

Contributors

Jane Addison is Lecturer in Rangeland Ecology and Socio-Ecological Systems at James Cook University, Australia. Dr Addison has been doing socio-ecological research in Mongolia and Inner Mongolia since 2007 and has written widely on rangeland ecology and Mongolian herder attitudes and behaviour.

Karl Behrendt holds the Elizabeth Creak Chair in Agri-Tech Economic Modelling at Harper Adams University, UK and has lectured in agribusiness at Charles Sturt University, Australia. He is an expert in bioeconomic modelling and in agribusiness.

Jeff Bennett is Professor at the Australian National University. Professor Bennett is an economist who specialises in agricultural, environmental and natural resource applications. He has prior research experience in the evaluation of the 'Grain for Green' programme in China.

Colin G. Brown is Associate Professor in Agricultural and Resource Economics in the School of Agricultural and Food Sciences at The University of Queensland, Australia. Dr Brown has been involved in livestock economics and marketing, grassland research, land use and industry policy research in China since 1990 and in Mongolia since 2015.

Duinkherjav Bukhbat is a PhD student at The University of Queensland, Australia and a research officer in the School of Economics and Business at Mongolia University of Life Sciences. Duinkherjav has previously done research on rural–urban migration of herders in Mongolia, and his current PhD study at The University of Queensland is concerned with herder livelihoods, credit and vulnerability in Mongolia.

Lkhagvadorj Dorjburegdaa is Professor of Agricultural and Livestock Economics in the School of Economics and Business at Mongolia University of Life Sciences. Professor Dorjburegdaa is responsible for the development of environmental economics courses in the School of Economics and Business and his research involves extensive surveys of herders and other grassland actors in Mongolia.

Udval Gombosuren is Director and Professor of Rangeland Ecology and Livestock Systems at the Research Institute of Animal Husbandry at Mongolia University of Life Sciences.

Han Guodong is Professor of Rangeland Ecology at the College of Grassland, Resources and Environment at Inner Mongolia Agricultural University and Director of Key Laboratory for Grassland Resources of the Chinese Ministry of Education.

Hou Xiangyang is Professor and former Director of Institute of Grassland Research at the Chinese Academy of Agricultural Sciences.

Gantuya Jargalsaihan is a Researcher in the Rangeland and Forage Department of the Research Institute of Animal Husbandry at Mongolia University of Life Sciences. Gantuya has been involved in training and internship programs in Iceland, Austria and the USA.

David Kemp is Professor of Agricultural Systems at Charles Sturt University, Australia, Emeritus Professor at the University of Sydney and a Fellow of the Australian Institute of Agriculture. In 2015 he received a Friendship Award from the Chinese Government, in 2014 the Dunhuang Award from the Gansu Government, and in 2010 the Golden Steed Award from the Inner Mongolian Government, all for contributions to development. He has been the representative for Oceania at the International Grassland Congress.

Li Ping is Assistant Director in the Institute of Grassland Research at the Chinese Academy of Agricultural Sciences. Dr Li is a graduate of China Agricultural University and has been an editor for the Chinese Journal of Grassland as well as Secretary-general of the Grassland Economic and Policy Committee in the China Grass Society.

Enkh-Orchlon Lkhagvadorj is a PhD student at the Australian National University and Research Officer in the School of Economics and Business at Mongolia University of Life Sciences. Enkh-Orchlon has previously done research on transmission of ruminant livestock product prices in Mongolia as part of her Master's study at the University of Göttingen, Germany.

Qiao Guanghua is Dean and Professor of Agricultural Economics at the College of Economics and Management at Inner Mongolia Agricultural University. A graduate of Renmin University, China, Professor Qiao is the recipient of numerous awards in Inner Mongolia and China. Professor Qiao is Vice Chairman of the China Society of Forest, Animal Husbandry and Fisheries Economics, Vice Chairman of the Professional Committee of Animal Husbandry Economy, Director of the Animal Husbandry Economics Research Base (IMAR Philosophy and Social Science Research Base), and Director of the Inner Mongolia Agriculture, Forestry, and Animal Husbandry Economic Research Centre.

Scott Waldron is Senior Lecturer in International Agricultural Development and Research Fellow at the School of Agricultural and Food Sciences at The University of Queensland, Australia. Dr Waldron has been involved in livestock economics and marketing, grassland, agribusiness and industry policy research in China since 1997.

Wang Zhongwu is Assistant Professor of Rangeland Ecology at the College of Grassland, Resources and Environment at Inner Mongolia Agricultural University.

Zhang Bao is a PhD student and Research Officer of Agricultural Economics at the College of Economics and Management at Inner Mongolia Agricultural University. Bao has done various research on grassland economics and policy as part of his role as Research Officer and PhD student.

Zhang Jing is Research Officer at the School of Agricultural and Food Sciences at The University of Queensland, Australia. Dr Jing has done research on weather index insurance in north China.

Zhang Yingjun is Professor and Head of Grassland Science at China Agricultural University in Beijing. He is Secretary-General of the Chinese Grassland Society.

Zhao Mengli is Professor of Rangeland Ecology and Dean of the College of International Education at the College of Grassland, Resources and Environment at Inner Mongolia Agricultural University.

