

Contributors

Tathagata Chatterji is Professor of Urban Management and Governance at Xavier University, Bhubaneswar. His research interests are urban economic development, global cities and political-economy of urbanisation. He has published two books: Local Mediation of Global Forces in Transformation of the Urban Fringe (Lambert Academic Publishing 2014) and Citadels of Glass – India's New Suburban Landscape (Tata-Westland Press 2015). He received the Gerd Albers Award in 2016 from the ISOCARP for his research on comparative governance. He holds a PhD in Urban Governance and Planning from the University of Queensland.

Ming-Yee Foo holds a MPP (Public Policy) from the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy (LKYSPP), National University of Singapore. During her graduate studies (2017–2019), she focused on urban studies and international affairs as part of her curriculum. Her research areas are in the realms of smart cities, technology adoption and sustainable development. Prior to joining LKYSPP, she had interned and worked in various departments of the Singapore Public Service.

Jong-Sung Hwang is a lead researcher at the National Information Society Agency in Korea. He leads research projects on smart city and future government and is a master planner of the Busan EDC National Pilot Smart City. From 2011 to 2013, he was a chief information officer of the Seoul Metropolitan Government. He was awarded the Order of Civil Merit, Camellia Medal by the Korean Government in 2016. He holds a PhD in Political Science from Yonsei University in Korea.

Satria Aji Imawan is a member of the research staff at the Centre for Population and Policy Studies (PSKK) Universitas Gadjah Mada, Indonesia. His research interests are behavioural public administration, public service innovation and regulatory impact assessment.

Yu-Min Joo is an associate professor at the KDI School of Public Policy and Management in Korea. She holds a PhD in Urban and Regional Planning from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. From 2012 to 2019, she was an assistant professor at the Lee Kuan Yew Policy, National University of Singapore. She teaches and publishes on urban development and policy issues in Asia, particularly on the topics of urban governance, smart cities, city branding, mega-projects and mega-events.

Chee Keong Khoo is a doctoral candidate at the City University of Hong Kong under the Hong Kong PhD Fellowship Scheme. He earned his bachelor's degree in Building Surveying with Distinction from the University of Malaya, Malaysia. His dissertation deals with cost-benefit analysis of green building certification and occupant behaviour of green public housing in Hong Kong.

Kian Cheng Lee is an assistant professor at the Faculty of Political Science and Public Administration and School of Public Policy, Chiang Mai University, Thailand. He holds a PhD (Social Sciences), MA (Southeast Asian Studies), MTh (Asian Christianity), MDiv, MA (Biblical Studies) and BSc (Physics). He is also a board director of Asian Pastoral Institute Ltd. Kian Cheng's research interests include Chinese transnationalism (tourism, entrepreneurship and social embeddedness), cultural diplomacy and religious networks.

Xin Li is an assistant professor in the Department of Architecture and Civil Engineering at the City University of Hong Kong. She has a PhD in Urban and Regional Studies from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a Master of Urban Planning from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. Her recent research focuses on cultural and creative industry and urban land policy.

Michael Manning is a doctoral candidate in Public Administration and lecturer for the Institute of General Education at Incheon National University. He has published in the Asian Journal of Cultural Policy, Songdo Journal of Social Sciences, and Korea TESOL Journal. His research interests include city planning, environmental policy and comparative cultural policy.

Kyung-Min Nam is an assistant professor at the University of Hong Kong and holds a PhD in International Development and Regional Planning from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His research interests focus on the institutional and policy dimensions of economic and environmental sustainability, and his scholarly work has been widely published in the major peer-reviewed journals in this field. He has also served on the editorial boards of several academic journals, including the Annals of Regional Science (Springer).

Jae-in Noh is a doctoral candidate in Public Administration at Incheon National University. She has worked for the Korea Local Information and Research Development Institute as a researcher and has published articles in Korean, on the topics of Jeongbohwa Jeongchaek (Informatisation Policy), and in English (forthcoming). Her research interests lie in e-government, local politics and administration.

Ora-orn Poocharoen is the Director of Chiang Mai University School of Public Policy. She is also a nominated member of the Committee of Experts on Public Administration (CEPA) of the United Nations from 2018 to 2021. She obtained her PhD in Public Administration from Syracuse University, New York. Her research focuses on comparative public policy and administration in Asia, smart city, deliberative processes and innovation in the public sector. She has provided consultation to many government agencies in Thailand and multilateral organisations.

Arif Budy Pratama is a lecturer at the Public Administration Programme, Universitas Tidar, Indonesia. He is currently undertaking his PhD at the Bonn International Graduate School for Development Research (ZEF), University of Bonn, Germany. He holds an MPA (with Distinction) from University of Exeter, UK. His research interests include bureaucracy, local governance and development. Prior to joining academia, he worked as the head of Program Formulation in the Ministry for Political, Legal, and Security Affairs, Republic of Indonesia.

Souvanic Roy is a professor and head of School of Ecology, Infrastructure and Human Settlement Management at the Indian Institute of Engineering Science and Technology (IIST), Shibpur. His areas of interest include urban planning, urban policy for inclusive cities and housing strategies for the urban poor. He is a member of the Working Group for National Civil Society Consultation and has contributed to the Delhi Declaration on 'India's Urban Future: Choice Not Chance – Civil Society Contribution to Habitat III'.

Teck-Boon Tan is a research fellow and coordinator of the Science and Technology Studies Programme in the Office of the Executive Deputy Chairman, S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies (RSIS), Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. His research covers science and technology policy, smart urbanism and disruptive technology. He received his PhD from the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, National University of Singapore.

Jill L. Tao is the first international professor and chair of the Department of Public Administration at Incheon National University, Korea. She has published widely in public administration, local government and public policy journals. She currently works with a research team at the United Nations University, Operating Unit on Policy-Driven Electronic Governance (EGOV) in Guimaraes, Portugal, examining the effects of culture on how local officials utilize social media platforms, and whether such differences have demonstrable effects on transparency, trust and participation.

Poon Thiengburanathum is an assistant professor and Director of the Excellence Center for Urban Study and Public Policy (ECUP), Chiang Mai University. His expertise lies in the field of complex system analysis for planning and policy recommendations. The complex system analysis has been adopted for a variety of research in regional development, urban planning and environmental studies, such as urban mobility, haze, supply chain and logistic analysis for food products.

Shang-su Wu is a research fellow at S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies (RSIS), Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. He has a PhD from the University of New South Wales, Australia. Before joining the RSIS, he taught at the National Defense University in Taiwan. He is the author of The Defence Capabilities of Small States: Singapore and Taiwan's Responses to Strategic Desperation (Palgrave 2016). His research interests are military modernisation, Taiwan issues, railway and international relations.

Xinhui Yang is a postgraduate at the School of Government, Sun Yat-sen University (SYSU) in Guangzhou, China. His primary research interests are in the field of smart city, urban governance and rural education. His expertise is in building econometric models and in data analysis including Excel, Stata, Python, R and CiteSpace.

Masaru Yarime is an associate professor in the Division of Public Policy at the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. He has appointments as an honorary reader at University College London and as a visiting associate professor at the University of Tokyo. He has received a BEng and MS in Chemical Engineering from the University of Tokyo and the California Institute of Technology respectively and a PhD in Economics and Policy Studies of Innovation and Technological Change from Maastricht University in the Netherlands.

Lin Ye is a professor at the Center for Chinese Public Administration Research and School of Government, Sun Yat-sen University (SYSU) in Guangzhou, China. His primary research interests are in the field of urban policy and regional governance.