Notes on the Contributors

MARIA LAURA ALZUA specializes in labor economics, applied econometrics and policy impact evaluation. She works at CEDLAS in the Universidad Nacional de La Plata, Argentina, and holds a PhD in Economics from Boston University. Her current project involves estimating the effect of conditional cash transfers programs on labor supply and evaluating the effect of the Argentine educational reform on labor market outcomes.

FELIPE BARRERA-OSORIO is Senior Education Economist at the World Bank. He specializes in impact evaluation, education and poverty, with special emphasis on basic education, conditional cash transfers, public–private partnerships and user fees, among others. He worked previously as deputy director of the Colombian think-tank Fedesarrollo. In 2008 he was awarded the Juan Luis Londoño medal, recognition that is given every two years to the most prominent Colombian economist under 40 years of age working on social issues. Barrera received a doctorate degree in economics from the University of Maryland, College Park.

INÉS BUTLER holds a degree in economics from the Universidad Católica Argentina and Masters degree from Universidad Torcuato di Tella. She is currently a researcher at Instituto de Estudios sobre la Realidad Argentina y Latinoamericana (IERAL), a think-tank devoted to policy-oriented economic research. Her areas of expertise are international trade, trade policy and regional integration, productivity, investment and economic development and industrial policies.

DANIEL CHUDNOVSKY passed away in January 2007. A noted economist, Chudnovsky ended his career as a Professor of International Business and Development Economics at the University of San Andrés and Director of the Centro de Investigaciones para la Transformación (CENIT) in Argentina. He previously had served as an economist for the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) in Geneva and as the Director of the Centro de Economía Internacional, in Argentina.
TOM COUPÉ is the Director of the Kyiv School of Economics and Academic Director of the Kyiv Economics Institute. He holds a doctorate in economics from the Free University of Brussels, Belgium.

JOZE DAMIJAN is Professor at the University of Ljubljana and a Fellow at the Institute for Economic Research, Ljubljana and at LICOS, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven. His research focuses on international trade, trade policy, economic geography, exporting, foreign direct investment and firm innovation. He has served as an economic advisor to the government and was Minister for Growth in the government of Slovenia.

ANNA IARA studied economics and geography at the University of Bonn and the Central European University, Budapest, and obtained her PhD in economics from the University of Bonn. Having worked as a research fellow at the Center of European Integration Studies, University of Bonn, and the Vienna Institute of International Economic Studies, she joined the European Commission’s Directorate-General for Economic and Financial Affairs in spring 2009.

ELLA VIKTORIA KALLAI is Chief Economist at Alpha Bank Romania. Previously she was a research fellow in the Economics Institute of the Academy of Science of the Czech Republic, University of Paris and the Center for Integration Studies Bonn. She holds degrees in economics from the University of Paris, Pantheon-Sorbonne, Charles University, Prague, and the State University of New York. Her main research interests are in economic growth theories, labor economics and monetary policies.

OLIVIER LAMOTTE holds a PhD in Economics from University of Paris-I Panthéon-Sorbonne. He is currently Associate Professor at ESG Business School in Paris. His research interests include international trade and foreign direct investments with a particular emphasis on the transition economies.

ANDRÉS LÓPEZ is Director of the Center for Research on Transformation in Buenos Aires, Argentina. He is an Associate Professor at the University of Buenos Aires and Professor of Economics at the University of San Andrés. He earned a doctorate in economics from the University of Buenos Aires.

ROBERT E.B. LUCAS is Professor of Economics at Boston University and a Research Affiliate of the Center for International Studies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.
MIRCEA TEODOR MANIU teaches macroeconomics and international economics at Babes-Bolyai University in Cluj, Romania. He has conducted extensive research concerning Romanian and regional developmental policies, especially concerning the integration process of Romania and Central and Eastern European countries within the EU as well as their exposure to global influences. His most recent research focuses on factor productivity, migration and demo-economics, as well as comparative economic policies.

MARCELA MELÉNDEZ has a PhD in Economics from Yale University, and a BA in Economics from Universidad de los Andes. Her area of expertise is applied microeconomics, and her work focuses on applied industrial organization, competition policy and regulation. She is currently affiliated to Fedesarrollo, the premier policy-oriented think-tank of Colombia, as Associate Researcher.

EUGENIA ORLICKI holds a Master's degree in Economics. Her research focuses on development economics of Argentina.

IRINA ORLOVA is affiliated with the Center for Social and Economic Research in Kyiv, Ukraine.

VITALIY ORYSHCHENKO is a PhD student at the University of Cambridge. He holds an MPhil. and an MA in Economics, and an MSc in Finance. His research interests include microeconometrics, non-parametric econometrics, statistical learning theory and economic globalization.

GABRIEL SANCHEZ holds a degree in Economics from the National University of Cordoba, Argentina, and a PhD in Economics from Columbia University. He currently is president of the Instituto de Estudios sobre la Realidad Argentina y Latinoamericana (IERAL), a think-tank devoted to policy-oriented economic research. He is also a Professor of Economics at the University of CEMA and at New York University’s campus in Buenos Aires. He previously held positions at Pompeu Fabra University in Barcelona and at the International Monetary Fund.

SERDAR SAYAN is Professor of Economics at TOBB University of Economics and Technology in Turkey, where he also serves as the Director of the Graduate School for Social Sciences. He also is an Adjunct Professor at the Ohio State University. He previously taught at Bilkent University and worked as a GDN Visiting Scholar at the International Monetary Fund in Washington,
Global Exchange and Poverty

DC. He sat on the Board of Directors of the Middle East Economic Association in 2004–07 and is currently serving as Executive Secretary of the Association.

ALEXANDRE SKIBA is Assistant Professor of Economics in the Department of Economics and Finance at the University of Wyoming. He earned an undergraduate degree from Rivne State Technical University, Ukraine, and MS and PhD degrees from Purdue University.

JOSÉ DE SOUSA holds a PhD in Economics from University of Paris-I Panthéon-Sorbonne. He is currently Assistant Professor at the University of Rennes 2 and Research Fellow at CREM-CNRS and Centre d’Economie de la Sorbonne. His teaching and research interests cover international trade, economic geography and transition economics. He is laureate of the 2006 Hungarica Prize and of the City of Rennes Medal 2007 for research.

LYN SQUIRE is past President of the Global Development Network. After gaining his PhD from Cambridge University, he spent the majority of his professional career at the World Bank. He has served as Chief Economist of the Middle East and North Africa Vice-Presidency, Director of the Research Department, and Director of the 1990 World Development Report on Poverty.

T.N. SRINIVASAN is Samuel C. Park, Jr. Professor of Economics at Yale University. Formerly a Professor, and later Research Professor, at the Indian Statistical Institute in Delhi, he has taught at numerous universities in the United States. His research interests include international trade, development, agricultural economics and microeconomic theory. He was named Distinguished Fellow of the American Economic Association in 2003 and was awarded the Padma Bhushan, the third-highest civilian award of the government of India.

AYÇA TEKIN-KORU is an Assistant Professor of Economics at Oregon State University. She holds a PhD in economics from Purdue University. She teaches courses in international trade and finance. Her research focuses on international trade with particular emphasis on multinational corporations, regional integration, corruption, migration and development. She also has a newly emerging research agenda on the effects of foreign direct investment on child labor outcomes.