

Contributors

Dr Maria Abreu

Maria is a regional economist, working on topics relating to creativity, higher education, migration and local labour markets. She is a Lecturer at the University of Cambridge and a Fellow of Pembroke College.

Jonathan Cook

Jonathan is a Director at SQW and has over 15 years' experience in applying economic analysis to public policy interventions. He is a principal lead for SQW's work in the fields of industrial policy, innovation and enterprise. He is co-leading the integrated analysis for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Professor Iain Docherty

Iain is Dean of the Institute for Advanced Studies at the University of Stirling. His research interests focus on the interconnecting issues of public policy, institutional change and city and regional competitiveness, especially the role of transport in promoting economic development and environmental sustainability. He is leading on the Infrastructure theme for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Professor Gary Dymski

Gary is Professor and Chair in Applied Economics at Leeds University Business School working across the fields of public policy, political economy, money and banking and macroeconomics. He is leading on the Organisations, Institutions and Governance theme for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Ben Gardiner

Ben is a Director of Cambridge Econometrics, and has been working in economic consultancy for over 20 years. His specialisms include econometric modelling and forecasting, with a particular interest in regional and labour market economics. He is co-leading on the thematic analysis for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Dan Hardy

Dan has experience in the analysis, evaluation and delivery of education, business creation and innovation policies and programmes. He holds an MSc in Local Economic Development from the LSE and has co-authored book chapters and journal articles on various topics including in the field of local and regional development.

Professor Richard Harris

Richard is Professor in Economics at Durham University Business School and has published over 150 journal articles, chapters and books, mostly related to productivity. He is leading on the Trade, FDI, Capital and Investment Markets theme for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Professor Andrew Henley

Andy is Professor of Entrepreneurship and Economics at Cardiff Business School working on entrepreneurship and small business and in regional and labour market economics. He is leading on the place based analysis for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Professor Robert Huggins

Robert is Professor of Economic Geography at Cardiff School for Economic Geography working on regional economic development, in particular the study of clusters of competitiveness, knowledge flows, entrepreneurship, innovation and inter-organisational networks. He is leading on the Technology, Innovation, Competitiveness and Enterprise theme for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Dr Hiro Izushi

Hiro is a Senior Lecturer in Innovation within the Economics, Finance & Entrepreneurship Department at Aston Business School. Hiro's research interests are in innovation, business network, knowledge-based economic development and the video game industry.

Richard Lewney

Richard is Chairman of Cambridge Econometrics, and has over 25 years' experience in the application of applied economic analysis and economic modelling to policy analysis, policy evaluation and forecasting, for government and private sector clients. He is co-leading on the thematic analysis for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Dr Katerina Lisenkova

Katerina was Head of Economic Modelling at the Fraser Allander Institute within the Economics Department at the University of Strathclyde. Katerina has ten years of experience of macroeconomic modelling using OLG, multi-sectoral CGE and structural macroeconomic models. Her research interests are in the areas of population economics, demographic change, public finance, economics of migration, regional economics, economics of education and macroeconomic modelling. Katerina left the Productivity Insights Network in July 2018.

Professor Colin Mason

Colin is Professor of Entrepreneurship at the Adam Smith Business School, working on entrepreneurship and regional development. His specific research interests are entrepreneurial finance, high growth entrepreneurship and entrepreneurial ecosystems. He is co-leading on the thematic analysis for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Professor Philip McCann

Philip is Professor of Urban and Regional Economics and a Co-Director of the Productivity Insights Network based at the University of Sheffield Management School. Philip is one of the world's most highly cited and widely published spatial economists and economic geographers of his generation and one of the UK's most highly cited social scientists. Philip is also the Tagliaferri Research Fellow in the Department of Land Economy at the University of Cambridge (2015–18) and Honorary Professor of Economic Geography in the Faculty of Spatial Sciences at the University of Groningen, the Netherlands (2017–22).

Professor Leaza McSorley

Leaza is Professor of Enterprise within the Faculty of Business, Law and Tourism at the University of Sunderland. Leaza's research expertise is in regional economic development and labour market issues (social inclusion and wage inequality). Leaza is leading on the Health, Well-being, Ageing and Demographic Change theme and is also leading our Early Career network for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Dr Jen Nelles

Jen is a researcher, professor and consultant specialising in the areas of metropolitan governance and regional economic development. She holds a PhD in political science from the University of Toronto. She is a Fellow at the CUNY Institute for Sustainable Cities, the CUNY Institute for Urban Systems, and a Visiting Researcher at the Centre for Regional Economic and Enterprise Development (CREED) at Sheffield University Management School. She has led projects in Europe, North America and the Middle East and is currently based in New York. Her current research focuses on regional governance, infrastructure and systems theory.

Professor Kirsty Newsome

Kirsty is Professor of Employment Relations at Sheffield University Management School. Her current research examines the interplay between internal and external forces in the restructuring of the employment relationship, the labour process and value chains in retail distribution and logistics. Kirsty is leading on the Employment, Work and Labour Relations theme for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Professor Vania Sena

Vania is Director of the Business & Local Government Data Research Centre, based at Essex Business School. Her research mainly focuses on the econometric analysis of the determinants of productivity growth. Vania is the Data Director for the Productivity Insights Network team.

Imogen Sprackling

Imogen Sprackling is a consultant at SQW working on research projects related to social and economic development, health, innovation, education and skills. She holds an MA in British Politics from the University of Birmingham and previously worked in the political research team at YouGov.

Professor Tim Vorley

Tim is Professor of Entrepreneurship and Director of the Centre for Regional Economic and Enterprise Development (CREED) at Sheffield University Management School. As a Co-Director of the Productivity Insights Network he has led on policy and stakeholder engagement nationally and regionally. The focus of Tim's research is how innovation, entrepreneurship and enterprise are shaped by institutions and institutional arrangements.

Dr David Waite

David is College Fellow (Urban Studies) within the School of Social and Political Studies at the University of Glasgow. He has numerous publications within the specialty and has published in reputed national and international peer-reviewed journals. David is actively associated with different national and international societies and academies.