

Contributors

Simone Baglioni is Professor of Politics in the Yunus Centre for Social Business and Health at Glasgow Caledonian University, Scotland. His research and teaching focus on issues of civil society and civic engagement, social innovation in social policy, unemployment and working conditions, labour market and migration. He is the coordinator and principal investigator of the EU H2020 project SIRIUS (Skills and Integration of Migrants, Refugees and Asylum Applicants in European Labour Markets).

Verena K. Brändle is a postdoc in the research project ‘The Peoples’ Internet: Market, State and Civil Society in China, Europe, and the United States’ (Carlsberg Foundation) at the Department for Media, Cognition and Communication at the University of Copenhagen. She was a PhD fellow in the cross-faculty project EuroChallenge at the University of Copenhagen and a postdoc in the H2020 project TransSOL. Her research focuses on governance and the political contestation of migration and citizenship expressed both in online and offline spheres with a specific focus on the European context. Previous articles have so far been published in the Journal of Ethnic and Migration Studies, Citizenship Studies and the American Behavioral Scientist.

Manlio Cinalli is Professor of Sociology at the University of Milan and Associate Research Director at CEVIPOF (CNRS – UMR 7048), Sciences Po Paris. He has delivered teaching and research in various leading universities and institutes across Europe and the USA, including Columbia University, the EUI, the University of Oxford, and the Ecole Française de Rome. He has many large grant awards, and has published widely on citizenship and political integration. His research relies on a multidisciplinary approach that combines contentious politics, political behaviour and policy studies.

Olga Eisele is a researcher at Vienna University. Her research interests lie in the broader area of political communication with a focus on media coverage, European integration (especially during crisis) and the relationship of media and politics. She studied at Vienna University, analysing the coverage of the European Parliament in print media. She then joined the TransSOL project as a postdoctoral researcher and is now Principal Investigator of the project ‘Tango on a Tightrope – An Investigation of Media-Politics Dynamics in EU Crisis Management’.

Veronica Federico is Associate Professor at the Department of Legal Sciences of the University of Florence, where she teaches comparative constitutional law. She studied at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales (EHESS) in Paris. Her research interests include fundamental rights, constitutional transitions, African constitutionalism and migration comparative law. She has participated in research projects focusing on the protection of fundamental rights and liberties, solidarity, integration in multicultural societies, and migration.

Maria Grasso is Professor at the Department of Politics, University of Sheffield, UK. She received her doctorate from the University of Oxford (Nuffield College), UK. Her research interests revolve around political sociology and political engagement. She is involved and has participated in a number of research grants on these topics. She is the author of Generations, Political Participation and Social Change in Western Europe (2016) and Street Citizens: Protest Politics and Social Movement Activism in the Age of Globalization (2019, with Marco Giugni).

Maria Kousis is Professor of Sociology (University of Crete) and Director of the University of Crete Research Center for the Humanities, the Social and Education Sciences (UCRC). She was/is coordinator or partner in a number of European Commission or nationally funded research projects including H2020 TransSOL and EURYKA. Her publications centre on social change and environmental movements, as well as on social and solidarity mobilizations in times of crisis.

Christian Lahusen holds a Chair of Sociology at the Department of Social Sciences, University of Siegen, Germany. He studied at the European University Institute (Florence) and obtained his habilitation from the University of Bamberg. His research interests include social theories, political sociology, and the sociology of European societies. He has directed and participated in research projects on topics relating to contentious politics, civil society and social exclusion.

Angelos Loukakis is studying sociology at the University of Crete and is a researcher at the University of Crete Research Center for the Humanities, the Social and Education Sciences. His current research is about the political dimensions of the solidarity initiatives that are active in Greece during hard economic times. His other research interests focus on issues such as mobilization, collective action, protest, and social and environmental movements. Currently, he participates in the EU Horizon 2020 project

EURYKA. He has published on social movements, solidarity mobilisation and Greek economic and refugee crises.

Tom Montgomery is a researcher at Glasgow Caledonian University. His research focuses on issues of labour market policy, solidarity, and social movements. Previously he was the researcher on the Horizon 2020 project TransSOL and is currently researching issues of labour market integration (via the Horizon 2020 project SIRIUS: Skills and Integration of Migrants, Refugees and Asylum Applicants in European Labour Markets) and the gig economy (via the comparative project GIG funded by the Swiss Network for International Studies).

Maria Paschou is a researcher at the Department of Sociology, University of Crete (UoC). She studied at the Department of Political Science and Public Administration of the University of Athens (UoA). She has worked in research projects of the Institute for the Study of Migration and Diaspora (UoA), the University of Vienna and the National Hellenic Research Foundation. Since 2014 she has participated in the FP7 LIVEWHAT, Greek–German GGCrsisi, H2020 TransSol and H2020 EURYKA research projects. Her research focuses on citizens' resilience in times of crisis, transnational solidarity and youth political participation.

Hans-Jörg Trezn is Professor at the Centre for Modern European Studies at the University of Copenhagen and Research Professor at ARENA – Centre for European Studies, University of Oslo. He studied at the European University Institute (Florence) and obtained his habilitation from Humboldt University of Berlin. His main field of interests are the emergence of a European public sphere and of European civil society, European civilisation and identity, migration and ethnic minorities, cultural and political sociology, and social and political theory.