Contributors

Gabriella Argento is a social worker specializing in cooperation and development and a PhD student in migratory studies at the University of Jaén (Spain). She has worked in the field of social inclusion of migrants, in particular migrant children, and as service coordinator in the first reception of unaccompanied minors (UAMs). She has carried out research for the University of Palermo and is currently President of the Italian Association of Social Workers Without Borders.

Ravinder Barn is Professor of Social Policy in the Department of Law and Criminology at Royal Holloway, University of London. She is the author/editor of eight books and over 100 journal papers or book chapters. Ravinder writes on gender, ethnicity, child and youth welfare, and social justice. Ravinder is a mixed-methods researcher whose academic base is interdisciplinary and spans social policy, law, sociology, social work, and criminology. Her research on child welfare and migrant groups is highly regarded nationally and internationally. She is an active member of a 33-nation qualitative research network, and is leading on child well-being studies in rural and urban India, and on unaccompanied children in Sicily.

Elisa Brey is a part-time lecturer at Complutense University of Madrid, Spain. She obtained her PhD in Political and Social Sciences at Liège University in Belgium and Complutense University of Madrid through a co-tutorship. She was a visiting researcher at Warwick University, UK (2007), Alberto Hurtado University, Chile (2011), and the Autonomous University of Mexico State (2018). She is part of the Group of Studies on International Migration (GEMI), the Sociology of Childhood and Adolescence Group (GSIA), in Spain, and scientific associate at the Centre for Ethnic and Migration Studies (CEDEM), in Belgium. She is Co-director of the Master’s Program in Policies.

Roberta T. Di Rosa is a Professor of Sociology of Migration and International Social Work at the University of Palermo, Italy. Her most recent research interests include questions of identity and gender issues in migration; reception and integration practices for unaccompanied children and second generations; and educational innovation on the cross-cultural competence of social workers. She is author of the entry on ‘Social work and integration of migrants’ in the New Dictionary of Social Work (Carocci, 2013), as well as author or co-editor of several recent publications on migrations, social work and migration, namely on unaccompanied minors and migrant women.

Mónica Domínguez-Serrano has a Master’s in Public Administration and a PhD in Economics. She is Associate Professor of Quantitative Methods in Economics at Pablo de Olavide University, Spain. The analysis of gender inequality has been the central thread of her research, especially quantitative methods. She has focused on gender statistics and indicators of well-being: children and time use. She has participated in several international projects and research teams and has several indexed publications. She is currently the Director of the Master’s in Gender and Equality at Pablo de Olavide University.

Natália Fernandes completed her PhD in 2005 in Childhood Studies – specializing in Sociology of Childhood – at the Institute of Education, University of Minho, Portugal. She is an Assistant Professor, University of Minho and a researcher at the Research Centre on Child Studies (CIEC), Portugal. Her research interests include children’s rights and research on children and ethics. She is a founding member and member of the Directive Committee of the former European Network of Masters in Children’s Rights (ENMCR), now the Children’s Rights European Academic Network (CREAN).

Lourdes Gaitán, PhD, is a founding member of the Sociology of Childhood and Adolescence Group (GSIA), Co-director of the journal Sociedad e Infancias, Secretary of the Committee of Sociology of Childhood (FES), and teacher and member of the Academic Council of the Master in Social Policies for Children and Adolescents (Complutense University of Madrid, Spain). She was a founding member of the European Network of Masters in Children’s Rights (ENMCR) and of Research Network 04 (European Sociological Association). She is the author of several books, chapters and articles and her main areas of research are children’s welfare, citizenship and participation, children in the city and migrations.

Angeliki Kiliari is a Professor of Applied Linguistics/Sociolinguistics in the School of German Language and Literature at Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Greece. Her key research interests focus on the interplay between language and society; on sociolinguistic factors impacting the learning of first, second and foreign languages; and on language education issues knitted to multilingual and multicultural contexts. Her current research activity involves issues of language policy; the economy of language; aspects of language instruction at all education levels (with an emphasis on tertiary and adult education); and sociolinguistic phenomena related to the education of refugee children.
Contributors

Foteini Kougioumoutzaki is a lecturer in Sociology and Sociology of Education in the School of Primary Education at Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Greece. She graduated from the Department of Sociology at Panteion University of Social and Political Sciences, Greece and she has a PhD in Sociology. Her research interests include sociology of education, human rights education, sociology of childhood and childhood studies, and social research methodology. She has published in national and international peer-reviewed journals. She is currently working on issues regarding ethical considerations in research with children and young people.

Sandra Mateus completed her Doctorate in Sociology at the University of Lisbon, Portugal (ISCTE-IUL) in 2014. She is currently Integrated Research Fellow at the Centre for Research and Studies in Sociology (CIES-IUL) and an Invited Assistant Professor at the Department of Sociology at ISCTE-IUL. She coordinates for Portugal the European projects ‘Below 10’ (Erasmus+), focused on early school leaving in Europe (2016–19), and ‘PandPAS’, focused on refugees’ integration (2017–19). Her interests in education and migration research include school success, early school leaving, children and young people with migrant backgrounds, future orientations, and social inequality. She is author and co-author of several publications.

Lucía del Moral-Espín is a lecturer at the University of Cádiz (Department of General Economics, area of Sociology), Spain. She was a visiting fellow at the Universities of Leeds, Oxford and Manchester (UK) and Modena and Reggio Emilia (Italy). Her research interests include children’s well-being, the capability approach to well-being, and gender studies. She is part of the Gender Observatory on Economics, Politics & Development (GEP&DO) and the Ibero-American Network of Research on Work, Gender and Everyday Life (TRAGEVIC). Since 2017, she has coordinated the Sociology of Children and Childhood research network of the European Sociological Association.

Ana Nunes de Almeida obtained her degree in Sociology in 1979 at the Faculté des Sciences Économiques et Sociales, Université de Genève, Switzerland. She is currently a Research Professor at the Instituto de Ciências Sociais da Universidade de Lisboa (ICS-ULisboa), Portugal, where she chairs the Scientific Board. She is a member of the Bureau of the Sociologie de l’Enfance Research Committee of the Association Internationale des Sociologues de Langue Française and of the Directive Board of the Research Network on Sociology of Children and Childhood (European Sociological Association). Among her research interests are family and, more recently, childhood and school. She currently researches children and disasters, and children and animals.
Stelios Pantazidis is a teacher and a PhD student in the Department of Early Childhood Education, University of Thessaly, Greece. He has participated in several research projects such as the Sociocultural Learning of Youth in Mobility Societies, Erasmus+ Project (SLYMS). He has published several papers and his research interests are focused on educational commons, childhood studies, critical and non-formal education, and gaming pedagogy.

Yannis Pechtelidis is Associate Professor of Sociology of Education in the Department of Early Childhood Education at the University of Thessaly in Greece. His research interests lie in sociology of education, sociology of childhood, educational and pedagogical commons, childhood and youth studies, discourse theory, and ethnography. He is a member of the European Sociological Association. He has coordinated and participated in several research projects, such as ‘Heteropolitics’: Refiguring the Common and the Political, acronym HETEROPOLITICS (European Research Council Consolidator Grant 2017), and Sociocultural Learning of Youth in Mobile Societies (SLYMS, Erasmus+, 2018). He has also published in reputable journals and is the author of several books.

Vasco Ramos is an assistant researcher at the Instituto de Ciências Sociais da Universidade de Lisboa (ICS-ULisboa) Portugal. He is part of the research group Life Course, Inequality and Solidarities: Practices and Policies (LIFE). He also collaborates with OFAP – the Observatory of Families and Family Policies. As a postdoc researcher, he participated in the European Research Council-funded research project Families and Food in Hard Times. He recently joined the research team of CLAN – Children–Animals Friendships: Challenging Boundaries Between Humans and Non-humans in Contemporary Societies. His research focuses on social inequality, family and, more recently, on food, food practices and human–animal studies.

María Sánchez-Domínguez is an Associate Professor at Complutense University of Madrid, Spain. Her research interests centre on international migration, union and family formation, migrant integration, gender and demography. She has published in international peer-reviewed journals such as Journal of Marriage and Family, Demographic Research and Migration Studies. Recently, she has pursued this agenda further in the fields of demography and the reproduction of social inequalities in divergent European welfare states. She leads a research project ‘Care Crisis in Spain: Family, Health and the Well-being of the Dependents in Spain’ funded by the Ramón Areces Foundation (2018–20).

Manuel Jacinto Sarmento, PhD in Childhood Studies, is a Professor at the Instituto de Educação, Universidade do Minho, Portugal and Visiting Professor at several Brazilian and French universities. He is Director of the Master’s in Child Studies and former Director of the Doctoral Program in Child Studies at the University of Minho and Editor of the journal Research in Education. He is a member of the International Sociological Association (ISA), Association International de Sociologues de Langue Française (AISLF) and of the Comité de Recherche en Sociologie de l’Enfance at AISLF. His research interests include childhood and public policies, child and the city, child labour, childhood cultures and interculturality, and children and education.
Contributors

Caterina Satta is a research fellow at the University of Cagliari, Italy and Secretary of the research network ‘Everyday Life’ of the Italian Sociological Association (AIS). She works in the field of the sociology of childhood, family and everyday life. Her research focuses on adult–child relations in everyday life, parenting and children’s agency, gender and generation, construction of childhood and adulthood, children’s consumer culture, sport and fashion. She has published on key concepts in the sociology of childhood, and parenting through sports activities. She has co-edited a special issue of Modern Italy on ‘Sport and Public Space in Contemporary Italian Cities’.

Teresa Seabra is Professor of Sociology of Education in the Department of Sociology, University of Lisbon, Portugal (ISCTE_IUL) and Researcher in Sociology, specializing in the fields of education (schools and families), school performance and ethnicity. She is Senior Researcher at the Centre for Research and Studies in Sociology (CIES-IUL) and has been coordinator in various national research projects. She is Director of the Master’s in Education and Society at ISCTE-IUL.

Anastasia G. Stamou is an Associate Professor in the Department of Linguistics and Language Teaching of the School of German Language and Literature at Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Greece. Her research interests have been informed by the fact that contemporary social life is ‘textually mediated’. Her current research projects include the study of the discursive constructions of Germanness in a wide range of Greek public discourses; the exploration of the representations of brain drain in Greek entertainment/‘non-serious’ media; and the analysis of fictional representations of sociolinguisitc diversity for the construction of youth, gender and ethnic/national/multilingual identities.

Maria Teresa Tagliaventi is a researcher in sociology of culture and communication at the Department of Education Studies, University of Bologna, Italy, where she teaches sociology of education and social policy. She is the coordinator of RISE (ROMA Inclusive School Experiences), an international project funded by the EU Justice and Rights, Equality and Citizenship programme. She is a member of the Scientific Committee of the National Project for the Inclusion of Roma Children, promoted by the Ministry of Welfare in coop-oration with the Ministry of Education since 2012. The Ministry of Labour and Social Policy has twice appointed her as a member of the Italian National Observatory on Childhood and Adolescence.

Catarina Tomás is currently Assistant Professor in the Lisbon Polytechnic Institute and a researcher at the Interdisciplinary Centre of Social Sciences (CICS.NOVA), Portugal. She was awarded a PhD in Childhood Studies – Sociology of Childhood (2007) with the essay ‘There are many worlds in the world: cosmopolitanism, participation and children’s rights’ (Afrontamento, 2011). Since 2018, she has been one of the coordinators of the thematic section of Sociology of Childhood of the Portuguese Sociological Association (APS). She is the author, co-author and editor of several publications in the fields of sociology of childhood and early childhood education.

Gabriela de Pina Trevisan, PhD in Childhood Studies (University of Minho, Institute of Education, Portugal, 2014), specializes in the sociology of childhood. She is Adjunct Professor at the Higher School of Education of Paula Frassinetti (ESEPF), Portugal, teaching social and educational intervention and community work. She is also a researcher at the Paula Frassinetti Research Centre (CIPAF), and Principal Investigator in research projects on autonomy processes of young people leaving care. She is an external member of the CIEC/University of Minho. Her main research interests are citizenship and children’s rights, childhood public policies, childhood participation, community intervention, and childhood poverty.