Contributors

Raj Agnihotri (Ph.D.; Kent State University) is Dean’s Fellow and Associate Professor of Marketing at Ivy College of Business, Iowa State University. He also serves as the Director of the Ivy Sales Forum. Winner of the Comer Award for contribution to sales theory, Raj is a co-author of the ABCs of Relationship Selling textbook, a market leader in sales classes globally. His research focuses on digital selling, social media use, sales-service ambidexterity, and sales performance.

Scott C. Ambrose (DBA; Kennesaw State University) is an Assistant Professor at the David B. O’Maley College of Business, Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, Daytona Beach, Florida. Dr. Ambrose has published several scholarly articles in leading marketing and sales journals. His research focuses on salesperson burnout, sales and operations planning and job satisfaction.

Maja Arslanagić-Kalajdzic (Ph.D.; University of Ljubljana) is an Associate Professor of Marketing at School of Economics and Business, University of Sarajevo. Her research focuses on understanding business-to-business (B2B) relationships, as well as sales in B2B setting, marketing accountability and value creation.

Nawar N. Chaker (Ph.D.; University of Tennessee) is an Assistant Professor of Marketing at E.J. Ourso College of Business, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, USA. His research focuses on understanding drivers of salesperson performance, emotions in sales, the salesperson–sales manager interface, cross-functional sales relationships, and front-line employee management.

Ted Clark (MBA; Clark University) is the Director of Northeastern University’s Center for Family Business and Executive Professor of Entrepreneurship and Innovation in the D’Amore-McKim School of Business, Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts. His research focuses primarily on family-owned and managed businesses and SME and entrepreneurial startups.
Dawn R. Deeter-Schmelz (Ph.D.; University of South Florida) is a Professor and J.J. Vanier Distinguished Chair of Relational Selling and Marketing at the College of Business, Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kansas. Her current research interests focus on hiring and recruiting early career salespeople, selling and managing across cultural boundaries, and sales manager effectiveness.

Rebecca Dingus (Ph.D.; Kent State University) is an Associate Professor of Marketing and Professional Sales in the College of Business Administration at Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant, Michigan. In addition to being deeply interested in business ethics, her research identifies how social media and forecasting tools can impact the performance outcomes of sales professionals and how sales managers can be more adaptable to their sales force.

John H. Friar (Ph.D.; MIT) is Professor of Entrepreneurship and Innovation at the D’Amore-McKim School of Business, Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts. His research focuses on innovation strategy, business creation, and entrepreneurship and economic development.

Nathaniel N. Hartmann (Ph.D.; Purdue University) is Assistant Professor in the School of Marketing and Innovation at the Muma College of Business, University of South Florida. His research interests include contemporary selling and sales management, marketing strategy, and innovation issues. His work appears in the Journal of Marketing, Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, Journal of Product Innovation Management, and Journal of Service Research, in addition to the Journal of Business Research.

Joe Ippolito (MBA; Northeastern University) is a Principal at Sandler Training which provides sales training, management training, customer service training, and professional development for individuals and organizations in Boston, Massachusetts.

Fernando Jaramillo (Ph.D.; University of South Florida) is Associate Dean and Professor of Marketing at the University of Texas, Arlington. His research focuses on sales management and ethics.

Selma Kadić-Maglajlić (Ph.D.; University of Ljubljana) is an Associate Professor of Marketing at Copenhagen Business School. Her research focuses on interpersonal interactions, emotions and ethics in selling and sales management. Her work has been published in various international journals, including the Journal of International Marketing, Journal of Business Ethics, Industrial Marketing Management, Journal of Business Research, International Bruno Lussier (Ph.D.; Université de Grenoble) is Associate Professor at the Department of Marketing of HEC Montréal. His research interests include personal selling and sales management, sales force effectiveness, business-to-business (B2B) selling, relationship marketing, applied psychology, and ethics in application to the sales profession. He has published multiple research articles in Journal of Business Ethics and Industrial Marketing Management.

Jay Mulki (Ph.D.; University of South Florida) is an Associate Professor, Marketing Group, D’Amore-McKim School of Business, Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts. His research focuses on ethics, attitude, behavior, and performance of salespeople.

Vincent Onyemah (Ph.D.; INSEAD) is an Associate Professor at Babson College, Babson Park, Massachusetts. His research focuses on entrepreneurial selling, scale-up entrepreneurship ecosystems, sales enablement technology, salesforce control systems, attitude, behavior, and performance of salespeople.

Martha Rivera-Pesquera (Ph.D.; IESE) is a Marketing and Sales Professor at IPADE Business School, in Mexico. Her research focuses on entrepreneurial selling, women entrepreneurship, salesforce management, salespeople performance and effectiveness, and Latin-American business strategies. Additionally, she is also committed to the understanding of women in leadership and women on boards.

Brian N. Rutherford (Ph.D.; Georgia State University) is a Professor at the Coles College of Business, Kennesaw State University, Kennesaw, Georgia. Dr. Rutherford has served on over 30 dissertation committees and has published over 50 peer-reviewed journal articles. His research focuses on salesperson job satisfaction, burnout, turnover, and conflict.

C. David Shepherd (Ph.D.; University of Tennessee) is currently an Associate Professor at the Baker School of Business at The Citadel. Dr. Shepherd has published in numerous leading scholarly journals including the Journal of Retailing, Journal of Business Research, Marketing Theory and Practice, Industrial Marketing Management, and the Journal of Personal Selling & Sales Management. His primary areas of research interest include role stress and burnout in personal sales.

Armen Tashchian (Ph.D.; The University of Texas at Austin) is a Professor of Marketing at the Coles College of Business, Kennesaw State University, Kennesaw, Georgia. Dr. Tashchian has published in numerous academic journals including the Journal of Marketing, Journal of Marketing Research, and the Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science. His research focuses on salesperson burnout and job satisfaction.

Heiko Wieland (Ph.D.; University of Hawaii at Manoa) is an Associate Professor of Marketing at the California State University Monterey Bay. His research is focused in the area of socio-technical innovation processes, market formation, professional selling, and value creation. Dr. Wieland has published scholarly work in the Journal of Marketing, Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, Industrial Marketing Management, Journal of Business Research and other top-ranked journals.