Contributors

John Akokpari is Director of the Institute for Democracy, Citizenship and Public Policy in Africa (IDCPPA) at the University of Cape Town, South Africa. He holds a doctorate from Dalhousie University, Canada. He has researched and published articles in several international journals. He has also contributed chapters to a number of books on a wide variety of topics on African politics and development, including civil society, democratization, globalization, migration and Africa’s international relations.

Lorenzo Angelini works as Policy Officer for the European Peacebuilding Liaison Office (EPLO), the civil society platform of European NGOs and think tanks committed to peacebuilding and the prevention of violent conflict. He coordinates EPLO’s work on peace, development and security, on EU-Africa relations and on the linkages between climate change and conflict. Prior to joining EPLO, he worked on the EU’s external action as a Research Fellow for the FRS – FNRS at the Université libre de Bruxelles (ULB – REPI).

San Bilal is a Senior Executive and the Head of the Trade, Investment and Finance Programme at the European Centre for Development Policy Management (ECDPM) in Maastricht (NL) and in Brussels (BE), where he is based. With a background in economics and international relations, his activities focus on EU-Africa economic relations, structural transformation and integration dynamics in Africa, financing for development (blended finance, DFIs and the EIP), and trade and development (notably EPAs and aid for trade).

Thilo Bodenstein is Associate Professor at the School of Public Policy of the Central European University in Vienna. His research interests are development policy, European public policy and comparative political science. He received his doctorate at the University of Konstanz. Before coming to Budapest, he held positions as Senior Researcher at the Centre for Development Research in Bonn, the Jean Monnet Centre of the Free University of Berlin and as Visiting Researcher at the Centre for European Studies at Harvard University.

Maurizio Carbone is Professor of International Relations and Development and Jean Monnet Professor of EU External Policies at the University of Glasgow. His research focuses on the EU’s relations with the developing world, including foreign aid as well as other development-related policies, and more generally the politics of international cooperation.

Gustavo De Santis is Professor of Demography at the DiSIA (Dip. di Statistica, Informatica e Applicazioni), University of Florence, he is Chief Editor of the www.niussp.org website, and a member of the International Advisory Board of IPUMS (https://international.ipums.org/international/advisory_board.shtml). He has published extensively on various research topics, ranging from migration to population ageing, pension systems and mortality, and has participated in several national and international research projects. He is currently responsible for the Italian Research Unit of the CREW project (https://crew-more-years-better-lives.org/).

Valeria Fargion holds a Jean Monnet Chair on Politics of European Integration at the School of Political Science, University of Florence, where she also served as Head of International Relations and Coordinator of the European Studies Track in the RISE Master Programme. Previous positions include Editor-in-Chief of Politiche Sociali/Social Policies (2017–19) and Co-Chair of Espanet-Italy (2008–14). She holds a PhD in political science from EUI, and has published extensively on comparative social policy, and recently EU development cooperation with Africa.

Pasquale Ferrara, a career diplomat, is Ambassador of Italy to Algeria, and has held diplomatic positions in Brussels (EU) and Washington. He is Adjunct Professor of Diplomacy and Negotiation at LUISS, and of Processes and Institutions of Political Integration at the Sophia University Institute. He was the Secretary General of the EUI (2011–16) and has published on the political philosophy of the EU; security and democracy; religions and international relations. He is the author of Global Religions and International Relations: A Diplomatic Perspective (2014).

Mamoudou Gazibo is Professor of Political Science at the University of Montreal, Canada. His research focuses on comparative politics with an emphasis on comparative method, democratization, governance, China–Africa relations and African development. He has been a consultant for international organizations including the African Union. In 2010, he chaired the Niger constitution drafting committee and served as special counsellor to the Prime Minister.

Giorgia Giovannetti is VP, International Relations, University of Florence; Visiting Fellow, EUI; member of ‘Consiglio di Reggenza’, Bank of Italy, Florence; Scientific Director for European Report on Development (2008–10); Director of the research centre at the Italian Trade Institute (2005–7); and adviser for multiple European institutions. She holds a PhD in economics from Cambridge University. Previously she was a Lecturer and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge and a Professor at Pompeu Fabra-Barcelona, the Hoover Institution – Stanford, and Torcuato de Tella – Buenos Aires. Her research includes international trade, development economics, global value chains and European economy.

Andrea Goldstein is at the OECD Investment Division as Senior Economist, working on the implications of protectionism and digitalization, as well as on Latin America, Africa and other emerging economies. He was previously Deputy Director at the UNESCAP Subregional Office for East and North-East Asia in Incheon (Seoul) and at the Heiligendamm L’Aquila Process (the G8-G5) Support Unit; and Senior Economist with the OECD Development Centre and OECD Economics Department, the World Bank and the Italian Securities and Exchange Commission.

Bernard Hoekman is Professor and Director, Global Economics at the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies, European University Institute in Florence, Italy where he also serves as the Dean for External Relations. Previous positions include Director of the International Trade Department (2008–13) and Research Manager in the Development Research Group (2001–08) at the World Bank. A CEPR Research Fellow, he holds a PhD in economics from the University of Michigan.

Rahmane Idrissa is a political scientist and historian based at Leiden University’s African Studies Centre. His research focuses on the politics of Islam and democracy in West Africa and processes of state building in sub-Saharan contexts in a historical perspective. He is the author of The Politics of Islam in the Sahel: Between Persuasion and Violence (2017) and The Historical Dictionary of Niger (2020).

Daniela Irrera is Associate Professor of International Relations, University of Catania and Visiting Professor of Political Violence and Terrorism, OSCE Academy in Bishkek. She currently serves as Chair of the ECPR Standing Group on International Relations; member of the ISA Governing Council; President of the European Peace Research Association; Secretary General of the Italian Political Science Association; and Review Editor of the Journal of Contemporary European Studies. She has published extensively on terrorism, organized crime, civil society and humanitarian affairs.

Niels Keijzer is a Senior Researcher based at the German Development Institute/Deutsches Institut für Entwicklungspolitik (DIE), Bonn, Germany. He holds a PhD from Radboud University Nijmegen (the Netherlands) based on a doctoral dissertation on the European Union’s development policy. He also has a Master’s degree in development studies from the same university.
His research and advisory work focuses on European development cooperation, external evaluations, aid and development effectiveness, policy coherence for development and financing for development.

Reuben J. B. Lewis currently lectures at the Department for Peace and Conflict Studies at Fourah Bay College, University of Sierra Leone. He is also a Consultant and Senior Analyst on Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism in West Africa with Elva Community Engagement, a Dutch-based research organization. Prior to that, he was a Policy Leaders Fellow at the European University Institute (EUI) in Florence, Italy. He holds a PhD from the Graduate School for International Development and Cooperation, Hiroshima University, Japan.

Enrico Marvasi is Assistant Professor at the University of Florence, where he teaches International Economics; Research Fellow of the LUISS School of Political Economy and of the Euro-Mediterranean Network for Economic Studies. He was a researcher at the Digital Export Observatory of the Business School of Polytechnic University of Milan and a postdoc Research Fellow at the Polytechnic University of Milan and at the University of Florence. He holds a PhD in International Economics from the University of Rome Tor Vergata. His research interests include international trade, trade policy, global value chains, multinationals and development.

Marco Mayer is Adjunct Professor at LUISS Cybersecurity Master and Former Special Adviser to the Italian Minister for Homeland Security on Cyber-security. He also teaches ‘Cyberspace and International Politics’ in the Cyber Defense MA (Italian Ministry of Defence and University of Modena). He has a 30-year background in International Affairs, based on personal experience and academic activity. His research interests include multitrack diplomacy and human rights, intelligence and security studies, peacekeeping and civilian/military cooperation, global health and international aid. He is a member of the UN Security Council (SCAD) Roster of Experts on Sanctions, and he served in the UN Peacekeeping Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK, 1999/2002).

Dominique Njinkeu is a Cameroon trade and development expert. He is a former Lead Trade Facilitation Specialist at the World Bank and has over 25 years of professional experience, combining policy research and providing advisory support to governments and regional economic communities on trade and investment challenges and opportunities. Among other activities, he supported African and Caribbean regions during the EPA negotiations, and managed and facilitated World Bank support to the negotiations as well as implementation of the WTO Trade Facilitation Agreement and the AfCFTA.
Arrigo Pallotti is Associate Professor of History of Africa at the Department of Political and Social Sciences of the University of Bologna (Forlì Campus) (Italy) and Research Fellow in the Centre for Africa Studies at the University of the Free State (South Africa). He is author of two monographs, co-author of three books and co-editor of three books. He is also author of more than 30 chapters or articles in journals and books in both Italian and English. His research interests focus primarily on democratization in sub-Saharan Africa, the decolonization of Southern Africa and relations between Africa and the European Union.

Ioannis Papageorgiou is Associate Professor in the Political Science Department, Aristotle University, Thessaloniki (Greece) teaching international and European politics. He is a lawyer, with a PhD in regional integration from ULB, plus postgraduate degrees in comparative politics and developmental cooperation. His research interests focus on European political integration, migration and refugee policies, international humanitarian and refugee law. Previous positions include Director of the Greek Refugee Service, and in 2012, Chairman, Council of EU working group on asylum during the Cyprus rotating presidency.

Filippo Santi is a postdoc Research Fellow at the University of Florence and Academic Assistant at the European University Institute. He holds a PhD in development economics from the University of Trento. His research interests include economic development, international migration, the cultural determinants of economic exchanges and social network analysis.

Andrea Stocchiero is Researcher at CeSPI (www.cespi.it) and Policy Officer at FOCSIV (Italian Federation of Christian NGOs), and at the Italian platform of Concord Europe. He is an economist in development economics, focusing on the migration and development nexus and European policies with countries of origin and transit. He represents Concord Italy in the working group on migration of the Italian Cooperation National Council. Recently, he edited Integral Ecology and Migration (2016).

Corrado Tornimbeni is Associate Professor of African History and Institutions at the Department of Political and Social Sciences of the University of Bologna (Italy); he is co-editor of the academic journal afriche e orienti, and former president of the Association for African Studies in Italy. He has published widely on the history and politics of Mozambique, Lusophone Africa and Southern Africa. His current research interests focus on nationalism and international politics in Southern Africa, and on citizenship and democracy in sub-Saharan Africa.
Alessandra Venturini is Full Professor at the University of Turin and former Deputy Director of the Migration Policy Center (MPC-EUI), Florence and of the CARIM project – the first observatory of African migration for the EU Commission which was established at the EUI. She conducted research with: the OECD migration section, the World Bank, the European Commission, IZA, IMISCOE and the CEPR migration programme. She has published extensively on migration causes and effects of sending and destination countries.