

---

Acknowledgements

---

This research handbook is the product of several years of collaboration between the two editors. Against the background of the challenges posed by Brexit for scholars focussed on the EU (particularly in the UK) and the struggles of Central European University (CEU) in Budapest, we are proud of this effort to showcase some of the leading research on the politics of EU law. Each of the contributions offers an original perspective on the complex interplay between the law and politics of the EU and places the debates in the context of their historical development. The Handbook covers some of the most pertinent and dynamic policy areas and reflects on how recent ‘crises’ have impacted on law and policy-making in the EU. We are certain that this Handbook will be a valuable tool for anyone interested in the contemporary nature of the EU.

We are especially grateful to the contributors to this collection, who have undertaken the formidable task of tracking the various debates past and present in EU law and politics, and the reviewers who have given valuable assistance in putting together this Handbook. Paul would like to thank the James Madison Charitable Trust and the University of Strathclyde New Professors Fund for their financial help. Marie-Pierre would like to acknowledge EU financial support through the bEUcitizen (grant agreement No 320294) and ETHOS (grant agreement No 727112) projects, within which she developed some of the expertise which fed into the book’s approach and her own chapter, and CEU for its overall institutional support. She also expresses her gratitude to Paul for approaching her with this exciting collaboration proposal, for his friendly and effective steering of the book’s process, and, first and foremost, for regularly stepping in and taking on more than his share of the work.

We would also like to thank the staff at Edward Elgar, particularly our editor Daniel Mather, and also David Fairclough, Amber Watts and Carolyn Fox, for their help and patience throughout the writing and editing process. The final stages of the book were completed during the COVID pandemic and we are incredibly grateful to Elgar and the contributors to the book for their help in keeping to schedule.

And finally, we would like to thank our respective families. Paul would like to thank his husband Etienne and their son Thomas for their continuous love and support. Marie is grateful for the infallible support of her partner Robin, the (usually welcome!) distraction provided by her two children, Léda and Milo, and her dog Palko.

