearance at a workshop on “Theorizing Transnational Business Governance Interactions: Design, Structures, Mechanisms and Impacts” at York University in May 2016. The workshop and larger project were funded by a Partnership Development Grant (#890-2010-0126) from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. The workshop benefitted immensely from the support of the Osgoode Hall Law School, the Schulich School of Business, and their respective Deans, Lorne Sossin and Dezső Horváth. Jody-Ann Rowe-Butler of Osgoode and Susan Kimberley of Schulich provided expert logistical support.

Two of the authors also participated in an earlier graduate student research retreat generously hosted and funded by the Baldy Center for Law and Social Policy at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

York University, Arizona State University, the State University of New York at Buffalo, the University of British Columbia, the London School of Economics and Political Science, the Hertie School of Governance, the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies at the European University Institute, the Hague Institute for the Internationalization of Law’s Transnational Private Regulation Project, the Hennick Centre for Business and Law (York University), the Schulich-ICAO Alliance for Accounting Research and Professional Competencies, the York Institute for Research and Innovation in Sustainability, the Canada Research Chairs program and York University’s York Research Chairs program provided financial or in-kind support at various stages of the Transnational Business Governance Interactions project.

The editors wish to express their gratitude to the participants in the 2016 York workshop and numerous other scholarly meetings where the research and ideas presented in this book were tested, including workshops at the European University Institute, the Hertie School of Governance, the London School of Economics and Political Science, and meetings of the International Studies Association, the Law and Society Association and the ECPR Standing Group on Regulatory Governance. Among the many participants who helped sharpen their thinking, the editors are particularly grateful to Tim Bartley, Tanja Börzel, Karin Buhmann, Tim Bütthe, Fabrizio Cafaggi, Klaus Dingwerth, Marie-Laure Djelic, Luc Fransen, Thomas Gehring, Jessica Green, Lars Gulbrandsen, Anke Hassel, Virginia Haufler, Nicole Helmerich, Markus Jachtenfuchs, Gregory Jackson, Benedict Kingsbury, David Levi-Faur, Timothy Lytton, Christine Parker, Oren Perez, Tony Porter, Kerstin Sahlin-Anderson, Harm Schepel, Colin Scott, Gregory Shaffer, Susan Silbey, Klaus-Dieter Wolf and Peer Zumbansen.

A special debt of gratitude is owed to Julia Black, who was a core collaborator in the project's early stages and whose intellectual imprint on this book is evident. The editors are also grateful to Sasha Courville, Kristin Komives, Lara Koritzke and Vidya Rangan of the ISEAL Alliance, who encouraged the project and provided valuable insight from the world of transnational business governance.

Several student research assistants at Osgoode Hall Law School and the University of British Columbia's Allard School of Law helped with the York workshop and the resulting book, including Sarah Attardo (Osgoode JD 2018), Grace Chung (Allard JD candidate 2020), Heather Fisher (Osgoode JD 2017), Julia Roe (Allard JD candidate 2021), Nicholas Rosati (Allard JD candidate 2020) and Lawrence Wong (Allard JD 2019).
