
Acknowledgments

This book is the result of a research project jointly undertaken by the Law Research Centre of Dublin City University (DCU), in Dublin, Ireland, and the Department of Legal Studies of Bocconi University in Milan, Italy – which we respectively direct.

The contributions to this volume were first discussed at a workshop we held in Luxembourg on 29–30 November 2018. The event was kindly hosted by the Max Planck Institute (MPI) for Procedural Law and the University of Luxembourg, and we want to sincerely thank Burkhard Hess, Director of the MPI, and Pierre-Henri Conac and Herwig Hofmann, Professors at the University of Luxembourg, for their gracious hospitality.

This event was generously sponsored by the international law firm GSK Stockmann, and we would like to thank Andreas Heinzmann and Valerio Scollo for believing in this project, and kindly agreeing to support it. The law firm Gattai, Minoli, Agostinelli and Partners, for whom Marco Ventoruzzo works as of counsel, also graciously hosted a dinner, which gave us the opportunity to engage with the contributors in an informal context.

While the book is the result of joint editorial work, Parts I and II were primarily edited by Federico Fabbrini and Parts III and IV by Marco Ventoruzzo. In the organization of the workshop, we received assistance from Annelieke Mooij, PhD student in Law at DCU, and Federico Fabbrini is honoured to acknowledge that the preparation of this book received financial support from the DCU Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences Book Publication Scheme.

Last but not least, we would like to acknowledge the role of Rebecca Stowell and Sally Philip at Edward Elgar Publishing for ensuring a fast copy-editing and production process. Given the speed with which European affairs evolve, we were pleased to make available this up-to-date and comprehensive volume on European economic law to the public of professors, policy-makers and practitioners with all deliberate speed.

* * *

Federico wishes to dedicate this book to his brother Sebastiano, who was born exactly 30 years ago, the day after the Fall of the Berlin Wall; while Marco dedicates this book to his children Pietro and Giulia, wishing them to grow in an increasingly united, just, open and strong Europe.

Federico Fabbrini and Marco Ventoruzzo
Dublin and Milan, June 2019