
Acknowledgements

First, I would like to thank each of the authors in the volume for their contribution. It has been a real pleasure working with each of you and the Handbook would not have been possible without your dedication, knowledge, insight and patience. Our many exchanges during the development of the individual chapters as well as in other fora have truly enriched the process of putting this volume together, meaning that this has been a genuine team effort in every sense of the phrase. Thank you and I am looking forward to our continued collaboration and learning in this space.

I also sincerely thank the Danish Institute for Human Rights for supporting me to work on this Handbook. In particular, I acknowledge support from Hans-Otto Sano, Birgitte Feiring and Eva Grambye. Special thanks also go to: Tulika Bansal for sharing her practical wisdom, support and much sparring; Lukas Bogner for his research assistance and keeping things organized and on track; Rikke Frank Jørgensen and Steven Jensen for their encouragement; and my wonderful colleagues in the Human Rights and Business Department, in particular Cathrine Bloch Veiberg and Elin Wrzoncki, for their contributions and ongoing support.

Each of the chapters was carefully peer reviewed by two to five people and the editor. Peer reviewers included fellow contributors in the volume as well as external subject matter experts who provided single-blind or double-blind reviews respectively. The individual chapters, as well as the Handbook as a whole, benefitted greatly from these thoughtful inputs and I would like to sincerely thank all the reviewers, who generously gave their time and expertise to enrich the volume.

I would also like to thank the series editor, Frank Vanclay, for inviting the volume and his support throughout the process; as well as, together with Gabriela Factor, Ana Maria Esteves and Francesca Viliani, for introducing me to the International Association for Impact Assessment community and the many discussions and debates about the role, purpose, pitfalls and possibilities associated with impact assessment and management.

Last but not least, a big thank you to my family and friends for their love and support.
