

Contents

List of contributors	vii
Foreword by Heinz Koller	ix
1. Convergence in the EU: What role for industrial relations? Daniel Vaughan-Whitehead and Rosalia Vazquez-Alvarez	1
2. Social convergence of the Baltic states within the enlarged EU: Is limited social dialogue an impediment? Jaan Masso, Vladyslav Soloviov, Kerly Espenberg and Inta Mierina	35
3. Belgium: Is strong social concertation a driver of upward social convergence? Ive Marx	78
4. Is France converging or not? The role of industrial relations Pierre Courtioux and Christine Erhel	101
5. Does the German social model support the convergence of living conditions in the EU? Gerhard Bosch	139
6. Ireland after the Great Recession: Convergence or divergence? Philip J. O'Connell	175
7. Italy: How could industrial relations help a return to economic and social convergence? Annamaria Simonazzi, Valerio Ciampa and Luca Villamaina	205
Case study: Italy and Slovenia – two paths to labour market flexibility and social dialogue Branko Bembič and Annamaria Simonazzi	227
8. The Netherlands: From convergence to divergence in Europe? Social dialogue and industrial relations in the face of household labour supply Wiemer Salverda	250
9. Social convergence, development failures and industrial relations: The case of Portugal Pilar González and António Figueiredo	291
10. Slovenia: Is the weakening of industrial relations taking its toll on social convergence? Branko Bembič	333

11.	Economic and social convergence in Spain: The elusive goal of catching up with the EU Rafael Muñoz de Bustillo	366
12.	Convergence towards better working and living conditions: The crucial role of industrial relations in Sweden Dominique Anxo	398
13.	The United Kingdom's record on economic and social convergence with Europe: A pre-Brexit appraisal Damian Grimshaw	436
	Index	473