Editors and contributors

EDITORS

Habib Zafarullah taught at the Universities of New England and Sydney (Australia) and Dhaka (Bangladesh). His areas of academic interest are democratic governance, comparative bureaucracy, public policy and administration, and international development, and he has published extensively in these areas. Some of Dr Zafarullah’s (co-)authored and (co-)edited books include: Colonial Bureaucracies (Universal Publishers, 2014), Managing Development in a Globalized World (Routledge, 2012) and International Development Governance (Routledge, 2006). He is currently an adjunct faculty at New England and served as the Chair of the Public Policy Program there and as Professor and Chair in Public Administration at Dhaka. He is the editor of the Journal of Governance, Security & Development.

Ahmed Shafiqul Huque is a Professor in the Department of Political Science at McMaster University, Canada. His research interests are in the areas of governance, public policy and administration, and development. Dr Huque is the co-author/co-editor of several books, including Managing Development in a Globalized World (Routledge, 2012), International Development Governance (Routledge, 2012), The Civil Service in Hong Kong (Hong Kong University Press, 1998), Social Policy in Hong Kong (Edward Elgar Publishing, 1997) and Public Administration in the NICs (Macmillan & St. Martin’s Press, 1996). He has served as the Chair of the Department of Political Science at McMaster University and Associate Head of the Department of Public and Social Administration at the City University of Hong Kong.

CONTRIBUTORS

Syed M. Ahmed is a Professor of Economics and Director of the Bill W. Burgess, Jr. Business Research Center at Cameron University, Lawton, Oklahoma, USA. He is also the Lawton Independent Insurance Agents Endowed Chair in Business. He serves as the editor of Southwest Business & Economics Journal, a peer-reviewed journal. He earned a PhD in Economics from Simon Fraser University, Canada. He has published articles in numerous refereed journals.

Shawkat Alam, PhD, is Professor of Law and Director of International Engagement at Macquarie University, Sydney, Australia. His research focuses on the opportunities and challenges faced by developing economies to achieve sustainable development by examining international and national legal, institutional and policy frameworks. Professor Alam is the author of Sustainable Development and Free Trade (Routledge, 2012) and has co-edited several books, including International Environmental Law and the Global South (Cambridge University Press, 2015).
Edward Anderson is a Senior Lecturer in Economics and International Development at the School of International Development, University of East Anglia, UK. His research interests lie in the areas of globalization, income inequality and foreign aid. He received his PhD from the University of Sussex, UK in 2002.

Veronique Barbelet is a Senior Research Fellow with the Humanitarian Policy Group at the Overseas Development Institute (ODI), London, UK. Veronique has conducted research on refugee livelihoods in protracted displacement, the Jordan Compact, the Rohingya refugee situation in Bangladesh and the Global Compact on Refugees. Previously, she worked at the World Food Programme as a protection policy officer. Veronique holds a PhD in Politics from the University of York (UK).

Justice Nyigmah Bawole is a Professor of Public Administration and Management and the Dean of the University of Ghana Business School, Legon, Accra. He obtained his PhD in Development Policy and Management from the Global Development Institute, University of Manchester, UK. He has over 60 publications and has presented academic papers at a number of international academic conferences. In addition, he has consulted for local and international organizations.

Sosina Bezu is a Senior Researcher at Ryerson University, Canada. She holds a PhD in Economics from the Norwegian University of Life Sciences and specializes in development economics and applied econometrics. She has published in Global Environmental Change, Journal of Development Studies, World Development, Land Policy, Food Policy and Journal of Behavioral and Experimental Economics. Prior to her current position, she held a Senior Researcher position at Chr. Michelsen Institute (Norway).

Lena Brogaard is an Associate Professor in Public Administration and Politics at Roskilde University, Denmark. Her main areas of research are public–private collaboration and contracting out within different policy sectors such as development, eldercare and healthcare. Her research especially focuses on governance, innovation and on how organizational and individual factors influence different types of outcomes in contracting out and partnerships.

Anis Chowdhury is Adjunct Professor of Economics, Western Sydney University and University of New South Wales (Canberra campus), Australia. He served as a senior official at the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UN DESA, New York) and the United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (UN ESCAP, Bangkok). Prior to joining the United Nations, he was Professor of Economics at Western Sydney University. He was founder chief editor of Journal of the Asia Pacific Economy, where he now serves as a co-editor. He has published widely on macroeconomic policies.

Gerard Clarke is Associate Professor in Politics and International Development at Swansea University (UK). He specializes in the study of civil society and civil society organizations in international development. He has undertaken research on the role of civil society organizations in local, national and global contexts and consultancy for multilateral, bilateral and non-governmental organizations. He is the author of Civil Society in the Philippines: Theoretical, Methodological and Policy Debates (Routledge, 2013).

Charles Conteh is a Professor in the Department of Political Science at Brock University, Ontario, Canada. He is also the Director of the Niagara Community Observatory (NCO), a public policy think tank. His research and teaching interests are in the areas of comparative public policy, public management, political economy and governance in developing and industrialized countries.

Subrata S. Dhar is a Senior Education Specialist at the Global Partnership for Education (GPE), Washington, DC, USA, and Country Team Lead for programmes in Armenia, Ethiopia, Nigeria, Rwanda and Sudan. He taught at Dhaka University, Bangladesh and has been a development practitioner for the last 24 years, working on education reform in Asian and African countries. He has PhDs in Education and Political Science from the Universities of New England (Australia) and Hawaii (USA).

Claudia M. Díaz Ríos, PhD, is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Leadership, Higher and Adult Education at the Ontario Institute for Studies on Education at the University of Toronto, Canada, where she specializes in comparative education, education policy, and school change. She has published on the politics of the governance of secondary education and the effects of education policy in Latin America.

Michelle L. Dion, PhD, is a Professor of Political Science and holds the Senator William McMaster Chair in Gender & Methodology at McMaster University, Canada. She has published on the political economy and public opinion of policy reform, particularly in Latin America. Her research has appeared in Comparative Politics, International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Latin American Studies, Latin American Politics and Society, Latin American Research Review, among others.

Tharun Dolla, PhD, is a Research Associate in the Department of Civil Engineering at the Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) Guwahati, India. He holds a Doctorate in Infrastructure Engineering and Management from IIT Guwahati. He has worked on various research assignments and projects, including funding agencies such as the Human Settlement Management Institute, HUDCO, New Delhi. His research interests include infrastructure delivery models, infrastructure sustainability, governance and smart cities. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Institute of Civil Engineers (ICE) UK and Indian Roads Congress.

Shelley Feldman is currently Senior Fellow, Max-Weber-Kolleg für kultur- und sozialwissenschaftliche Studien, Universität Erfurt, Germany, and from 1984 to 2016 was International Professor, Cornell University, USA. Her research focuses on economic and social restructuring and is featured in Feminist Review, Signs: Journal of Women in Culture and Society, Interventions: International Journal of Postcolonial Studies, Economy and Society, Development and Change and numerous other journals and collections. She is currently completing a manuscript on In-situ Displacement: Property Ownership, Rights and Security among Bangladeshi Hindus.

Panom Gunawong is an Assistant Professor in the School of Public Administration, Faculty of Political Science and Public Administration at Chiang Mai University, Thailand. Dr Gunawong holds a PhD in Development Informatics from the University of Manchester, UK. His core areas of research are e-government, social media in public administration, failure analysis, actor–network theory and wicked problems.

Mohammad Hamiduzzaman, PhD, is a Research Fellow at the College of Health, Medicine and Wellbeing, University of Newcastle (Australia). He is currently engaged in two major externally funded projects: Harmony in the Bush: Personalised Model of Dementia and Virtual Dementia-friendly Rural Communities. He has published six book chapters and 31 research articles.

Till Hartmann is a research fellow at the European Research Centre for Anti-Corruption and State-Building and a PhD candidate at the Hertie School in Berlin, Germany. His research focuses on the international anti-corruption regime and its effectiveness. Previously, he worked for three years at the World Bank, focusing mostly on institutional reforms in Latin America with the Inter-American Development Bank, and civil society capacity building with Cencos (NGO) in Mexico.

Carel Hodge obtained her PhD degree from the University of New England, Australia, in 2017. She is a graduate of the University of the West Indies, with a degree in Media and Communication and a Master of Arts Degree in Communication for Social and Behaviour Change. She is a Project Support and Innovation Specialist with the United Nations Office for Project Services, Sustainable Investments in Infrastructure and Innovation (S3I), Innovation Centre.

Farhad Hossain is a Reader in Development Management and Policy at the Global Development Institute, University of Manchester, UK, where he directs the MSc Programme in Human Resource Management (HRM). Farhad holds a PhD in Administrative Science. His research interests include public policy and management, HRM and non-governmental organizations and he has extensively published in these areas. He served as Executive Editor of the International Journal of Public Administration. Currently, he sits on the Executive Board of the Section on International and Comparative Administration (SICA) of the American Society for Public Administration.

Michael Howlett, FRSC, is Burnaby Mountain Professor and Canada Research Chair in the Department of Political Science at Simon Fraser University, Canada. He specializes in resource and environmental policy, policy formulation and policy design. He has published textbooks and articles on Canadian politics and public policy. He is the editor-in-chief of Policy Sciences and co-editor of the Journal of Comparative Policy Analysis, Policy and Society and Policy Design and Practice.
Patamawadee Jongruck is an Assistant Professor in the School of Public Administration, Faculty of Political Science and Public Administration, Chiang Mai University, Thailand. She holds a PhD in Development Policy and Management (Governance) from the University of Manchester, UK. Her research interests cover governance, network governance, decentralization, and illicit drugs control policy.

Lori Keleher is a Professor of Philosophy at New Mexico State University, USA. Her research focus is development ethics, including integral human development ethics, and the capabilities approach. She is the co-editor of the Routledge Handbook of Development Ethics (2018) and Agency and Democracy in Development Ethics (Cambridge University Press, 2019). She is Vice-President of the International Development Ethics Association, a Fellow of the Human Development and Capability Association and on the Executive Team of the Center for Values in International Development, Washington, DC, USA.

M. Adil Khan is an Honorary Professor of Development Practice at the School of Social Sciences, University of Queensland, Brisbane, Australia, and former Chief of Socio-Economic Governance and Management Branch of the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UN DESA), New York. Professor Khan possesses more than 40 years of academic and practical experience in development, participatory governance and public policy and has published extensively in these areas.

Mohammad Tanzimuddin Khan is Professor of International Relations, University of Dhaka, Bangladesh. He has published several articles, book chapters and reviews in different peer-reviewed journals and edited volumes. He has also authored two monographs (one solo and the other jointly). His recent co-edited volume, Neoliberal Development in Bangladesh: People on the Margins (The University Press, 2020), has been widely acclaimed. His teaching and research interests include international political economy, political ecology, development, democracy and governance.

Gabriele Koehler is a development economist and is interested in the sustainable development agenda and the role of the state; the discourse around human security and human rights; and the interface of social protection with broader social and economic policies, notably employment and decent work, international trade and investment policies. Her publications focus on political economy and policy issues. Her regional specialization is Asia, notably South Asia and Southeast Asia.

Stefan Kühner is an Associate Professor in the Department of Sociology and Social Policy and Fellow of the Centre for Social Policy and Social Change at Lingnan University, Hong Kong. His research interests centre on comparative and global social policy, with particular emphasis on poverty alleviation strategies, child and youth well-being, and the policies and politics of social development.

Anthony Sumnaya Kumasey is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Professional Studies, Accra, Ghana, and Honorary Fellow at the Global Development Institute, University of Manchester, UK, where he obtained his PhD. His research interests are in ethics and leadership, public administration and policy, and organizational behaviour. Anthony has published in top-tier journals, including International Review of Administrative Sciences. He is a regular reviewer for a number of top-rated international journals.
Boeing Laishram, PhD, is a Professor of Infrastructure Engineering and Management in the Department of Civil Engineering, Indian Institute of Technology Guwahati. He has been associated with both the execution and financial structuring of infrastructure projects from his experience working with both construction organizations and investment banks in India. His areas of research interests include public–private partnerships, public procurement, sustainable development, building information modelling and smart cities, and project planning and control.

Lutfun Nahar Lata, PhD, is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow in the Social Solutions research group within the University of Queensland (UQ) Institute for Social Science Research (ISSR). She is a mixed-methods researcher with extensive experience conducting and publishing qualitative, quantitative and digital research and working with multidisciplinary teams that include stakeholders from academia, industry and local and central governments. As part of her PhD and post PhD research, she has developed an effective research program into the key social policy topics of poverty governance, urban marginality, and housing-based disadvantage. Her current research interests include housing and homelessness, poverty and inequality, work and employment, gender, governance, social justice and policy research in urban development.

Laurids S. Lauridsen is Professor Emeritus in International Development Studies at the Department of Social Sciences and Business, Roskilde University, Denmark. For decades he has worked and published on global transformation processes and developmental governance in the Global South. He has specialized in late industrialization and strategic industrial policy – with a special focus on politico-institutional and political economy aspects of industrial upgrading in Taiwan and Thailand.

Benjamin J. Lough is a Professor at the School of Social Work and Director of Social Innovation at the Gies College of Business, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, USA. He also holds positions as Senior Research Associate with the Center for Social Development in Africa, University of Johannesburg, South Africa, and Faculty Director of International Service at the Center for Social Development, Washington University in St. Louis, USA.

Tony Lynch is an Adjunct Senior Lecturer at the University of New England in Australia where he taught environmental ethics and politics for three decades. His research interests centre on questions of liberal and environmental politics, the philosophy of economics and moral psychology. Tony has published three co-authored books (The Political Ecologist, Routledge, 2000; The Morality of Money, Palgrave Macmillan, 2008; and The Rise of Right-Populism, Springer, 2019), 12 book chapters and nearly 50 journal articles.

James Kwame Mensah is Lecturer at the University of Ghana Business School, Accra and a Fellow at the Penn Institute for Urban Research, University of Pennsylvania, USA. He holds a PhD in Development Administration and his research focuses on public sector management, local economic development, and urban informality. His publications have appeared in top-tier journals, he has consulted for several organizations and has been involved in the development of government policies in Ghana.

Amanda Gray Meral is a Research Fellow for the Humanitarian Policy Group at the Overseas Development Institute (ODI), London, UK. Her research covers refugee protection, refugee economies and work, inclusion and urban humanitarian response. Prior to joining ODI she worked for the UN High Commissioner for Refugees and the International Rescue Committee. She is a qualified lawyer and holds degrees from Queen’s University Belfast and University of Essex, UK.

Ka Ho Mok is the Vice-President and concurrently Lam Man Tsan Chair Professor in Comparative Policy at Lingnan University, Hong Kong. He has published extensively in the fields of comparative education policy, comparative development and policy studies, and social development in contemporary China and East Asia. He is the founding editor-in-chief of the Journal of Asian Public Policy and Asian Education and Development Studies.

Mehnaaz Momen teaches in the Department of Social Sciences at Texas A&M International University in Laredo, Texas, USA. Previously, she worked at a non-profit organization in Bangladesh and completed her higher education in Halifax, Canada and Cleveland, Ohio, USA. She is the author of The Paradox of Citizenship in American Politics: Ideals and Reality (Palgrave Macmillan, 2017) and Political Satire, Postmodern Reality, and the Trump Presidency: Who Are We Laughing At? (Lexington Books, 2019).

Janet Momsen retired from the University of California, Davis, USA as an Emerita Professor of Geography in 2008. She is now based in England but has also worked in Brazil. She was a trustee of the International NGO Training and Research Centre based in Oxford for six years. Professor Momsen has written and edited 18 books and edits a series of 35 books on International Studies of Women and Place (Routledge).

Tamara Nair is Research Fellow at the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies (RSIS), Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. Her current research focuses on issues of power in development, human security and the Women, Peace and Security (WPS) agenda in Southeast Asia. She has published in development studies journals writing on marginalized communities and sustainable development, issues of gender, and power and subject creation.

Jan Nederveen Pieterse is Suzanne and Duncan Mellichamp Distinguished Professor of Global Studies and Sociology at the University of California Santa Barbara, USA. He specializes in globalization, development studies and global political economy. He was previously at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, USA; International Institute of Social Studies, The Hague and University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands; and the University of Cape Coast, Ghana. He is the author of many articles and books. Recent books are Connectivity and Global Studies (Palgrave Macmillan, 2020), Covid-19 and Governance: Crisis Reveals (co-edited, Routledge 2021), Globalization and Culture: Global Mélange (Rowman & Littlefield, 2019, 4th edition) and Multipolar Globalization (Routledge, 2018).

Daniel Neff, PhD, works as a Senior Technical Advisor at the Federal Institute for Vocational Education and Training in Bonn, Germany. He completed his degree and PhD at the University of Manchester, UK and worked as a post-doc at the GIGA Institute of Asian Studies in Hamburg, Germany. His research has focused on India for many years.

Thomas Pogge obtained his PhD from Harvard University and is currently Leitner Professor of Philosophy and International Affairs and founding Director of the Global Justice Program at Yale, USA. He co-founded Academics Stand Against Poverty, an international network aiming to enhance the impact of scholars, teachers and students on global poverty, and Incentives for Global Health, a team effort toward creating new incentives that would improve access to advanced medicines worldwide.
Mathieu J.P. Poirier, PhD, is an Assistant Professor of Social Epidemiology at York University, Canada, a member of the World Health Organization Collaborating Centre on the Global Governance of Antimicrobial Resistance, and an Investigator with the Global Strategy Lab. His research ranges from evaluating international law using a global legal epidemiology approach to developing health equity metrics and generating policy-relevant research to address socially and politically determined inequities in health.

Fahimul Quadir is currently the Dean and Vice-Provost of Graduate Studies and Professor of Global Development Studies at Queen’s University, Canada. He served as Interim Dean of Graduate Studies at York University, Canada. The recipient of many notable awards and fellowships, including Fulbright and Killam, Dr Quadir has held academic positions at several other universities in the USA, Canada and Bangladesh and published extensively on civil society, democracy, development and South–South cooperation.

Jon S.T. Quah is a retired Professor of Political Science at the National University of Singapore and an anti-corruption consultant based in Singapore. He has conducted research on corruption in Asian countries since 1977 and his recent books include Combating Asian Corruption: Enhancing the Effectiveness of Anti-Corruption Agencies (University of Maryland School of Law, 2017); Hunting the Corrupt ‘Tigers’ and ‘Flies’ in China (University of Maryland School of Law, 2015); Minimizing Corruption in China (University of Maryland School of Law, 2013); Different Paths to Curbing Corruption (Emerald, 2013); and Curbing Corruption in Asian Countries: An Impossible Dream (Emerald, 2011, 2013).

M.G. Quibria is Professor of Economics at Morgan State University (USA). Previously, he worked at the Asian Development Bank (Manila) and the Asian Development Bank Institute (Tokyo). His research interests include aid effectiveness, governance, international migration and remittances, the economics of multiple shocks, poverty and inequality, and microcredit. He has authored/edited several scholarly books, the most recent being Bangladesh’s Road to Long-term Economic Prosperity (Palgrave Macmillan, 2019) and has published numerous articles in leading economics and development journals. He did his B.A. and M.A. in Economics from the University of Dhaka, M.A. and Ph.D. in Economics from Princeton University, and his Post-Doctoral Studies in Economics from Nuffield College, the University of Oxford.

Mohammad Mizanur Rahman is an independent analyst of governance and public policies. His principal areas of academic interest include development aid and its political economy, developmental state, public administration, and public policy making. He holds a PhD in political science and has published several scholarly articles and book chapters, including Development Agenda and Donor Influence in South Asia: Bangladesh’s Experiences in the PRSP Regime (Routledge, 2018).

Kidjie Saguin is a PhD candidate at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, National University of Singapore and an International Fox Fellow at the Yale MacMillan Center, Yale University, USA. His research interests are comparative public policy, social policy and governance, with an empirical focus on emerging economies. His scholarly works appeared in World Development, International Review of Administrative Sciences and Policy Studies, among other journals.

Dietrich Schmidt-Vogt is an Honorary Professor at the Forestry Institute of Freiburg University, Germany. Previous affiliations were with University of Central Asia, Tajikistan;
Kunming Institute of Botany of the Chinese Academy of Sciences in China; Asian Institute of Technology in Thailand; and South Asia Institute of Heidelberg University, Germany. He is a geographer with a special interest in land use and environmental management and has 40 years of research experience in Asia.

Manoj K. Shrestha is an Associate Professor in the Department of Politics and Philosophy at the University of Idaho, USA. His research focuses on networks and network effectiveness in the governance and management of local public goods, economic development and water resources. He has published in leading journals such as Journal of Public Administration Research and Theory, Public Administration Review, Public Performance & Management Review and International Journal of Public Administration.

Noore Alam Siddiquee is Associate Professor and Teaching Program Director, College of Business, Government and Law at Flinders University (Australia). He has published two books, 17 book chapters and 60 papers in referred journals. His most recent book is Public Management and Governance in Malaysia: Trends and Transformation (Routledge, 2013). His current research interests include managing ethics and integrity, performance management, digital governance and service delivery in developing countries.

Nowrin Tabassum is a Sessional Instructor in the Department of Political Science, McMaster University, Canada. She received her PhD in International Relations in 2019 from the same university. Her PhD thesis is currently under contract with Routledge, with publication tentatively scheduled for 2021. She also worked as a faculty of the Department of International Relations, Jahangirnagar University, Bangladesh.

Eva Terberger (retired August 2019) was Professor of Development Finance at the University of Mannheim, Germany. During 2008–19, she took academic leave of absence to head the independent Financial Cooperation (FC) Evaluation Department at KfW Development Bank. In that capacity, she oversaw all ex-post evaluations of development projects that were implemented via the bank. Eva has followed the advancement of microfinance for over 30 years, in theory and practice.

Rebecca Tiessen is a Professor and the Deputy Director at the School of International Development and Global Studies at the University of Ottawa, Canada. Her current research project (with co-Principal Investigator, Dr Benjamin Lough) is funded by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada (SSHRC) and focuses on gender equality and women’s empowerment and the role and impact of international volunteers as transnational actors.

George F. Tomossy is a Senior Lecturer at the Macquarie Law School and Barrister and Solicitor of the Law Society of Ontario (Canada). Recipient of a Vice-Chancellor’s Award for Programs that Enhance Learning at Macquarie University, he has co-edited several books, including Revival: Human Experimentation and Research (Routledge, 2003), Globalisation and Health (Springer, 2006) and three volumes on Aging (Springer, 2001). He is committed to strategic research and internationalization initiatives for capacity building in Bangladesh and Indonesia.

Giel Ton is Research Fellow at the Institute of Development Studies (IDS) and Director of the Centre for Development Impact (CDI), UK. He specializes in the design of mixed-methods impact evaluations in agricultural value chains and private-sector development. He has published widely about the methodological challenges of impact evaluation of development interventions. Next to this methodological interest, he has 25 years of experience in supporting economic farmer organizations in markets.

Jorge Tovar is an Associate Professor in the Economics Department at Los Andes University in Bogota (Colombia). He holds a PhD in Economics from the University of California, Berkeley, USA. His current research covers the intersection of industrial organization and international trade with a particular interest in sports and household economics. His publications on the latter include work on household savings, and time use and the gender gap.

Mark Turner is Honorary Professor at UNSW Canberra, Australia and Emeritus Professor at the University of Canberra, where he was previously Professor of Development Policy and Management. He has undertaken research and consultancy in over 20 countries of the Asia-Pacific on public management, policy and politics over a period of 40 years. He has published extensively on issues in democracy, governance and development.

Adalbert Winkler is Professor for International and Development Finance at the Frankfurt School of Finance & Management, Germany. Microfinance, development finance and growth, macroeconomics and monetary policy are at the centre of his teaching and publication activities. Before joining Frankfurt School, Adalbert pursued a career in development finance (IPC GmbH) and central banking (European Central Bank, Deutsche Bundesbank).

Raúl Zambrano is an independent researcher and an international development expert in ICT for development, digital government and democratic governance. He is currently working on artificial intelligence and other emerging technologies and their impact on human development in the Global South. He worked for the United Nations Development Programme for over 21 years, previously being in academia in the United States. He holds degrees in sociology and economics and has published extensively.