Acknowledgments

It has been six years since the previous intuition handbook appeared on the shelves but it was well worth waiting. Intuition is gradually entering the mainstream, as witnessed at our annual symposia at the Academy of Management meetings. This third volume would not have been possible without the unwavering support and contributions of all symposium participants and other members of our growing global community of intuition researchers and practitioners. My thanks go foremost to the contributors to this volume who exhibited utmost professionalism, dedication, and courage to share their cutting-edge work. It has been an honor to be a part of their journey.

As usual, the project was made much easier thanks to the expertise of Francine O'Sullivan, Acquisition Editor, who has witnessed the 'birth' of all three intuition handbooks and became a friend along the way, as well as all her colleagues at Edward Elgar Publishing who provided assistance.

Lastly, my life would not be the same without my husband Carl, my best friend and lifelong companion, who showed me the world and shared my sometimes arduous journey without hesitation. It has become a family tradition to adorn the cover of the handbooks with his artwork. Hopefully the piece we selected for this volume will bring a smile to your face.
