
Figures and tables

FIGURES

5.1	References to the psychological contract in titles of academic journals	102
11.1	Degrees of institutionalization in the psychological contracting process	228
13.1	Systemic heuristic model for moderators to the psychological contract–outcome link	266
14.1	Triggering psychological contract breach	275
15.1	Visual representation of a psychological contract network	302
16.1	Example iPC-network	318
16.2	Visualization of attractors (under-fulfilled, over-fulfilled, or fulfilled) at the level of nodes (i.e., inducements and obligations)	323
16.3	Impact of breached inducement on the state of connected contributions at a later point in time	325
19.1	Mapping Olivia’s antenarrative process	390

TABLES

1.1	Challenges to the psychological contract	15
2.1	Results of the systematic review: mutuality	43
2.2	Results of the systematic review: reciprocity	50
3.1	Example definitions of the psychological contract construct	66
4.1	Emotional responses following psychological contract events	86
4.2	Discrete emotions following psychological contract events and potential implications for the psychological contract	88
4.3	The nature of everyday breach and fulfilment events	92
5.1	Overview of psychological contract small group meetings	103
5.2	Participant perceptions regarding the most influential psychological contract publications	111
8.1	Overview of approaches to studying social context in psychological contract research	167
15.1	Resources for building computational models	309

18.1	Overview of studies on psychological contracts using experimental designs	361
18.2	Opportunities for experimental designs in psychological contract research	370