Contributors

Tobias Arvemo is an Assistant Professor of Mathematical Statistics at the School of Business, Economics and IT, University West, Sweden. His research interests include regional studies of economic growth and of economic development. He has also applied statistical methods to various other applied fields such as pedagogics and marketing.

David Bartlett is Professorial Lecturer in the Department of Management at the Kogod School of Business, American University in Washington, DC, USA. He previously held faculty positions at the University of Minnesota and Vanderbilt University, and visiting professorships in Taiwan, Armenia and Uzbekistan. He has published and consulted on international corporate strategy, global sustainability, and economic development in emerging markets. His current research focuses on innovation ecosystems and technology cluster formation.

Karin Berg is a PhD student at the Institute of Innovation and Entrepreneurship, Department of Economy and Society, School of Business, Economics and Law, University of Gothenburg, Sweden. In her research she addresses questions related to innovation and university–industry interactions and she is particularly interested in capabilities for innovation, knowledge networks and innovation management. In 2018, she received the ‘Best PhD Candidate Paper Award’ at the 21st Uddevalla Symposium.

Iréne Bernhard is Assistant Professor in Informatics at the School of Business, Economics and IT, University West, Sweden. She holds a PhD in Planning and Decision Analysis with a specialization in urban and regional studies from the Royal Institute of Technology, Stockholm, Sweden. She has published more than 30 journal articles, book chapters and books. Her research focuses on digitalization, e-government, social media, inclusiveness, urban regeneration, work-integrated learning, networking and women’s entrepreneurship.

Urban Gråsjö is an Assistant Professor in Economics at the School of Business, Economics and IT, University West, Sweden. He holds a PhD in economics with a specialization in regional studies from Jönköping International Business School, Jönköping, Sweden. His research focuses on knowledge production, innovation, entrepreneurship and economic development. He has edited books and is the author of more than twenty journal articles and book chapters. His recent publications deal with economic activity in border regions and indicators of economic development.
Diversity, innovation and clusters

Terje Grønning received his PhD in applied sociology from Ritsumeikan University, Kyoto, Japan, and is Professor in Work, Society and Learning at the Department of Education, University of Oslo, Norway. He is the Director of Studies of the master’s degree programme in knowledge development and learning within working life and teaches organizational learning, innovation processes, competence development, and research methodology both at postgraduate and undergraduate levels. He has previously published works focusing on innovation and organizational learning in automobile and biotechnology firms.

Masashi Imase is an Associate Professor at the Faculty of Business Administration, Aichi Toho University, Nagoya City, Japan. He specializes in regional revitalization, NPO management, and corporate management. His philosophy is to fulfil both the roles of ‘research and education’ and ‘practical activities for social contribution’. He is a representative or director of various NPOs and academic societies. He conducts a variety of research and policy planning in central and local government.

Ivar Jonsson is Professor of Innovation and Entrepreneurship, Østfold University College, Norway. He has previously held professorships at: Nord University, Norway, political science; Bifröst University, Iceland, innovation and entrepreneurship. Associate professor (docent) of Human Work Science at Luleå University of Technology, Sweden; Associate professor at the University of Greenland. He has published various articles and books on regional, social and economic development. He is author of The Political Economy of Innovation and Entrepreneurship: From Theories to Practice, Routledge 2016.

Charlie Karlsson is Professor Emeritus of Economics at Jönköping International Business School, Jönköping, Sweden and Professor Emeritus of Industrial Economics at Blekinge Institute of Technology, Karlskrona, Sweden. He is also affiliated to the Institute of Innovation and Entrepreneurship at Gothenburg University, Gothenburg, Sweden. In 2009–2013 he was President of the European Regional Science Association (ERSA).

Nobuyuki Kishida is Professor of Entrepreneurship and Corporate Venturing at NSG Graduate Institute for Entrepreneurial Studies, Japan. He had a successful career in the venture capital industry for fifteen years before achieving an MBA and a Doctor of Commerce degree from Waseda University, Tokyo. As well as participating in entrepreneur education for regional innovations, he is involved in innovation management research for healthcare information networking and international chemical warfare disposal. He is also a Fuji Pharma Valley R&D Forum member in Shizuoka.

Ulrika Lundh Snis is Associate Professor in Informatics with a specialization in work-integrated learning. She has conducted several research projects in collaboration with both industrial and public organizations. Her research focus is on collaboration and learning in relation to digitalization from the perspectives of innovation, management and work practice. She is head of the group Industrial Work-integrated Learning at University West in Sweden and is responsible for the third cycle of PhD education in informatics with a specialization in work-integrated learning.

Maureen McKelvey is Professor of Industrial Management at the Institute of Innovation and Entrepreneurship, School of Business Economics and Law at the University of Gothenburg, Sweden. She has published extensively in journals such as Research Policy and Applied Economics as well as books with Routledge, Oxford University Press, Cambridge University Press, and Edward Elgar Publishing. Winner of the Schumpeter Prize in 1994 and 2017, she was awarded the Swedish Research Council Distinguished Professor Programme. Professor McKelvey has had leading positions in expert groups for various Swedish organizations, the OECD and the EU.

Takashi Maneo is a Professor of the Graduate School of System Design and Management in Keio University, Tokyo, Japan. He received his BS and MS in Mechanical Engineering from the Tokyo Institute of Technology, Tokyo, Japan in 1984 and 1986, respectively. He received his PhD in Mechanical Engineering from the Tokyo Institute of Technology in 1993.

Lilja Mósesdóttir is Professor II at the Faculty of Business, Languages, and Social Sciences, Østfold University College and senior policy advisor at the Association of Social Scientists in Norway. Lilja was a professor in the Department of Business Administration at Bifröst University, Iceland until 2008. After the financial crisis, she was a Member of Parliament and chaired the committee on business and banking. She has published widely on labour market issues, welfare state models and gender from international, national and regional perspectives.

Tomasz Mroczkowski is a Professor of Management at the Kogod School of Business, American University, Washington, DC, USA. He writes about innovation, the management of change, and economic transitions. He is the author of over 100 works published in a variety of countries and languages including articles in such journals as California Management Review, Academy of Management Executive and Journal of Product Innovation Management. He has lectured on innovation at universities in France, Germany, Japan, India and Poland.

Gordon F. Mulligan is Professor Emeritus of Geography and Development at the University of Arizona, USA. He was previously Editor of the Journal of Regional Science and a Fellow of the Regional Science Association International. He has published extensively on regional and urban issues, with special interests in location theory, spatial competition, demography, multipliers, and metropolitan labour markets.

Mutsumi Okuyama is a doctoral student of the Graduate School of System Design and Management, Keio University, Japan. She received a bachelor’s degree from Musashino Art University, Kodaira, Japan, in 1982. She has been CEO of Will Inc., an editorial production company, since 1990. In September 2011, she earned a master’s degree in Policy Studies from Hosei University in Tokyo. She is currently a visiting professor at Shizuoka University and a part-time lecturer at Japan Women’s University.

Anna Karin Olsson is an Assistant Professor in Business Administration at the School of Business, Economics and IT, University West, Sweden. Her recent publications cover issues such as place development, urban regeneration, networking, stakeholder collaboration, cultural heritage, women entrepreneurs and social media.

Kyosuke Sakakura is an Associate Professor of the Faculty of Urban Life Studies, Tokyo City University, Japan. He received his PhD in Media and Governance from Keio University, Tokyo, in 2019. He was an Assistant Professor of Keio University from 2007 to 2014 (Research Institute for Digital Media and Content, Global Security Research Institute). His fields of interests are community design and management based on sociology and urban design. He has been the Board Chairman of the Mitanoie LLP since 2008.

Toshiyuki Yasui is a Guest Professor of the Graduate School of System Design and Management, Keio University, Japan. Following his 35 years of distinguished public service for the Japanese Government, he earned his PhD at the International Christian University, Mitaka, Japan, in 2011. His research topics are innovation design theories and social system methodologies. He has published more than 13 books and 40 academic articles, including articles in Systems Engineering Journal and Systems Research and Behavioural Science. 