Contributors

Loretta Baldassar is Professor in the Discipline Group of Anthropology and Sociology, and Director of the Social Care and Social Ageing Living Lab at The University of Western Australia. She has published extensively on transnational migration, with a particular focus on families, caregiving, and the social use of new technologies. Baldassar is Vice President of the International Sociological Association Migration Research Committee and regional editor for the journal Global Networks. Professor Baldassar was recently named Australia’s Research Field Leader in Human Migration.

Paolo Boccagni is Professor of Sociology, University of Trento, Italy, and PI of ERC HOMInG – The home-migration nexus. His main areas of expertise include transnationalism, migration, diversity, social welfare and homemaking. His recent research focuses on the experience of home among migrants and displaced persons, in relation to local reception initiatives. Relevant publications include books (Migration and the Search for Home [Palgrave, 2017]; Thinking Home on the Move [Emerald, 2020]) and journal articles (Housing Studies [2018], Migration Studies, Sociology and Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies [2020]).

Rafael Bohlen, MA, studied Social Science at Ruhr-University Bochum, Germany and at El Colegio de la Frontera Norte, Mexico. He is doctoral fellow at the Tokyo Foundation for Policy Research and research associate at the chair of Sociology (Organisation, Migration, Participation) at Ruhr-University Bochum. In his PhD thesis, he focuses on organizational resilience of gangs in Central America. Further, his interests include international development, conflict and forced migration.

Jørgen Carling is Research Professor of Migration and Transnationalism Studies at the Peace Research Institute Oslo (PRIO), and Co-Director of the PRIO Migration Centre. His research spans global migration, immobility and transnationalism and seeks to explain how migration arises, and how it affects societies, families and individuals. He combines a background in Human Geography with perspectives from other disciplines and uses both statistical and ethnographic methods. Beyond his thematic specialisms, he has an interest in academic writing, visualisation and research communication.

Anastasia Christou is Associate Professor of Sociology, Middlesex University, London, UK. Anastasia is a critical interdisciplinary scholar working across the humanities and the social sciences, engaging in empirical field research and extensively theorising from her findings. She has conducted multi-sited, multi-method and comparative ethnographic research in the US, UK, Denmark, Germany, Greece, Cyprus, France, Iceland and Switzerland. She has widely published this research, contributed to a number of book volumes and journal special issues and writes poetry which recently has been published by the Feminist Review.

Francis L. Collins is Professor of Geography and Director of the National Institute of Demographic and Economic Analysis at the University of Waikato (Aotearoa New Zealand). His research explores the experience and regulation of international migration, migrant aspirations and desires, international student mobilities, and labour migration and marginalisation. Francis is the author of Global Asian City: Migration, Desire and the Politics of Encounter in 21st Century Seoul (Wiley, 2018) and co-editor of Intersections of Inequality, Migration and Diversification (Palgrave, 2020, with R. Simon-Kumar and W. Friesen).

Marta Bivand Erdal is Research Professor in Migration Studies at the Peace Research Institute Oslo (PRIO) and Co-Director of the PRIO Migration Centre. As a Human Geographer she is interested in the causes and consequences of migration and transnationalism in both emigration and immigration contexts. Her research spans different categories of migrants, including refugees, labour migrants and return migrants, and includes the perspectives of migrants, non-migrant populations, as well as of state and non-state actors. She has published extensively in migration studies and engages regularly with governmental and non-governmental stakeholders.

Michele Ford is Professor of Southeast Asian Studies and the Director of the Sydney Southeast Asia Centre at the University of Sydney, Australia. Her research interests include social activism, labour internationalism, labour migration, and women and work. Her recent books include Labor and Politics in Indonesia (Cambridge University Press, 2020 with T. Caraway), From Migrant to Worker: Global Unions and Temporary Labor Migration in Asia (Cornell University Press, 2019) and Activists in Transition: Progressive Politics in Democratic Indonesia (Cornell University Press, 2019 with T. Dibley).

Vincent Horn is a postdoctoral researcher at the Institute of Education, Johannes-Gutenberg-University of Mainz, Germany. His fields of interest encompass all aspects related to transnational ageing, transnational family care, migrant care and domestic work, long-term care regimes and older refugees. Amongst his publications are the books Transnational Aging: Current Insights and Future Challenges (Routledge, 2016 with Cornelia Schweppe) and Aging Within Transnational Families: The Case of Older Peruvians (Anthem Press, 2019).
Heather A. Horst is Professor and Director of the Institute for Culture and Society at Western Sydney University, Australia. She researches material culture and the mediation of social relations through digital media and technology, with a regional focus that includes Fiji, Papua New Guinea and Jamaica. Her books include The Moral Economy of Mobile Phones: Pacific Island Perspectives (ANU Press, 2018, edited with Robert Foster), Digital Anthropology (Routledge, 2012, edited with Daniel Miller) and The Cell Phone: An Anthropology of Communication (Berg, 2006, with Daniel Miller).

Shirlena Huang is Associate Professor at the Department of Geography, National University of Singapore. Her research focuses mainly on issues at the intersection of migration, gender and families, with a particular focus on care labour migration and transnational families within the Asia-Pacific region. More recently, she has looked at eldercare issues and international marriages. She also researches in the area of urbanisation and heritage conservation (particularly in Singapore). Her most recent book is the Handbook of Gender in Asia (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2020, co-edited with Kanchana N. Ruwanpura).

Evangeline O. Katigbak lectures at the Department of Geography, University of the Philippines (Diliman) and Department of International Studies, De La Salle University (Manila). Her research focuses on the intersections of transnational migrations and emotional geographies with particular focus on transnational families, translocal moral geographies, Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs) and overseas Filipinos.

Sin Yee Koh is Senior Lecturer in Global Studies at Monash University Malaysia. Her work uses the lens of migration and mobility to understand the circulations of people, capital, and aspirations in and through cities. Her recent books in migration studies include Race, Education, and Citizenship: Mobile Malaysians, British Colonial Legacies, and a Culture of Migration (Palgrave, 2017) and New Chinese Migrations: Mobility, Home, and Inspirations (Routledge, 2018, with Y. W. Chan).

Theodora Lam is Research Fellow at Asia Research Institute, National University of Singapore (NUS). She obtained her PhD in Geography from NUS and her dissertation focused on understanding changing gender subjectivities, the web of care and relationships within the family in the wake of transnational labour migration. Her research interests cover transnational migration, children’s geographies and gender...
Contributors

studies, and she has also published on themes relating to migration and development, citizenship and education.

Maggi W.H. Leung is Professor in International Development Studies at the Department of Geography, Planning and International Development Studies, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands. Her research focuses on the uneven geographies of migration, mobilities and development, internationalisation of education, knowledge mobilities and activism, Chinese migration and transnationalism, migrant investment and engagements in ‘shrinking’ regions in Europe (Horizon 2020 project ‘Welcoming Spaces’) as well as stigmatisation and geographies of social inequities in COVID-19 times. She is one of the editors of Geoforum.

Gracia Liu-Farrer is Professor of Sociology at Graduate School of Asia-Pacific Studies, and Director of Institute of Asian Migrations at Waseda University, Tokyo, Japan. Her research investigates international student and labour mobilities in Asia and Europe, and immigration and immigrants in Japan. Her recent books include Handbook of Asian Migrations (Routledge, 2018, with Brenda S.A Yeoh) and Immigrant Japan: Mobility and Belonging in an Ethno-Nationalist Society (Cornell University Press, 2020).

Valentina Mazzucato is Professor of Globalisation and Development, Maastricht University, The Netherlands and heads the Globalisation, Transnationalism and Development research programme. She is principal investigator of international research projects on transnational families that live between Africa and Europe. She was recently awarded an ERC Consolidator Grant to study the mobility trajectories of transnational youth (www.motravl.com). Her research is characterised by multi-sited research designs and mixed-method approaches combining survey and ethnographic methods and interdisciplinary teamwork.

Arnisson A.C. Ortega is Assistant Professor of Geography at Syracuse University, New York, USA. Born and raised in the Philippines, he emphasises commitment to place and praxis. His main research interests are urban politics, migration, community-engaged work, and critical demography. His current projects focus on counter-mapping, Global South urbanisation, and transnational migration.

Dominic Pasura is Senior Lecturer in Sociology at the University of Glasgow, UK. His research interests include migration, diaspora and transnationalism. Dominic has published widely in peer-reviewed journals and edited books. He is author of African Transnational Diasporas: Fractured Communities and Plural Identities of Zimbabweans in Britain (Palgrave, 2014). He also co-edited the academic volume Migration, Transnationalism and Catholicism: Global Perspectives (Palgrave, 2016, with Marta Bivand Erdal) which explored the intersections of migration, mobilities and transnationalism with the Roman Catholic Church as an institution, community, networks and people.

Anju M. Paul is Associate Professor of Sociology and Public Policy at Yale-NUS College in Singapore. She studies emergent migration patterns to, from, and within Nicola Piper is British Academy Global Professor Fellow at Queen Mary University of London (UK) and Professor of International Migration at the University of Sydney (Australia). A political sociologist by training, her research interests focus primarily on (gendered) global labour mobility, global and regional migration governance, and advocacy politics. She is (co-)chief editor of the international peer-reviewed journal Global Social Policy and co-editor of the book series ‘Asian Migration’ with Routledge.

Ludger Pries holds a Chair for Sociology at Ruhr-University Bochum, Germany. He taught and did research in Brazil, Mexico, Spain and the USA. His main fields of research are sociology of migration in international comparison, transnationalisation, organisations, work and labour regulation. Recent books in English include European and Latin American Social Scientists as Refugees, Emigrés and Return-Migrants (Palgrave, 2019, edited with Pablo Yankelevich) and Refugees, Civil Society and the State: European Experiences and Global Challenges (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2018).

Sergei Shubin is Professor in Human Geography and Director of the Centre for Migration Policy Research, Swansea University, UK. His research interests are in poverty, migrations and inequality, including migration governance, health and mobility, (in)securities, care and temporalities of movement. He has attracted major research funding and led migration-focused projects in Brazil, France, Portugal, Russia and the UK. Apart from academic publications, he has produced exhibitions, short films, and a multi-lingual children’s storybook to provide inter-disciplinary solutions to international migration problems.

Jolynna Sinanan is lecturer in Social and Digital Anthropology at the University of Manchester. Her research focuses on digital media practices in relation to regionally comparative mobilities, family relationships, and work and gender. She has contributed ethnographic studies on Nepal, Trinidad, Australia and Cambodia. Her books include Digital Media Practices in Households (Amsterdam University Press, 2020, with Larissa Hjorth et al.), Social Media in Trinidad (UCL Press, 2017) and Webcam (Polity Press, 2014, with Daniel Miller).

Jacob R. Thomas is currently Research Assistant Professor of Sociology at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. He received his BA in Interdisciplinary Studies in the field of globalisation at UC Berkeley, MA in Social Science at University of Chicago, and PhD in Sociology at UCLA. His areas of specialty are in the sociology of law, international migration and mobility, and social stratification and inequality. His research has appeared in International Migration, Theory and Society, and Southern California Interdisciplinary Law Journal.

Brenda S.A. Yeoh and Francis L. Collins - 9781789904017
Downloaded from Elgar Online at 04/26/2022 06:29:12AM
via free access
Gerasimos Tsourapas is Senior Lecturer in International Relations at the School of Social and Political Sciences, University of Glasgow. His research interests include the politics of migrants, refugees, and diasporas in the Middle East and the broader Global South. His first book, The Politics of Migration in Modern Egypt: Strategies for Regime Survival in Autocracies (Cambridge University Press, 2019), was awarded the 2020 ENMISA Distinguished Book Award by the International Studies Association. His second book, Migration Diplomacy in the Middle East and North Africa: Power, Mobility, and the State, was published in 2021 by Manchester University Press.

Joan van Geel’s PhD and postdoctoral work at Maastricht University centred on young Ghanaians’ mobilities between Ghana and The Netherlands. Her work is published in several international peer-reviewed journals. Van Geel is currently evaluating a pilot for undocumented migrants in Amsterdam involving the Municipality, NGOs, health care services, the police and National Immigration and Naturalisation Service. In this pilot, these parties collaborate for the first time to design new policies focusing on undocumented migrants in The Netherlands.

Johanna Waters is Professor of Human Geography, University College London, UK. She is Co-Director of the Migration Research Unit at UCL. Her research is concerned with educationally motivated transnational migration and its outcomes, with particular focus on children, young people, and families. She has worked on several projects involving international students and has broad interests in the internationalisation of education. Johanna is a Fellow of the Learned Society of Wales, secretary of the Gender and Feminist Geographies research group of the Royal Geographical Society, and visiting Fellow of Kellogg College, Oxford.

Raelene Wilding is Associate Professor of Sociology at La Trobe University, Melbourne, Australia. Her research examines the role of new technologies in the social and relational lives of people from migrant and refugee backgrounds and of older Australians. Her interests include the critical analysis of ageing, care, wellbeing, intimacy, digital media and rural and regional settlement, with a particular focus on Australian society and culture. Her most recent book is Families, Intimacy and Globalization: Floating Ties (Palgrave, 2018).

Matt Withers is a Research Fellow within the Department of Sociology at Macquarie University, Sydney, Australia. His research addresses the developmental implications of temporary labour migration and remittances throughout the Asia-Pacific region, with an emphasis on South Asia and Pacific Island countries. His current research examines the work and care arrangements of transnational migrant households, using the concepts of ‘decent wages’ and ‘decent care’ to frame the need for improved labour governance and gender-equitable policy making in support of sustainable development outcomes.

Biao Xiang is Professor of Social Anthropology at the University of Oxford, UK and Director of Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology in Germany. Xiang’s research addresses various types of migration – internal and international, unskilled and highly skilled, emigration and return migration, and the places and people left behind – in China, India and other parts of Asia. Xiang is the winner of the 2008 Anthony Leeds Prize for his book Global Bodyshopping (Princeton University Press, 2007) and the 2012 William L. Holland Prize for his article ‘Predatory Princes and Princely Peddlers’. His 2000 Chinese book Transcending Boundaries (English translation, Brill, 2005) was reprinted in 2018 as a contemporary classic. His work has been translated into Japanese, French, Korean, Spanish and Italian.

Brenda S.A. Yeoh FBA is Raffles Professor of Social Sciences, National University of Singapore (NUS) and Research Leader, Asian Migration Cluster, at NUS’ Asia Research Institute. Her research interests in Asian migrations span themes including gender, social reproduction and care migration; skilled migration and cosmopolitanism; higher education and international student mobilities; and marriage migrants and cultural politics. Her recent books include Handbook of Asian Migrations (Routledge, 2018 with G. Liu-Farrer) and Student Mobilities and International Education in Asia (Palgrave Macmillan, 2020, with R. Sidhu and K.C. Ho).

Juan Zhang is Senior Lecturer of Social Anthropology at the Department of Anthropology and Archaeology, University of Bristol, UK. Her research interests include transnational mobilities, borders, labour migration, and casinos in Asia. She has published in journals including Environment & Planning D, Environment & Planning A, Gender, Place & Culture, and Mobilities among others. Her recent co-edited book is entitled The Art of Neighbouring: Making Relations Across China’s Borders (Amsterdam University Press, 2017).

Min Zhou, PhD, is the Distinguished Professor of Sociology and Asian American Studies, Walter and Shirley Wang Endowed Chair in US-China Relations and Communications, and Director of the Asia Pacific Center at the University of California, Los Angeles, USA. Her main research areas are in migration and development, urban sociology, ethnic entrepreneurship, and Chinese diasporas, and she has published widely in these areas. She is co-author of The Rise of the New Second Generation (Polity Press, 2016, with Carl L. Bankston III) and editor of Contemporary Chinese Diasporas (Palgrave, 2017).