

Acknowledgments

I want to thank the remarkable people who I have had the privilege to work with over the last two decades. There are many people that could be mentioned here but some stand out in particular for their contribution to this book and the thinking behind it. I would like to thank Johan Leysen and Tom Andries who were both directors at the advertising agency LDV-Bates in Antwerp when I started to experiment. I have many others from industry to thank but most especially Marc Peeters, former CEO of Veritas; Anton van Mansum and Anthonie Maranus, President and member of the board of Surplus; Marieke Beekers, Chief Connecting Officer and Nadine Gooijers, Strategic Advisor, both at the city of Breda; Dirk Diels, Director Entrepreneurship and Innovation at the city of Antwerp; and Annemie Lemahieu, Director Innovation at Unizo Belgium.

I would like to thank the Board of Breda University and in particular Dr. Elisabeth Minnemann and Nico van Os for their ongoing commitment to Imagineering. Then there is, of course, my great international team of co-writers and researchers that I would like to thank here: Celiane, Lilian and Fabio all from Brazil; Frank, Geoff and Angelica from the Netherlands; and Liliya from Bulgaria. In addition, I explicitly want to thank my colleagues Frank Crucq, Gert-Jan Remmers, Suzan Lindhout, Pim Dopheide and Koert de Jager (former Director of Breda University) for their ever eye-opening work so relevant to the topics in this book. And last, but definitely not least, I would like to thank Jonathan Clark for taking care of the editing of this book at a time that was very challenging for him personally: Jonathan, that our work may also be a tribute to the ones we love.

I have had extremely valuable academic feedback along the road to this new field of complexity, innovation and design. With this in mind I have a large number of great scholars to thank. In the Netherlands, Jo van Engelen, Professor of Integrated Sustainable Solutions, and Ena Voute, Dean of the Faculty of Industrial Design, both at the University of Delft; Sjoerd Romme, Professor of Entrepreneurship and Innovation at the Technical University of Eindhoven; Danielle Zandee, Professor of Sustainable Organizational Development at Nyenrode University and Ton Jorg, former Senior Complexity Researcher at the University of Utrecht. In Belgium, I want to thank Koen Vandembemt, Dean of the Faculty of Business & Management of the University of Antwerp.

In the UK, I would like to thank Eve Mitleton-Kelly, Professor and Director of the EMK Complexity Group at the London School of Economics, and Robert Young, Professor of Design Practice in the Department of Design, Faculty of Arts, Design and Social Sciences, Northumbria University. In South Africa, I would like to thank Ronel Rensburg, Professor and Director of the Centre for Communication and Reputation Management. In China, I would like to thank my former colleague, Dr. Wendong Deng and Ken Friedman, Editor-in-Chief of She Ji: The Journal of Design, Economics, and Innovation, and Professor of Design at Tongji University. Finally, in the US, I would like to thank my former colleague at the Master Imagineering and awards winning author at Fast Company, Soren Kaplan; Alfonso Montuori, Professor in the Transformative Inquiry Department at California Institute of Integral Studies and co-supervisor of my PhD-study; and finally, but definitely not the least important, Benyamin Lichtenstein, Associate Professor of Entrepreneurship and Management at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, and author of the most inspiring Oxford book on Generative Emergence. Benyamin never ceased giving me very valuable feedback for this book.

Special thanks go of course to my family and friends; to my children, Kaat and Michel, my partner Johan, and my close friends Axelle, Veerle, Tanja and Jo for all the beauty we have together.
