

Contributors

The late Gerardo Abreu Pederzini was formerly Assistant Professor (Lecturer) of HRM/Organizational Behaviour at Kent Business School, University of Kent, UK. He was also Adjunct Fellow at Universidad de las Américas Puebla in Mexico. His research focused on using unconventional and critical theories, such as psychoanalysis, evolutionary theory, complexity theory, Bourdieu, or the philosophy of science, to understand leadership and strategy. His work has been published in world-leading journals, including the Academy of Management Learning & Education and the Journal of Management Inquiry.

Carol Attack is a by-e-fellow and Director of studies in Classics at Newnham College, University of Cambridge, UK. Her research on ancient Greek political thought explores intersections of power and ethics, and theories of political change. Her doctoral thesis on the philosophy of monarchy is being published as The Discourse of Kingship in Classical Greece (Routledge, 2020). As a postdoctoral researcher, she co-authored Anachronism and Antiquity (Bloomsbury, 2020) with colleagues at the University of Oxford, the aim of which was to offer a new conceptual map of antiquity through the notion of anachronism.

Dr Vinca Bigo is Associate Professor in Embodied Leadership and Corporate Liberation at KEDGE Business School, France, a post she has held since 2010. She holds a PhD from Cambridge University after a career in finance. Her current research centres on embodied learning, the ethics of care, philosophy of science, leadership, silence, and liberated entrepreneurship. Her teaching commitments include Embodied Leadership, Liberated Entrepreneurship, Yoga and Philosophy. Recent publications include: On Silence, Creativity and Ethics in Organization Studies in the journal Organization Studies (2017).

Dr Peter Bloom is Professor of Management at the University of Essex, UK. His books include: The Bad Faith in the Free Market: The Radical Promise of Existential Freedom (2018); Beyond Power and Resistance: Politics at the Radical Limits (2016); The Ethics of Neoliberalism (2017); and with Carl Rhodes, The CEO Society: The Corporate Takeover of Everyday Life (2018). He has served as lead academic on a range of recent BBC programmes, including The Bottom Line on Radio 4 and Can Britain Have a Pay Rise? on BBC2.

Joanne B. Ciulla is Professor of Leadership Ethics and Director of the Institute for Ethical Leadership at Rutgers Business School and Professor Emerita of the Jepson School of Leadership Studies, at the University of Richmond, USA. A philosopher by training, her research focuses on Leadership Ethics, Business Ethics, and philosophy of work. Her books include: The Working Life: The Promise and Betrayal of Modern Work; Ethics the Heart of Leadership; and a co-edited 3-volume reference work, Leadership Ethics.

Ann L. Cunliffe is Professor of Organization Studies at Escola de Administração da Fundação Getúlio Vargas, Brazil and Visiting Professor at the Università Cattolica, Milano, Italy and Aalborg University, Denmark. Her current research interests include ethical leadership, embodied sensemaking, qualitative research, and reflexivity. Recent publications include articles in Organizational Research Methods, the British Journal of Management, and Organization Studies. She organizes the biennial Qualitative Research in Management and Organization Conference in New Mexico, USA.

Matthew Eriksen is Professor in and Chair of the Department of Management at Providence College, Providence, Rhode Island, USA. His research interests are in the areas of leadership, leadership development, and management education. His publications include the articles: Relational Leadership in Human Relations (2011), On Developing Responsible Leaders in the Journal of Management Development (2018), and Shared-Purpose Process: Implications and Possibilities for Student Learning, Development and Self-Transformation in the Journal of Management Education (2017).

Yiannis Gabriel is a social psychologist, currently Professor Emeritus at the University of Bath, UK and Visiting Professor at Lund University, Sweden. Yiannis has researched organizational storytelling and narratives, leadership and followership, management learning and contemporary consumption. He is co-author of Return to Meaning: A Social Science with Something to Say (with Mats Alvesson and Roland Paulsen, OUP, 2017) and maintains an active blog on www.yiannisgabriel.com, in which he discusses his academic interests as well as musical, political and other issues.

Dr Rita A. Gardiner is Assistant Professor in Critical Policy, Equity and Leadership Studies, Faculty of Education, Western University, Canada. An Arendtian scholar, she sees leadership as an affective, embodied and relational experience. Her publications include Gender, Authenticity and Leadership: Thinking with Arendt (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015), and articles in Business Ethics Quarterly, Leadership, Organization, and Gender, Work and Organization. She is currently working on a Social Science and Humanities funded project that examines the implementation of sexual violence policies in Canadian universities.

Dr Liz Gloyn is Senior Lecturer in Classics at Royal Holloway, University of London, UK. Her research interests explore the intersection between Latin literature, the Roman family and ancient philosophy, with a particular focus on how relationships of care are modelled and idealised. She also works on classical reception and how the past infuses contemporary sensibilities, experiences and understandings. She is the author of The Ethics of the Family in Seneca (Cambridge University Press, 2017) and Tracking Classical Monsters in Popular Culture (Bloomsbury, 2019).

Jen Jones, PhD, is Associate Professor and Department Coordinator in the School of Business at Seton Hill University, USA. Her research attends to ethics in leadership and communication from a humanities perspective. Recent publications include: Empathic Leadership: Saint Edith Stein's Phenomenological Perspective in Denison's Women, Religion, and Leadership: Female Saints as Unexpected Leaders (Routledge); and The Derivative Organization and Responsible Leadership: Levinas's Dwelling and Discourse; and Leadership Lessons from Levinas: Revisiting Responsible Leadership in Leadership & the Humanities.

Donna Ladkin is Professor of Leadership and Ethics with Antioch University's Graduate School in Leadership and Change, USA. A philosopher and musician by background, Donna's work explores leadership as a lived phenomenon, focusing particularly on its aesthetic and embodied aspects. Her philosophically informed approach to leadership has been published in journals such as Leadership Quarterly, Business Ethics Quarterly, Journal of Business Ethics and Leadership. The second edition of her book, Rethinking Leadership: A New Look at Old Leadership Questions will be published by Edward Elgar in 2020.

Michèle Lowrie, Andrew W. Mellon Distinguished Service Professor of Classics, University of Chicago, USA, works on Latin literature and Roman political thought. She is currently writing a monograph on security, a concept through which people and leaders reimagined their relationship during the transition from the Roman Republic's distributed leadership to monarchy under the Empire. Publications include: Writing, Performance and Authority in Augustan Rome (2009); Roman Law and Latin Literature, Oxford Handbook of Roman Law and Society (2016); and Political Thought, Cambridge Critical Guide to Latin Literature (forthcoming).

Iain Munro is Professor of Leadership and Organization at Newcastle Business School, University of Newcastle, UK. He has previously worked at the universities of Warwick (1994–2000), St Andrews (2000–2009), and Innsbruck (2009–2013). Iain is engaged in research in the fields of business ethics, power in organizations and information warfare. He has written a research monograph, Information Warfare in Business: Strategies of Control and Resistance in the Network Society (Routledge).

Dr Helen Mussell is Lecturer in Management, Employment and Organisation at Cardiff University, and Research Associate at the Centre for Business Research, University of Cambridge, UK. Her interdisciplinary research spans business ethics, gender, power and leadership, and also includes corporate governance issues, specifically fiduciary duty and trust in organizations. Publications include: Who Dares to Care? (In the World of Finance) in Feminist Economics, Special symposium edition on Sustainability, Ecology and Care (2018); and The Nature of Social Responsibility: Exploring Emancipatory Ends in the Journal for the Theory of Social Behaviour (2017).

Major Ben Sawyer left the British Army in 2017 after 16 years' service. Ben's career centred on counter-terrorism bomb disposal and leadership. His experience has included multiple tours in the Balkans, Northern Ireland, Iraq and Afghanistan, four of which were as a bomb disposal operator with special operations task forces. Ben has personal experience of PTSD, moral injury and its connections with care/carelessness, and is interested in what the business world can learn from the military about leadership and moral injury, and vice versa.

Dr Liz Sawyer is an Associate Researcher at the Ioannou Centre for Classical and Byzantine Studies at the University of Oxford, UK. Her primary interest is the use of classical literature in spheres outside the academy, especially in public discourse, and in the use and transmission of quotations from classical writers. Upcoming publications include co-editing Brill's Companion to the Legacy of Greek Political Thought (forthcoming, 2020) with David Carter and Rachel Foxley.

Peter Simpson is Associate Professor in Organization Studies at Bristol Business School, UK. He has published widely in international journals on leadership, change management, organizational complexity, group dynamics, and workplace spirituality. He co-authored with Robert French Attention, Cooperation, Purpose: An Approach to Working in Groups Using Insights from Wilfred Bion (Karnac, 2014) and co-edited Worldly Leadership: Alternative Wisdoms for a Complex World (Palgrave, 2011) with Sharon Turnbull, Peter Case, Gareth Edwards and Doris Schedlitzki.

Amanda Sinclair is a writer, teacher and researcher in leadership, change, gender and diversity. Currently a Professorial Fellow, Amanda held the Foundation Chair of Management (Diversity and Change) at Melbourne Business School, the University of Melbourne, Australia (1995–2012). Her books include: Doing Leadership Differently (1998); Leadership for the Disillusioned (2007); Leading Mindfully (2016); and, with Christine Nixon, Women Leading (2017). Also a yoga and meditation teacher, Amanda encourages care and self-care as central to effective and sustainable leadership.

Torkild Thanem, PhD, is Professor of Management and Organization Studies at Stockholm Business School, Stockholm University, Sweden. Torkild has a longstanding interest in the ethics, politics and philosophy of leadership and organization, and he is currently completing an ethnographic project on life and work in a corporate performance culture. His recent work appears in journals such as Leadership, Organization, and Business Ethics Quarterly. Torkild's most recent book is Embodied Research Methods (with David Knights, published by Sage in 2019).

Dr Leah Tomkins is Senior Lecturer at the Open University, UK. Originally a classicist and linguist, her research explores the enduring themes of organizational experience, especially in connection with leadership ethics and the meanings of work. Having spent twenty years in the corporate world, she looks to bridge gaps between academia and practice. Other books include Health at Work: Critical Perspectives (Routledge, 2019), and she has published articles in Organization Studies, Business Ethics Quarterly, and Leadership. Forthcoming work examines caring leadership as slave morality through the prism of the philosophy of Nietzsche.

Charlotte von Bülow is founder and Director of the Crossfields Institute Group, an awarding organization, HEI and research institute for social innovation established in 2007. Crossfields Institute focuses on education, professional practice and leadership that facilitate transformative ways of life and working practices in a complex world. Charlotte has held a range of senior leadership positions and her global consulting practice is currently focused on the USA, Scandinavia and the UK. She registered for a doctorate at Bristol Business School in 2014, studying 'The Practice of Attention in Workplace Experience.'