Contributors

Maria Adele Carrai is a sinologist and political scientist with a strong interest in conceptual history and history of international law. She is a recipient of a three-year Marie Curie Fellowship at the Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies, KU Leuven and a Fellow at Harvard University Asia Center. Her book Sovereignty in China: A Genealogy of a Concept Since 1840 (CUP, 2019) looks at the way Chinese intellectuals, political figures, and diplomats appropriated and articulated the notion of sovereignty in their foreign policy within the new discourse of international law in the period between 1840 and the present. Carrai completed her PhD at the University of Hong Kong, where she was Swire Scholar and a recipient of the Hong Kong Government PhD Fellowship and the Award for Outstanding Research Postgraduate Student for 2015–16. She was a Fellow at Columbia University’s Italian Academy, Princeton-Harvard China and the World Program, European University Institute of Florence, and New York University Law School. She is also an Associate Research Scholar at the Weatherhead East Asian Institute at Columbia University, USA.

Jean-Christophe Defraigne holds an MSc in economic history from the London School of Economics (LSE) and a PhD in economics from the University of Brussels. He is currently Professor of International and European Economics at the Institute for European Studies of Université Saint-Louis Bruxelles and at the Louvain School of Management, UCLouvain. He is also a Research Fellow at the Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies of KU Leuven. He has been Visiting Scholar and Professor at UIBE Beijing (Jing Mao Da Xue) and Zhejiang Da Xue. Recent publications include: Introduction à l’Economie Européenne (Brussels: Ouvertures Economiques De Boeck, 2017); “La suprématie de l’UE en Méditerranée face à la Chine” in Monde Chinois, Nouvelle Asie, 58 (Paris: Eska, 2019); “The economic security dimension in EU–Japan relations” in E. Kirchner and H. Dorussen (eds), EU-Japan Security Cooperation: Challenges and Opportunities (London: Routledge, 2018); “Sustainable growth in China and the EU: Competition or cooperation? An analysis stemming from the globalization of the value chain” in Mario Telò, Chun Ding and Zhan Xiaotong (eds), Deepening the EU–China Partnership.
Jean-François Di Meglio has chaired Asia Centre since 2009. He helped establish the organization in 2005 together with a group of scholars and Asia experts in Paris. Asia Centre is a research and analysis institution now based in Paris, Singapore, Hong Kong, London and Barcelona, with about twenty regular contributors. The half-yearly “Asia Trends” report covers issues ranging from domestic policies to international relations and is widely distributed. Before his tenure at Asia Centre, Di Meglio conducted a dual career. One was in the international banking industry in Toronto, Beijing, Shanghai, Taiwan and Paris, mostly in relation to Asian topics. On the academic front, he has lectured continuously since 1986 in Paris, currently at Sciences Po and Université Paris-Dauphine/PSL. Di Meglio is a regular contributor to French and international media, commenting mostly on China’s monetary policies and macroeconomic issues. He co-edited China and the Global Financial Crisis: A Comparison with Europe (Routledge, 2012) and China’s Energy Security: A Multidimensional Approach (Routledge, 2017). Di Meglio is an alumnus of Paris Ecole Normale Supérieure and Beijing University (Beida).

Duncan Freeman is Research Fellow at the EU-China Research Centre of the EU International Relations and Diplomacy Studies Department at the College of Europe. He has previously taught and carried out research on China’s economic and policy development in addition to EU–China relations at the Brussels Institute of Contemporary China Studies, the Brussels Diplomatic Academy, the Brussels Academy for China and European Studies at the Vrije Universiteit Brussels (VUB). He has a BA in politics and modern history from the University of Manchester, an MSc in Chinese politics from the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, a postgraduate diploma in economic principles from the University of London and a PhD completed at the VUB. Freeman lived and worked in Beijing and Hong Kong for a total of 17 years and is fluent in Chinese. During his time in Hong Kong he was the editor and publisher of several leading publications on the Chinese legal and tax systems.

François Godement is Senior Advisor for Asia to Institut Montaigne, Paris. He is also a non-resident Senior Associate of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in Washington, DC, and an external consultant for the Policy Planning Staff of the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Until December 2018, he was the Director of the European Council on Foreign Relations (ECFR’s) Asia and China Program and a Senior Policy Fellow at ECFR. A long-time professor at France’s National Institute of Oriental Languages and Civilisations and Sciences Po, he created Centre Asie IFRI at the Paris-based Institut Français des Relations Internationales (1985–2005) and, in 2005, Asia Centre. He is a graduate of the Ecole Normale Supérieure de la Rue d’Ulm (Paris), where he majored in history, and was a postgraduate student at Harvard University. In 1995 he co-founded the European committee of the Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia-Pacific (CSCAP), which he co-chaired until 2008. His last published book (with Abigaël Vasselier) is La Chine à nos portes: une stratégie pour l’Europe (Odile Jacob, 2018).

Aaron Halegua is a practising lawyer and consultant, and a Research Fellow at NYU Law School’s US-Asia Law Institute and Center for Labor and Employment Law. He is an expert on labour and employment law, access to justice, grievance mechanisms and dispute resolution, human trafficking, and business and human rights in the US, China and internationally. As an attorney, Halegua has represented dozens of Chinese immigrant workers, and recently assisted over 2,400 exploited Chinese labourers on the island of Saipan in obtaining US$14 million in back pay. He has consulted for the International Labour Organization, Apple, the Ford Foundation, International Labor Rights Forum and other groups on labour rights issues in China, Myanmar, Malaysia, Thailand and Mexico. In 2019, Halegua investigated Chinese infrastructure investments in Southeast Asia as part of the expert Task Force for the Asia Society Policy Institute’s “Navigating the Belt and Road Initiative” project. He is also a research associate at the China, Law and Development project at Oxford University, and a regular participant in the annual human rights dialogue organized by the National Committee on US–China Relations. Halegua’s numerous publications about labour issues in the US and China include the report Who Will Represent China’s Workers? Lawyers, Legal Aid, and the Enforcement of Labor Rights (2016). He is frequently quoted by major media outlets, and has been invited to speak to professional and academic audiences in the US, Europe and Asia. He holds a JD from Harvard Law School and an AB from Brown University. After law school, he was awarded a Skadden Fellowship, and later served as a law clerk for the federal court for the Southern District of New York. He speaks, reads and writes Mandarin Chinese.

Nargis Kassenova is Senior Fellow at the Davis Center for Russian and Eurasian Studies (Harvard University), leading its programme on Central Asia. She is also Associate Professor at the Department of International Relations and Regional Studies of KIMEP University
The Belt and Road Initiative and global governance

(Almaty, Kazakhstan), where she has created two centres: the Central Asian Studies Center (CASC) and the China and Central Asia Studies Center (CCASC). She holds a PhD in international cooperation studies from the Graduate School of International Development, Nagoya University, Japan. Her areas of research include Central Asian politics and security, Eurasian geopolitics, China’s Belt and Road Initiative and governance in Central Asia, and the history of state-making in Central Asia. Kassenova is a member of the advisory group for the EU-Central Asia Monitoring (EUCAM), a member of the Academic Council of the European Neighbourhood Council (ENC), a member of the advisory board for the SenECA (Strengthening and Energizing EU-Central Asia Relations) project, and a member of the advisory board for the Open Society Foundations (OSF) Eurasia Program.

Cheng-Chwee Kuik is an Associate Professor and Head of the Centre for Asian Studies (iKAS), the Institute of Malaysian and International Studies (IKMAS), National University of Malaysia (UKM), and concurrently a non-resident Fellow at the Foreign Policy Institute (FPI), SAIS Johns Hopkins. He is co-founder and co-convener of the East Asian International Relations (EAIR) Caucus, a research platform for exchange, engagement and empowerment among foreign affairs professionals in Malaysia. Previously he was a postdoctoral research associate at the Princeton-Harvard “China and the World” Program (CWP) and a Visiting Research Fellow at Oxford’s Department of Politics and International Relations. Kuik’s research concentrates on weaker states’ foreign and defence policies, regional multilateralism, East Asian security, China–ASEAN relations and Malaysia’s external policy. Current projects include: hedging in international relations; ASEAN states’ responses to the Belt and Road Initiative (with Lee Jones); and the politics of China-related rail projects in Southeast Asia (with David Lampton and Selina Ho). His writings in peer-reviewed journals and edited books include the essay “The essence of hedging,” which was awarded the biennial 2009 Michael Leifer Memorial Prize by the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies. He is a co-editor, with Alice Ba and Sueo Sudo, of Institutionalizing East Asia (Routledge, 2016). Kuik serves on the editorial boards of Contemporary Southeast Asia, Australian Journal of International Affairs, Asian Perspective and Routledge’s “IR Theory and Practice in Asia” book series. He holds an MLitt from the University of St Andrews and a PhD from the Johns Hopkins University’s School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS).

Christer Ljungwall is a China economy specialist. He is currently Vice-President of ENC Center for Global Affairs, and affiliated Professor in Economics at Copenhagen Business School. Ljungwall has held positions over the years as Guest Professor at PKU-HSBC Business School in Shenzhen; Science Counsellor and Head of the Office of Science and Innovation at the Embassy of Sweden in the People’s Republic of China; Senior Country Economist with the Asian Development Bank; and Assistant Professor at the National School of Development, Peking University (through Stockholm School of Economics). Ljungwall is the author of over 35 academic journal articles in English, over 150 reports and five books. He is a regularly invited speaker on Asian and Chinese economic and political affairs, and innovation. He received his PhD in economics from Gothenburg University in 2003.
Contributors

Suresh Nanwani is Professor in Practice at Durham University, School of Government and International Affairs, UK; Honorary Associate Visiting Professor at the Australian National University; and Visiting Professorial Fellow at the University of New South Wales. He is a member of the Practitioners’ Advisory Board at Global Policy, UK, and an Executive Council member of the Society of International Economic Law. He is an Accredited Mediator of the UK’s Centre for Effective Dispute Resolution (CEDR). He has more than 30 years of development work experience in international organizations – including the World Bank, the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), and the Asian Development Bank (ADB) – and was formerly advisor at the ADB and counsel at the EBRD. He has published extensively on international financial institutions, law and development, governance and accountability, and the Belt and Road Initiative.

Thierry Pairault, socioeconomist and sinologist, is an Emeritus Research Director at France’s National Centre of Scientific Research/Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS) and at the Research Centre on Modern and Contemporary China/Centre d’études sur la Chine moderne et contemporaine (CECMC) at the School for Advanced Studies in the Social Sciences/l’École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESS), where he co-organizes and runs two seminars – one on Chinese presence in Africa, the other on “new territorialities” between Africa and Asia. He is also an associate researcher with the France–Japan Foundation of EHESS and a member of the Global Advisory Board of the CA/AC Research Network. He has published numerous books and articles in learned journals on socioeconomic issues related to China. He also manages a website devoted to the description and study of Sino-African relations (in French): https://pairault.fr/sinaf.

Uwe Wissenbach works with the European External Action Service in Brussels. He was awarded a PhD in political science by the University of Duisburg Essen in June 2017, and has been working for over 25 years as an official for the European Union and as a diplomat in China, Korea, Kenya and Nicaragua. He speaks fluent Mandarin. Prior to his diplomatic career he obtained an MSc in European studies from the London School of Economics (1991) and an MA in political science from Mainz University (1992). He is one of the co-authors of the new textbook The European Union and China (Palgrave, 2019), and has published several journal articles, book chapters and working papers. Wissenbach’s monograph Rethinking Governance in Europe and Northeast Asia: Multilateralism and Nationalism in International Society was published in 2019 by Routledge.

Jan Wouters is Full Professor of International Law and International Organizations, Jean Monnet Chair ad personam EU and Global Governance, and founding Director of the Institute for International Law and the Leuven Centre for Global Governance Studies, an interdisciplinary research centre with the status of both a Jean Monnet and KU Leuven Centre of Excellence, at KU Leuven. He is also President of the Council for International Policy of KU Leuven. As Visiting Professor at Sciences Po (Paris), Luiss University (Rome) and the College of Europe (Bruges) he teaches EU external relations law. As Adjunct Professor at Columbia University (SIPA) he teaches on the EU, the US and international human rights. He is a Member of the Royal Academy of Belgium for Sciences and Arts. As Of Counsel with Linklaters he has been working for more than 20 years as an attorney at the Brussels Bar.