Maps and figures

MAPS

0.1 The Arbitral Tribunal’s map of the South China Sea xvii
0.2 China’s map of the South China Sea attached to China’s Note Verbale to the United Nations Secretary-General Nos CML/17/2009 and CML/18/2009 xviii
0.3 The Philippines’ map of the ‘Northern Sector of the South China Sea’ xix
0.4 The Philippines’ map of ‘China’s Maximum Potential Entitlements under UNCLOS Compared to its Nine-Dash Line Claim in the Southern Sector’ xx
6A.1 Map of possible maritime zones based on the 12 July 2016 South China Sea Arbitration Award 153
8.1 Map depicting the officially declared EEZs of Vietnam, the Philippines and Malaysia overlain with the 200 NM EEZ that Itu Aba would generate if properly classified as an ‘island’ under Article 121 199
8.2 Territorial Seas generated by the claimed high-tide features in the Spratly Group as well as the EEZ declared by the Philippines 201

FIGURES

6A.1 Time series of satellite images of Unnamed Reef 1 on Union Reefs 149
6A.2 Difference in sea level (in metres) between (a) Mean High Water Springs (MHWS) and Mean Low Water Springs (MLWS); (b) Mean Higher High Water (MHHW) and Mean Lower Low Water (MLLW); (c) values in (a) and (b); and, (d) Mean High Astronomical Tide (HAT) and Mean Low Astronomical Tide (LAT) across the southern South China Sea basin 150
6A.3 Sea level variations at McKennan Reef (Union Reefs) between 2000 and 2020 (9°54′12.81″N, 114°27′55.03″E) 152